SAT 21:45 The Wire (b01blzh)

Zurich

Aidan and Paul have been friends all their lives and now they are in their late thirties. Both were "head bangers" back in the day and both love AC/DC. Paul has been in a wheelchair since a tragic car accident when he was 21. Each year the friends make it a point to watch AC/DC in a European city, this year Paul has decided on Zurich.

They leave Belfast with Paul secreting a copious amount of cannabis on his person. They use Paul's status as a wheelchair user to bunk any queue they are ever in. Paul is a big lad over twenty stone now. This means they get moved to spacious fire-exit areas, get served their drinks first.

At Zurich they are rumbled by the sniffer dog, which signals that Paul has got cannabis. Paul protests that it is a medicinal necessity, and they are released with a caution. The lads reach their opulent hotel; Aidan enquires why the luxury, as they normally stay in a low-budget one, and Paul explains that "you only live once". They head out to the concert where once again Paul gets them the best seats in the house, demanding vehemently that Aidan be afforded the same treatment as his carer and explaining that Aidan empties his catheter bag.

The concert rocks. Angus and co tear it up and the boys are energized by the music. They have the time of their lives, with big doobies, ice-cold beer and burgers. Only after twenty cans do they realize they have been drinking non-alcoholic beer! The lads laugh and reminisce about the good times, and bad times, when finally Paul reveals the reason he has chosen Zurich and asks his best friend a favour that will test their close relationship to the limits ...

Pearse Elliott was born in West Belfast and was nominated for the Irish Film and Television Best New Talent Award for his feature film, Man About Dog. His second feature, The Mighty Celt, starring Robert Carlyle and Gillian Anderson was nominated for Best Script and Best Film at the IFTAs and was a critical success. He also wrote the feature film Shrooms (Capitol Films/Magnolia Pictures) which was released last year.
His tv work includes the acclaimed BBC A Rap at the Door and the BBC 3 series Pulling Moves. Pearse has projects currently in development with Mammoth, Rubicon Films and Treasure
Entertainment and a new theatre play.

James Jolly presents three hours of great music, featuring the best recordings from the archive and the present day. Today with music by Mozart, Arnesu and Finzi.

SUN 12:00 Private Passions (b01blm3p)

Lucy Worsley

Michael Berkeley welcomes the lively TV historian and Chief Curator of Historic Royal Palaces Lucy Worsley. Her popular TV series 'If Walls Could Talk: A History of the Home' found her peering into the forgotten domestic corners of history, finding out how people in past centuries really lived - how they slept, ate, cooked, bathed and disposed of their waste - by recreating the experience. She has also presented 'Elegance and Decadence: The Age of the Regency' for BBC4.

Lucy takes an equally practical, no-nonsense approach to music, and unusually, her choices for 'Private Passions' are nearly all pieces she has played or sung herself. They range from piano works by Erik Satie, Mozart, Bach and Liszt, to Verdi's Requiem (in which she sang as a tenor!); Jerome Kern's 'Long ago', which she performed at a Society of Antiquaries' dinner when she took the injunction to 'sing for her supper' quite literally; and Joseph Winner's Little Brown Jug, in which she has played the tenor sax solo in a big band arrangement.

SUN 13:00 The Early Music Show (b01blm3r)

Freiburg Baroque Orchestra - Bach, Zelenka

Lucie Skeaping introduces highlights of a concert given by the Freiburg Baroque Orchestra directed by Petra Müllejans, given at the Konzerthaus in Freiburg. The bass Johannes Weisser joins them in music by JS Bach and a setting of the Lamentations by Jan Dismas Zelenka. The programme also includes Bach's Double Concerto for oboe and violin in D minor BWV 1060, played by Ann-Kathrin Brüggermann and the orchestra's director, the violinist Petra Müllejans.

SUN 14:00 Sunday Concert (b01blm3t)

Belcea Quartet - Beethoven

Presented by Suzy Klein

The Belcea Quartet plays Beethoven at the Wigmore Hall, including the early Op.18 No.2, Op. 59 No. 2 'Razumovsky' and the great Quartet in C# minor Op. 131. Building on the achievements of his great predecessors, Beethoven assimilated the achievements of Haydn and Mozart in his Op. 18 string quartets before developing the medium's expressive potential in his Op. 59 'Razumovsky' Quartets. The Belcea Quartet ends their concert with the monumental String Quartet in C# minor Op. 131, described by Donald Tovey as the composer's 'most fantastic and revolutionary' work.

Beethoven:

String Quartet in G Op. 18 No. 2
String Quartet in E minor Op. 59 No. 2 'Razumovsky'
String Quartet in C# minor Op. 131

The Belcea Quartet.

