SAT 13:00 The Early Music Show (b017lylz)

The English Concert

Lucie Skeaping presents highlights of a concert given at the year's York Early Music Festival by the English Concert directed by Harry Bicket. Their programme reflects some of Handel's early works as he arrived in London, and includes a cantata and operatic arias sung by soprano Lucy Crowe.

SAT 14:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (b017chyr)

The Jerusalem Quartet

From London's Wigmore Hall, former Radio 3 New Generation Artists the Jerusalem Quartet play one of Mozart's so-called 'Haydn' quartets (dedicated to the older composer who had been such an inspiration to him) and Debussy's only string quartet, now one of the classics of the chamber-music repertoire.

Mozart's 6 'Haydn' quartets are both an affectionate tribute to the composer's teacher and a showcase of all that he had learned from his mentor - 'the fruit of long and arduous work' as Mozart himself explained. Debussy's Quartet (which he called Op.10, despite otherwise never using opus numbers!) was written towards the end of the 19th-century and was initially regarded as phenomenally difficult to play. Both performers and audiences have subsequently taken it to their hearts and it is now one of the most famous of all string quartets.

Presented by Sarah Walker.

Mozart: String Quartet in D minor K421.
Debussy: String Quartet in G minor Op 10.

Jerusalem Quartet.

SAT 15:00 Saturday Classics (b017mv42)

Simon Russell Beale

London

A personal view of classical music from a range of presenters. Today, the last of the 4 programmes presented by Simon Russell Beale as he concludes his series of programmes exploring the music connected to some of the cities he visited in BBC Four's 'Symphony' series. Today's focus is London, and over the two hours Simon plays great music from composers who lived, wrote in and travelled to London. Repertoire includes orchestral music by Elgar and Vaughan Williams, a flute sonata by Mozart, and an anthem by Handel. This programme is part of Radio 3's series of symphony programmes broadcast this month.

SAT 17:00 Jazz Record Requests (b017lym3)

Geoffrey Smith presents a selection of listeners' jazz requests.

SAT 18:00 Opera on 3 (b017lym5)

Tchaikovsky's Eugene Onegin

Tchaikovsky's Eugene Onegin
Presented by Martin Handley

Tchaikovsky's most famous opera is based on a verse-novel by Pushkin. It tells the story of the relationship between Eugene Onegin, a young St. Petersburg man-about-town and the woman who he initially rejects and then realises that he truly loves, Tatiana. Between rejecting her and realising that he's made a terrible mistake he flirts with her sister, who is engaged to his friend, the poet Lensky. A duel ensues in which Lensky is killed. By the end of the opera Onegin is left alone and broken-hearted.

This new production from English National Opera is directed by Deborah Warner and stars the young Norwegian baritone Audun Iversen in the title role. He's joined by the South-African soprano Amanda Echaz (who was such a huge success when she sang Tosca at ENO last year) as Tatiana and English tenor Toby Spence as the doomed poet. ENO's Music Director Edward Gardner conducts.

Eugene Onegin.....Audun Iversen (baritone)

Conductor.....Edward Gardner.

SAT 21:00 Between the Ears (b017lym7)

Horse

'Horse' is a new poem for radio by the Northumbrian poet Katrina Porteous and the composer and electronic music pioneer Peter Zinoviev. It was commissioned by Radio 3 for Between the Ears, its series for innovative feature making, for the first time performed and recorded in front of a live audience, at the Free Thinking Festival in The Sage, Gateshead.

The poem is inspired by a 3,000 year old figure of a horse, cut into the chalk of a hill near Uffington, that leaps across the Oxfordshire landscape. It is scored for two voices, the poet and the actor Steven Hawksby, and two computers, played by Zinoviev, who developed the machine that made Dalek voices possible and the synthesizer used by Pink Floyd on 'Dark Side of the Moon'. He has also worked with Stockhausen and Harrison Birtwistle.

All the sounds used in the music are derived from recordings which Peter Zinoviev made of King Harry Ferry, which crosses the River Fal in Cornwall on huge chains. Katrina Porteous found rhythms and word-sounds in Zinoviev's initial recordings, and he responded to these as he manipulated the recordings, so the music and words grew out of the same source.