Singing Life After Boyhood

It's a fate which stares every boy singer in the face: the breaking voice and inevitable end of a treble career. But how best to lay the foundation for singing as an adult? Aled Jones shares his own experiences with Graham Lough, son of the most celebrated treble of the twentieth century. Ernest Lough's record sales ran into the millions, and his selling power was so great that HMV was quick to renew its relationship with him as a baritone singer. Tonight, a chance to hear rare recordings from this second career as well as some of the much-treasured discs he made as a treble in the Choir at Temple Church in the City of London.

Plus, a round-up of choral talent from Norway and Finland including music from the Nidaros Cathedral Choir, established in the city of Trondheim more than 900 years ago.

SUN 18:30 Words and Music (b01blmcr)

Different Trains

In 1830, the first railway passenger service in the world was established between Manchester and Liverpool - ever since railways have exerted their special fascination, not least with writers and musicians. They can evoke adventure and romance, excitement, power and fear. Dickens, for example, had a strong dislike of trains, but couldn't ignore them in his fiction.

The path of a train can mirror a journey through life. The 19th century Parisian railway provided a powerful backdrop to Emile Zola's exploration of the darker side of human nature in La Bête Humaine; while for the American novelist Nathaniel Hawthorne, the train was the means of carriage for a soul's symbolic journey towards spiritual fulfilment. Arthur Honegger famously used an orchestra to mimic the sound of a great continental steam train, while Rossini - who detested the railway - took a certain pleasure in creating a musical depiction of a hypothetical railway accident. Trains mean rendezvous, departure, loss and transportation. For some, the incessant drive of a great steam engine is potent expression of a mechanised industrialized world. For one poet, the clackety-clack of metal wheels on metal rails evokes something primeval.

Jonathan Pryce and Eleanor Bron read poems and texts celebrating our relationship with trains by Emile Zola, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Charles Dickens, Wilfred Owen, Thomas Hardy, Philip Larkin, Leo Tolstoy and Primo Levi; alongside archive recordings from TS Eliot and John Laurie. Featured "Train" music includes musical thoughts from Arthur Honegger, Percy Grainger, Gioachino Rossini, Heitor Villa-Lobos, Mikhail Glinka, Charles Ives, Benjamin Britten, Rued Langgaard, Simon Bainbridge, Meade "Lux" Lewis and Elvis Presley.

SUN 19:45 Sunday Feature (b01blmct)

Machines Like Us

Paul Bennun explores the latest advances that allow computers to understand and increasingly imitate us. Paul examines our relationship with machines and asks how it is re-defining what it means to be human. If computers can simulate our expressions and emotions in order to better teach us about ourselves, what does that imply about our status in the world? Meeting computer scientists, sociologists, technology writers, and a man who chose to give up his technology, Paul finds out whether computers are changing the way we think, the way we interact with each other, and even dictating the way the world will look. He discovers the enormous potential of affective computing; GPS that can read our emotions and take control of our cars, and computer companions that will accompany us through old age, perhaps replacing a traditionally human role. Paul will also question his own strong relationship with the devices in his life. Technology and humanity have a symbiotic relationship but some are concerned that the lines between user and interface are becoming ever more blurred: "I think that we're at the moment of opportunity to sense that something has gone amiss and it's time to become wiser in our use of these technologies" (Sherry Turkle, sociologist). In Machines Like Us we look at the areas where technology is understanding and communicating with us better than ever before, and will ask if our dependence on such technology is fundamentally reducing what it means to be human. "We are co-dependent, we are cyborgian already. Every species cannot live without some technology around it and so we're going to continue in that same process of changing ourselves to become ever more dependent on the technology that surrounds us" (Kevin Kelly, co-founder of Wired).

In the programme we will hear from:

Kevin Warwick, Peter Robinson, Sherry Turkle, Eric Brende, Nicholas Carr, Yorick Wilks, Jonathan Sawday, Norihiro Hagita, Kevin Kelly.

Producer: Gemma Newby.

SUN 20:30 Drama on 3 (b01blmctv)

My Generation

My Generation is a family saga covering four decades. Set in the counter culture, it offers a window onto the drug- and pop-fuelled protest movement. A story of flawed attempts to make a better world.

In a time of job cuts, rising unemployment and the re-structuring of the benefits system, this play examines the effectiveness of the protest movement to change lives through the stories of four characters from one family over four decades. Mum Cath - 1970's, 80's for Dad - Mick, 90's for son Ben, and 00's - daughter Emma.

The play opens against the backdrop of the Ripper murders. This radicalised feminism in Leeds at the time. Mick's involvement in the Miners' Strike holds the arc of the second part and in the third, son Ben turns his back on the politics of his parents, escaping into the rave scene. Daughter Emma's story brings us up to date with the current occupy movement.