'Horse' is a poem of many voices - performed by two. Actor Steve Hawksby shadows the leading voice of Katrina Porteous. There are echoes and chants, electronic and spoken, derived from Northumbrian dialect words associated with farming and metal-working. These suggest an older language buried beneath this one, which at moments emerges out of music into speech then sinks back into music.

The piece connects the horse with its chalk landscape, which is itself a huge natural auditorium, with the sky and stars - especially the constellation we know as the Plough, of which the figure can be seen as a reflection, and its Bronze Age past. The site is associated with the legend of Wayland the Blacksmith, who gives his name to a nearby Neolithic burial cairn. 'Horse' contains the echoes and distant fires of metal-working.

Immediately beside the Uffington Horse is the hill where St George is said to have slaughtered the Dragon. At sunset around the time of the winter solstice, a dramatic winged figure seems to emerge from the ridge of that hill, cutting across the exact spot where the horse is carved. So the piece evokes the metamorphosis of Horse into Dragon and the ambiguity of these two figures.

The poem also chronicles the place of horses in English culture, how and why horses are still so imaginatively important.

Although the poem recalls 3,000 years of human history around the horse, it places this within the much deeper history of the chalk landscape, created millions of years ago beneath the sea. The overall sense of 'Horse' is that these massive creative processes are still at work all around us, and also within us.

John Sergeant

Michael Berkeley's guest is the journalist John Sergeant, who graduated from Magdalen College Oxford in PPE and joined the BBC as a radio reporter in 1970. He subsequently worked as a war reporter in Vietnam, Israel and Northern Ireland and became a political correspondent in 1981. From 1992 to 2000 he was the BBC's Chief Political Correspondent, before a two-year stint at ITN as Political Editor. He has since appeared on TV shows such as 'Have I Got News for You', 'Countdown', QI, and the 2008 series of 'Strictly Come Dancing', on which he proved very popular with the public, if not with the judges. He has recently filmed documentaries such as John Sergeant's Tourist Trail, and Tracks of Empire, in which he explores the origins of Indian Railways.

His music choices have a distinct political slant. They begin in Vienna with Mahler's Fourth Symphony, which gives rise to a discussion about the rise of European anti-semitism. The tensions present in Vienna were replicated in Berlin, where Lotte Lenya recorded Kurt Weill's Alabama Song in 1930, three years before the Nazi rise to power forced Weill and others out of Germany. John Sergeant's next choice is the theme from the US musical 42nd Street, which demonstrates how Americans reacted to the financial crisis following the 1929 Wall Street crash. Bela Bartok's introverted Sixth Quartet was written on the eve of his own departure for America, where unlike Weill, he felt underrated. Meanwhile, the two greatest 20th-century Russian composers (Prokofiev, represented by his opera War and Peace, and Shostakovich - the 8th Quartet) ended up trying to appease the Soviet authorities. John Sergeant's final choice is an extract from John Adams's opera 'Nixon in China', covering the US President's 1972 visit to China.

SUN 17:30 Choir and Organ (b017lz5g)
 Benjamin Britten

Britten's earliest published pieces were for choir and his fascination with music for voices continued throughout his long career, to his very last project. Aled Jones makes his selection from this fascinating and diverse body of choral works, celebrating a composer who put singing at the very centre of his creative life.

SUN 18:30 Words and Music (b017lz5j)
 A Great Exhibition

This Words and Music is a celebration of The Great Exhibition 1851. The backbone of the programme is made up from descriptions of the rooms by Robert Hunt in his Companion to the Official Catalogue.

Scott Handy and Catherine Harvey read extracts from Robert Hunt together with poetry inspired by the exhibits on show. The display of locomotives in the Central Avenue, for example, leads here to William Carlos Williams' 'Overture to a Dance of Locomotives'. Similarly, China was represented by a model of a joss-house, which is depicted in the programme by Wang Wei's 'Toward the Temple of Heaped Fragrance' and Wordsworth's 'In My Mind's Eye a Temple, like a Cloud'.

The music includes Thomas Morley's 'Hard by a Crystal Fountain', Mosolov's 'Iron Foundry' and Bartok's 'Mikrokosmos'.

SUN 19:45 Sunday Feature (b017lz5l)

Three Centuries of the British Mosque

From a crumbling terrace on the West Derby Road in Liverpool, to a modernist steel minaret in Brick Lane, London, Professor Humayun Ansari from Royal Holloway, University of London, tells the story of the British mosque, giving a glimpse into the changing place of Muslims within British society, stretching across a surprising 3 centuries.

Humayun hears stories reaching back to 1887 of eccentric Victorian travellers, with a passion for the language, art and architecture of Islam; of devotional visitors from Africa seeking a place of worship; of immigrants from the sub-continent yearning for the domes and minarets of home, and Arab wealth willing to supply the demand for patronage.

He also debates the controversy over mosque building - often seen as too 'exotic', too large, too tall or just too foreign. Should mosques fit in with the vernacular or reflect something of Islam's Middle-eastern roots? Professor Ansari talks to mosque architect Shahed Saleem about his proposed new mosque in the East End of London - not a dome or minaret in sight.

Despite the debate around purpose-built super mosques, the majority of mosques in the UK are converted buildings - but some are controversial all the same. Humayun meets up with Dan Cruickshank in Spitalfields, London, to discuss the conversion of a Huguenot chapel, also formerly a synagogue, into a mosque. And he looks into the case of the much disputed Camberley Mosque - once a Victorian school.

Wandering the rose gardens of the UK's very first purpose-built mosque, built in 1889 - just off the commuter line in Woking, Surrey - Professor Humayun Ansari poses the question: what makes a mosque a mosque?

SUN 20:30 Drama on 3 (b017lz81)

The Piano Lesson

In August Wilson's Pulitzer Prize-winning play set in Pittsburgh in 1936, an ancient upright piano carved with African faces dominates the parlour of Doaker Charles. Boy Willie and his partner Lymon have come up from the south to sell watermelons. Boy Willie has just got out of prison and he wants to buy the land his ancestors once worked as slaves but his sister is not about to sell the piano.

Creative consultant, Ricardo Khan
 Pianist, Ernie Scott

"The glow accompanying August Wilson's place in contemporary American theatre is fixed." Toni Morrison.

August Wilson (1945-2005) is America's foremost black playwright. 'The Piano Lesson' is the fourth of his cycle of ten plays about the African American experience in the twentieth century. It opened at the Yale Repertory Theatre in 1987 and the 1990 Broadway production won a Pulitzer Prize, a Drama Desk Award and the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for Best Play. The play was inspired by Romare Bearden's painting of the same name. August Wilson saw its scene of a teacher and student as an allegory for how African Americans must learn to negotiate their history.

This radio production was recorded at Tony Award winning Crossroads Theatre, New Brunswick, New Jersey, with the support of August Wilson's widow, and an outstanding cast which includes actors like Stephen Henderson and Anthony Chisholm who worked extensively with August Wilson. Anthony and Stephen were both in the Olivier award winning production of 'Jitney' which took London by storm ten years ago and Stephen and Chris Chalk were both in the Broadway Tony award winning production of August Wilson's 'Fences' starring Denzel Washington in 2010.

First broadcast in November 2011.

SUN 22:30 World Routes (b017lz83)

The Jean Jenkins Archive

Lucy Duran heads to the National Museum of Scotland to explore the archive of pioneering ethnomusicologist Jean Jenkins. Curated by the Keeper of World Cultures Henrietta Lidchi, the NMS has recently opened its Jean Jenkins collection to the public, incorporating her musical instrument collection, diaries, hundreds of field recordings and radio archive. Producer Peter Meanwell.

Jenkins travelled widely throughout Africa and Central Asia between the 1950s and 1980s creating exceptional recordings, and taking detailed notes. She was a key figure in laying the ground for the contemporary world music scene, and as well as a fascinating insight into traditional music from around the world, her archives reveal a larger than life woman, who fled McCarthy, was friends with Haile Selassie and who was meticulous, packing silk handkerchiefs and girdles whenever she travelled.