Alice Nutter's own direct experience of the protest movement over three decades gives My Generation an authenticity and strongly authored feel. As part of the band Chumbawamba, Alice lived in a squat in Leeds for many years. Chumbawamba were initially inspired musically by bands as diverse as The Fall, PiL, Wire, and Adam and the Ants and politically by the anarchist stance of Crass. By the end of 1982, the band had expanded to include Alice Nutter (of Ouch, My Hair's on Fire but no-one's bothered) and Dunstan Bruce (of Men in a Suitcase) and were living in a squat in Armley, Leeds, with Harry "Daz" Hamer and Dave "Mavis" Dillon.

Harry Hamer has composed original music for My Generation which is used alongside contemporary recordings and pop cultural references, mixing personal and political history with the music that transformed Britain's youth. Full of pop and passion, this is not a bleak drama; it's the story of a family who are caught up in the times.

A Tribute to Cesaria Evora

Lucy Duran presents a tribute to the "bare-foot Diva", Cesaria Evora from Cape Verde, who died in December 2011. She was one of world music's biggest and most colourful stars, bringing the soulful "morna" style to a world-wide audience. Today's programme includes an exclusive session of Cesaria covers by another Cape Verdean star, Tito Paris. Plus a chance to hear a Cesaria Evora session from the World Routes archive presented by Charlie Gillett. Producer James Parkin.

Cesaria Evora was born on 27 August 1941 in Mindelo, São Vicente, Cape Verde. Aged 16, she was persuaded by a friend to sing in a sailors' tavern. In the 1960s, she started singing on Portuguese cruise ships stopping at Mindelo as well as on the local radio. It was only in 1985 when at the invitation of Cape Verdean singer Bana she went to perform in Portugal.

Evora's international success came only in 1988 with the release of her first album La Diva Aux Pieds Nus recorded in France. Her 1992 album Miss Perfumado sold over 300,000 copies worldwide, and included one of her most celebrated songs, "Sodade".

In 2003, her album Voz d'Amor was awarded a Grammy in the World music category.

In September 2011, Évora's agent announced she was ending her career due to poor health and on 17 December 2011, aged 70, Évora died in São Vicente, from respiratory failure.

Tito Paris was also born in Mindelo on the island of São Vicente, and began his professional career in a family of musicians when he was nine. He was around 19 when Bana, once again, invited Tito to join his band, The Voz de Cabo Verde.

In Lisbon, it was as a composer that he made a name for himself, writing songs for many singers including Cesaria Evora.

SUN 23:15 Jazz Line-Up (b01blpxk)

Ken Peplowski in Concert

Ken Peplowski in concert with the Rhythm section of the BBC Big Band

The late Mel Torme said, "Since the advent of Benny Goodman, there have been too few clarinetists to fill the void that Goodman left. Ken Peplowski is most certainly one of those few. The man is magic. The New York Times pronounced a concert of Ken's "Goodman straight up, with a twist of lightning".

With such notices to his name Ken plays an exclusive gig for Jazz Line-Up with the rhythm section of the BBC Big Band. Robin Aspland, piano. Sam Burgess, bass and Tom Gordon drums in an extraordinary virtuosic performance on both clarinet and tenor saxophone where he plays tunes from Cannonball Adderley, Rodgers and Hart, Duke Ellington and Thelonious Monk.

MON 09:00 Essential Classics (b01blr2t)
Monday - Sarah Walker

In the week which celebrates the 200th anniversary of the birth of Charles Dickens, Sarah Walker's guest on Essential Classics is the biographer Claire Tomalin, who wrote highly acclaimed biographies of Mary Wollstonecraft, Katherine Mansfield, Jane Austen, Samuel Pepys and Thomas Hardy before turning her attention to Dickens. In 1990 she had published The Invisible Woman, an account of Dickens's shadowy relationship with the actress Ellen Ternan, which won several major literary awards including the James Tait Black Memorial Prize for biography and the Hawthornden Prize, before last year tackling the man himself in Charles Dickens: A Life, which was shortlisted for the 2011 Costa Biography Award. Before embarking on her highly successful career as a biographer, Claire Tomalin worked in publishing and journalism, becoming literary editor of The New Statesman magazine and The Sunday Times newspaper. She is married to the playwright and novelist Michael Frayn.

Presenter: Sarah Walker.
Producer: Richard Denison.

MON 12:00 Composer of the Week (b00qc01x)
William Walton (1902-1983)

Bright Young Thing

William Walton is perhaps best defined by a series of paradoxes: the pillar of the British Musical Establishment who lived in voluntary exile; the king of the grand, filmic gesture who harboured deep insecurity; the socialite and ladies' man who often preferred to be alone. Walton hid himself behind an acerbic wit - a statement which has also been made about his writing. Donald Macleod follows him through the distinct eras of his life and explores the many sides to the man and his music.