Bedřich Smetana (1824-1884)

Triumph and Tragedy

Donald Macleod explores the life and work of Bedřich Smetana. These days, his reputation outside his homeland is usually overshadowed by those of Dvorak and Janacek, but Smetana is the composer credited with founding a national style of Czech music. He was many things - a Czech nationalist who grew up speaking German, a prolific teacher, composer, conductor, violinist, pianist, husband and father. Donald Macleod discovers how a family tragedy resulted in a highly personal chamber work and a move to Gothenburg.

MON 22:00 Night Waves (b017m0pn)
Ken Russell, Public Enemies, The Novelists' Peak, The Deep Blue Sea

On tonight's Night Waves Anne McElvoy discusses the life and work of the film director Ken Russell who died last night.

Life is hard for a French intellectual or so it would seem reading "Public Enemies", a defiant exchange of letters between two of France's most successful exports, Goncourt laureate and author of Atomised, Michel Houellebecq and media friendly philosopher, Bernard-Henri Levy.

In the book, which was a bestseller in Europe, the pair decide to swap letters, and they speak not just of themselves, but also of Judaism, sex, Googling oneself, politics, all sprinkled with references to Goethe, Sartre, and other great thinkers. But the one point they keep coming back to is why and how despite their rock star status, the French intelligentsia hates them so much.....

At what age do novelists reach their creative peak - this is the question for literary editor Sarah Crown and novelist Toby Litt. It seems that for every Zadie Smith, who created a big splash with her debut White Teeth, there's a Voltaire, who penned his classic Candide in his mid 60s. But does youth trump experience when it comes to writing novels?

And the director Terence Davies talks about his reworking of Terence Rattigan's play The Deep Blue Sea in film.

All on Night Waves tonight at 10.00pm.

Northern Lights

Eugene Ugorski, Konstantin Lifschitz

Sean Rafferty introduces "Northern Lights" - a series of concerts recorded in the Elmwood Hall at the 49th Belfast Festival at Queen's last month. Today violinist, Eugene Ugorski, and pianist, Konstantin Lifschitz, perform music by Bartok, Grieg and Ravel. Bartok dedicated his two Violin Rhapsodies to great Hungarian violinists: Josef Szigeti and Zoltan Szekely - they both date from 1928 and are based on folk melodies. Grieg composed three violin sonatas, of which he said, "they each represent a period in my development... and they each have brought me great luck." He described the second sonata as nationalistic and it begins with music which resembles a Norwegian dance. Ravel's Tzigane was composed for another Hungarian violinist, Jelly d'Aranyi and Ravel described it as, "a virtuoso piece in the style of a Hungarian rhapsody".

Bela BARTOK: Rhapsody no. 2 Sz.89.
Edvard GRIEG: Violin Sonata no. 2 in G major Op.13.
Maurice RAVEL: Tzigane.

Katie Derham continues Radio 3's month of programmes complementing the BBC4 series "Symphony" - including every note of every Symphony featured in the television series. This week the Afternoon on 3 series reaches the twentieth century and find the Symphony flourishing far from its Austro-German foundations. Today's programme begins with a live concert from BBC Hoddinott Hall, Cardiff: Pascal Rophé conducts the BBC National Orchestra of Wales in music by two of the greatest symphonists of the century, from Finland and Russia: Sibelius and Shostakovich - including both Sibelius's famous Valse triste and his last surviving Symphony, the Seventh, in which he quotes the Valse triste. Sibelius may have completed an Eighth Symphony, but if he did, he seems to have destroyed it. And today Katie follows the Sibelius with the last completed Symphony by another twentieth-century giant of the genre (and who also greatly influenced Shostakovich): Gustav Mahler.

TUE 16:30 In Tune (b017m16s)

Presented by Sean Rafferty

Soprano Ailyn Perez and tenor Piotr Beczala are the Royal Opera House's current Violetta and Alfredo in a revival of La Traviata. They sing live in the studio and talk about performing in Verdi's tragic masterpiece.

Ensemble 360 are the resident ensemble of Music in the Round, concerts presented in an informal and intimate setting and based at Sheffield's Crucible Studio. They are embarking on a UK tour of Janacek's 'Intimate Letters' String Quartet, interspersing the music with extracts from the composers own letters. They perform a sequence of these live in the studio.

Sean also talks to Stephen Roe from Sothebys auction house about the most important musical manuscript sale for years, which features masterpieces such as Schumann's Szenen Aus Goethes Faust and Britten's The Young Persons Guide to the Orchestra.

TUE 19:30 Radio 3 Live in Concert (b017m17k)

Garrick Ohlsson - Handel, Brahms, Liszt, Scriabin

Live from Wigmore Hall in London
Presented by Catherine Bott

Handel's Keyboard Suites may not be so well-known as the keyboard music of JS Bach but they contain characteristically brilliant and inventive music. The earliest of the music performed today, the second of Handel's Suites, is a sparkling and radiant opener to the concert. Such was his talent that Handel, the legendary keyboard player, may even have written down the suite after first improvising it in public.

Another Handel keyboard suite and baroque forms generally provided the inspiration for Brahms's superb masterpiece, the Handel Variations. He was just 28 when he composed the work and dedicated it to Robert Schumann's widow, Clara, whom Brahms loved all his life.

As a teenager, Liszt wanted to enter the priesthood, an obvious expression of his deep religious feeling. First his father blocked his attempt to enter the church and later his confessor also dissuaded him. Liszt found a spiritual channel for his faith by embarking on a hugely successful career as a virtuoso pianist and composer. If evidence were needed of Liszt's devotion to God it certainly can be found in his Benediction de Dieu dans la solitude, a soaring, ecstatic religious meditation.

Alexander Scriabin straddled the late-romantic world of Liszt and Chopin and was influenced by both. However, he developed his own very distinct style of piano writing, a somewhat modernist and very Russian sonority paving the way for other great Russian composers of the twentieth century.

The American pianist GARRICK OHLSSON, winner of the 1970 Chopin International Piano Competition, has established himself as a international concert pianist with a massive repertoire including some 80 concertos. After he saw Rubinstein in concert, he once said, his choice of career was set. "I was blasted into orbit. And that's when I said in my mind...when other little boys say, 'I want to be a fireman,' that's what I want to do."

The Singing Detective

Matthew Sweet and guests discuss Dennis Potter's The Singing Detective. Produced for the BBC by Kenith Trodd and directed by Jon Amiel, the drama revolves around the personal entanglements -real, remembered, and imagined - of a crime writer, Philip Marlow (played by Michael Gambon), who is suffering from acute psoriasis and from the side-effects associated with its treatment. The result is a complex, multi-layered text which weaves together the varied interests and themes of the detective thriller, the hospital drama, the musical and the autobiography.

Matthew Sweet is joined by Kenith Trodd, Bill Paterson (who played the psychiatrist in the series), the critic Anne Karpf and the writer and actor Mark Gatiss to discuss one of television's most celebrated dramas.

Northern Lights

The Danish String Quartet

Sean Rafferty introduces "Northern Lights" - a series of concerts recorded in the Elmwood Hall at the 49th Belfast Festival at Queen's last month. Today the Danish Quartet perform music by Nielsen and Grieg. Nielsen's Fourth and final String Quartet was composed in 1906 and was finally published in 1923, with a dedication to the Copenhagen Quartet. The Quartet was originally subtitled, Piacevolezza, which means agreeable and charming. Grieg himself admitted that there was an autographical element in his only complete string quartet. The opening movement is built on the melody of his song "Spillemaend" which underlies all four movements.

WED 14:00 Afternoon Concert (b017m19y)

Symphony

Episode 19

Katie Derham continues Radio 3's month of programmes complementing the BBC4 series "Symphony" - including every note of every Symphony featured in the television series. This week the Afternoon on 3 series reaches the twentieth century and find the Symphony flourishing far from its Austro-German foundations. Today Katie presents three very contrasting Symphonies from the 1920s: Vaughan Williams's 'war requiem', expiating his experiences during the First World War; the precocious first Symphony written by Dmitri Shostakovich at - incredibly - the age of 18; and one of the most unusual (and shortest) works ever to have been called a Symphony - by Anton Webern.

WED 15:30 Choral Evensong (b017m1b0)

London Oratory

Choral Vespers for the Feast of St Andrew the Apostle, from the Church of the London Oratory.

Organ Prelude: Intonazione octavo tono (Giovanni Gabrieli)

Hymn: Exsultet orbis gaudiis (Victoria)
Antiphon: Cum pervenisset (Plainsong)
Canticle: Magnificat primi toni (Victoria)
Antiphon of Our Lady: Alma Redemptoris mater (Victoria)
Organ Voluntary: Tiento de quinto tono (Francisco Correa de Arauxo)

Celebrant: The Revd Fr. George Bowen

Director of Music: Patrick Russill

Organist: Matthew Martin.

WED 16:30 In Tune (b017m1b2)

The Choir of Clare College Cambridge visit the In Tune studio to perform works by Purcell and Tallis as well as Christmas works by Mendelssohn, Byrd, Ross, Warlock and Gardner. Their director Graham Ross talks to Sean Rafferty along with members of the choir, ahead of their series of Christmas Concerts visiting Cambridge, Northampton and St John's, Smith Square London.

Composer Stephen Schwartz talks to Sean Rafferty as his musical Pippin opens at the Menier Chocolate Factory, London, featuring leads by Harry Hepple, Ian Kelsey, Matt Rawle and Frances Ruffelle.

The pianist Igor Levit performs a Passacaglia by Johann Kaspar Kerll as well as the Chaconne for the Left Hand by Bach, arranged by Brahms, live in the In Tune studio. He will be performing with the English Chamber Orchestra and conductor Paul Watkins at the Cadogan Hall.

Sean Rafferty presents with regular arts news.

WED 19:30 Radio 3 Live in Concert (b017msyj)

Live from the Royal Festival Hall, London

Pintscher, Beethoven

Live from the Royal Festival Hall.

Presented by Martin Handley.

Vladimir Jurowski conducts the LPO in Bruckner's Symphony No 1 and a recent work by Matthias Pintscher. Pianist Lars Vogt joins them in Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto.

'Das kecke Bese!' Anton Bruckner called his First Symphony - 'the saucy little maid'; it is a work of impish charm and bold impetuosity.

Before Beethoven's epic Emperor Concerto comes a veritable sculpture in sound by Matthias Pintscher, one of the most individual and ear-enchanting composers currently at work. He describes his multi-hued, intimate yet broad music as suggesting 'an imaginary theatre'; his powerful towards Osiris raises the curtain on this concert.

Matthias Pintscher: towards Osiris.
Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 5 (Emperor).

Lars Vogt (piano),
London Philharmonic Orchestra,
Vladimir Jurowski (conductor).

WED 20:20 Symphony Question Time (b017msyl)

Sue Perkins and Tom Service unravel everything you ever wanted to know about the symphony, but were too afraid to ask. To end the series, the pair discuss and play extraordinary long-lost extracts of Sibelius's Eighth Symphony, and present your feedback on the thorny question of applause between movements...as well as answering a mixed bag of questions sent in over the course of the series.

Remember you can send in your feedback about anything covered in the series by email to r3symphonyqt@bbc.co.uk; alternatively, you can post your thoughts on the BBC Radio 3's Facebook page (www.facebook.com/bbcradio3), or via Twitter at @BBCRadio3 (hashtag #R3SymphonyQT).

WED 22:00 Night Waves (b017mt5k)

Owen Shears, Bernini, An Artist's Creative Peak, Hamlet

Rana Mitter talks to Owen Shears about the film of his debut novel 'Resistance,' which imagines what would have happened if Germany invaded Britain in World War 2

The sculptor, architect, painter and playwright, Gian Lorenzo Bernini (1598-1680) was one the great artistic geniuses of early modern Italy. More than anyone else he created the Rome that people flock to from all over the world today. And his life was as extraordinary as his work. Franco Mormando whose book 'Bernini - His life and Rome' is just published explains why no-one should visit Rome without knowing Bernini.

When does an artist reach their creative peak, and how indeed can that be judged? This week Night Waves is looking at the ways in which creativity matures in literature, music and painting. Tonight the art critic Richard Cork and the curator Catherine Lampert discuss painting.

The Schaubuhne theatre in Berlin, housed in a converted Bauhaus cinema, has a reputation for political drama under its young and radical director Thomas Ostermeier. And so an Ostermeier production of Hamlet is an event and the production that he is bringing to the Barbican is exactly that, a chance to see a bleak radical reinterpretation of the work. Night Waves finds out if anything is lost in translation.

WED 22:45 The Essay (b00xwjc3)

Listener, They Wore It

Laura Cumming

Five writers were invited to explore the meaning of clothes and accessories in a particular work of art, be it a story, novel, film, painting or song lyric. How does the clothing resonate? What is the tale behind its depiction? Would the writer wear the garment themselves? Suits and dresses, coats and jewels, and even rags, all feature in accounts by a variety of commentators...

Bedrich Smetana (1824-1884)

Being Bohemian

Donald Macleod explores the rebirth of a Czech culture after years of suppression by the Hapsburg Empire. Smetana himself grew up speaking German and struggled with his own Czech librettos. His music is firmly rooted in the politics of the time, and throughout, he was determined to forge a musical identity for his nation - one which found its most popular and enduring voice in his series of tone poems: Ma Vlast.

THU 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (b017mt3r)
Northern Lights

Monica Groop, Rudolf Jansen

Sean Rafferty introduces "Northern Lights" - a series of concerts recorded in the Elmwood Hall at the 49th Belfast Festival at Queen's last month. Today the Finnish mezzo-soprano Monica Groop is joined by pianist Rudolf Jansen to present a recital of song by Mozart, Berg, Liszt, Grieg and Sibelius.

Mozart: Als Luise die Briefe ihres ungetreuen Liebhaber verbrannte; Oiseaux si tous les ans; Der Zauberer.
Alban Berg: Vier Lieder, Op 2.

Liszt: Es war ein König in Thule; S'il est un charmant gazon (Victor Hugo); Die drei Zigeuner (Nikolaus Lenau).

Grieg: 5 Songs by Vilhelm Krag, Op 60.

Sibelius: Våren flyktar hastigt; Den första kyssten; Im Feld ein Mädchen singt; Flickan kom ifrån sin älsklings möte; Var det en dröm.

Katie Derham continues Radio 3's month of programmes complementing the BBC4 series "Symphony" - including every note of every Symphony featured in the television series. This week the Afternoon on 3 series reaches the twentieth century and find the Symphony flourishing far from its Austro-German foundations. Today we reach the 1930s and 1940s: the last gasp of the Germanic Symphony from Kurt Weill; the final Symphony by one of the finest of all French Symphonists, Albert Roussel; a Symphony by a precocious young American, Samuel Barber; and Shostakovich's monumental work composed in besieged Leningrad in 1941, which became a symbol of Russian resistance to Nazi Germany.

THU 16:30 In Tune (b017mt3w)

Presented by Sean Rafferty.

Lutenist David Miller is one of the most respected names in the Early Music world as both a soloist and accompanist. He performs live in the In Tune studio ahead of a solo concert in Oxford.

HK Gruber, nicknamed 'Nali', is the BBC Philharmonic's charismatic Composer/Conductor and he talks to Sean down the line from Manchester about an upcoming concert with the orchestra in which he fulfils both of those roles. Violinist Oliver Charlier is the soloist for Gruber's concerto "Nebelsteinmusik" and he joins the composer to talk about working together.

Live from City Halls Glasgow.

Presented by Mary Ann Kennedy.

The BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra's Associate Guest Conductor Andrew Manze play two powerful works by Sibelius in the first half, followed by Dvorak's 1895 Cello Concerto in the second.

Sibelius celebrated his Finnish heritage in Rakastava, which started life as a choral work on Finnish Poetry in 1893 but was recast in 1911 into its best known orchestral form. In the same year, a turbulent one for Sibelius, comes the brooding Fourth Symphony.

In the second half, BBC Radio 3 New Generation Artist Andreas Brantelid performs Dvorak's Cello Concerto, evoking the proud spirit of his Czech homeland.

The Light in the Darkness

In summer the sun barely sets, bringing long nights of partying and heavy drinking. But in Lapland, as winter closes in, the lights go on, not to be extinguished until the sun finally begins to rise again above the horizon nearly three months later. Some find the seemingly endless darkness forbidding, but others find it comforting, enjoying the way the starry blackness allows their minds to play over thoughts of the infinite...

Programme makers Hannu Karisto from Finland and his Swiss colleague Jean-Claude Kuner were shortlisted last year in the prestigious Prix Italia for their contemplative documentary feature exploring the pleasures and profound pessimism that this ineluctable seasonal flux brings on. In this English language version of the programme first broadcast by Finnish radio, the programme makers travel to the far north of the country in both seasons to catch the spirit of those 'endless days and nights'.

Scorsese, Ashmolean, Kosminsky, Creativity

Anne McElvoy meets with Martin Scorsese to discuss his new film, Hugo, the director's first foray in to the world of 3D. He's so taken with the new technology, if he could go back, he'd give his previous films, such as Taxi Driver and Raging Bull, the same treatment.

When does an artist reach their creative peak, and how indeed can that be judged? This week Night Waves has been looking at the ways in which creativity matures in literature and painting. Tonight, it's music with critic David Hepworth and Radio 3's Tom Service.

As the British Film Institute puts on a season of his work, director Peter Kosminsky considers his television career that has included the controversial docu-dramas The Government Inspector and Shoot To Kill.

And Anne travels to Oxford to visit the newly renovated Ashmolean museum to view ancient Egyptian artefacts which have not been seen for up to half a century.

Cruel Destiny

On 5th September 1874, Smetana wrote to the Chairman of the Board of the Provisional Theatre, where he was employed as chief conductor: "It is my cruel destiny that I may lose my hearing". Six weeks later, he was completely deaf. He immediately set to work on what would become his most famous and popular work, Ma Vlast, a brilliant evocation of the landscape of his native land. The next ten years were desperately difficult. Smetana was unemployed, with financial anxieties, marriage woes, often in pain, constantly depressed. Donald Macleod tells the story of Smetana's final years.

Martin Simpson, Eleanor Bron, Padgett Powell, Ross Raisin

Martin Simpson is one of our greatest guitarists. He performs from his new CD 'Purpose and Grace' live in the studio; and talks about the troubadour tradition and his love of Anglo-American ballads. He is especially influenced by the American songwriter Yip Harburg who composed 'Somewhere Over The Rainbow', as well as Banjo Bill Cornett, who in the 1950s championed traditional-music making as people all around him fell for rock and roll.

Sandeep Parmar talks about the poetry of Hope Mirreles, whose poem Paris has been hailed as a lost modernist masterpiece. Eleanor Bron reads extracts from the poem, which is a journey through one day in post First World War Paris, and was considered by Virginia Woolf as 'obscure, indecent and brilliant'.

There's new fiction from Ross Raisin, a young writer who's considered one of our most promising authors; one of America's most interesting writers Padgett Powell talks about his new book You and I.

Produced by Jennifer Chevalier.

Listener, They Wore It

Alexandra Shulman

Five writers were invited to explore the meaning of clothes and accessories in a particular work of art, be it a story, novel, film, painting or song lyric. How does the clothing resonate? What is the tale behind its depiction? Would the writer wear the garment themselves? Suits and dresses, coats and jewels, and even rags, all feature in accounts by a variety of commentators...

5. Vogue editor Alexandra Shulman recalls the words of Leonard Cohen's song Suzanne, and how they dressed a generation of young women..

Producer Duncan Minshull.

fRoots Critics Poll Results

Mary Ann Kennedy with the results of the fRoots Album of the Year poll 2011, and a studio session with American acoustic duo Cahalen Morrison and Eli West.

The fRoots Critics' Poll for Albums of the Year is one of the most prestigious awards in folk and world music. Andrew Cronshaw reveals the names of the top nominees, and the winner.

Cahalen comes from rural New Mexico, with roots in American old-time music, whilst Eli lives in Seattle and is based more in bluegrass. Both play guitar and banjo, and they came together as a duo only recently - earlier this year their debut album 'The Holy Coming of the Storm' was released to great acclaim.