Snatched by the Sitwells from what they saw as an ignominious future as a schoolteacher in Oldham, William Walton became known in London as the most precocious British composer of the 1920's. Donald Macleod delves into the curious world with which Walton became involved.

MON 19:30 Radio 3 Live in Concert (b01blr32)
Marc-Andre Hamelin - Haydn, Stockhausen, Villa-Lobos, Liszt

Live from Wigmore Hall, London

Presented by Petroc Trelawny

Canadian virtuoso pianist Marc-André Hamelin performs a recital of music spanning almost two centuries of virtuoso keyboard writing.

Each of the four works in this concert is a pianistic tour de force and each was written with a specific piano virtuoso in mind. Haydn wrote his E minor Sonata - widely considered his masterpiece in the genre - for Therese Jansen, an outstanding pianist who lived in London at the time of Haydn's visits there in the 1790s. Stockhausen wrote his Klavierstück IX for the great champion of contemporary music in the 1950s and 60s Aloys Kontarsky. Villa Lobos dedicated his pioneering Rudepoema for his friend, the great Arthur Rubinstein while Liszt was himself the outstanding piano virtuoso of the 19th century. Tonight all four works are performed by one of today's greatest virtuoso pianists whose technique and musical insight marks this out as a not-to-be-missed performance.

Haydn: Piano Sonata in E minor HXVI:34
Stockhausen: Klavierstück IX

Villa-Lobos: Rudepoema
Liszt: Piano Sonata in B minor S178

Marc-André Hamelin (piano).

MON 22:00 Night Waves (b01blr34)
A Dangerous Method, Jesse Prinz, John McGregor, Beards

Philip Dodd immerses himself in psychoanalysis on film this evening. He sees 'A Dangerous Method' a new film about the triangle of Freud, Jung and Sabina Spielrein. The film critic Jonathan Romney reviews and the psychoanalyst Susie Orbach joins him to discuss the world the film represents.

In his new book, Beyond Human Nature, Professor of Philosophy Jesse Prinz reignites the nature/nurture debate suggesting that genetics doesn't and cannot explain everything about us. He's joined by Guy Kahane, Deputy Director of Uehiro Centre for Practical Ethics at Oxford University, and the scientist Lewis Wolpert to test and examine to what extent culture is the driving force behind what we think and feel.

John McGregor has written a book of short stories set in a threatened fenland landscape where the stories lurk just beneath the surface. Small lethal happenings shape personal lives while fighter planes exercise overhead. As the book says, 'This Isn't The Sort Of Thing That Happens To Someone Like You.'

And what of hair, facial hair precisely and the way it has been used over many centuries to denote power, virility and intelligence? From Samson and Delilah to Milton, Adam Smyth describes the functions of the beard.

That's Night Waves with the hirsute Philip Dodd.

MON 22:45 The Essay (b01bmkql)
Happily Ever After

Anthony Horowitz

In this series of five essays, contemporary children's authors and editors each look at a fictional family from children's literature. They use it as a focal point to explore the changing portrayal of the family in children's books, and consider both what it tells us about the society it reflects, and how relevant it is to determining a young generation's attitudes to the future.

In the first programme, writer Anthony Horowitz discusses Roald Dahl's badly-parented Matilda, and considers how normal dysfunctional family life probably is. However, despite this, he argues that it is essential for all of us to have some sense of family. He reflects on how his own place in his rather eccentric and sometimes unhappy family led to his escape into books, and his creative success.

First broadcast in February 2012.

MON 23:00 Jazz on 3 (b01bmkqn)
The Thirteenth Assembly

Jez Nelson presents a performance by New York quartet The Thirteenth Assembly. The ensemble is a meeting-point for four leaders of the younger generation of avant-garde musicians: trumpeter/cornettist Taylor Ho Binum, viola player Jessica Pavone, guitarist Mary Halvorson and drummer Tomas Fujiwara. The combined array of influences on the quartet - including contemporary classical, art-rock and folk - are absorbed into an intricate, subtly adventurous approach sound that emphasises the collective over individual virtuosity.

Ragtime to Riches

Abigail Williams uncovers the lost story of Walter Harding, a British-born Chicagoan ragtime pianist who amassed the world's largest collection of popular songbooks and then left them to the Bodleian Library in Oxford.

In 1974 Walter Harding's gift of his extensive collection of music, drama and poetry was the largest donation ever made to the Bodleian Library in Oxford. It is all the more remarkable because Walter Newton Henry Harding was not an academic, a book dealer or a millionaire bibliophile, but the son of a bricklayer from the East End of London who emigrated to Chicago in the 1900s.

Harding earned his living playing ragtime music - despite having had no formal musical education. His ability to collect on such a scale, despite modest means, was due to a lack of scholarly interest in popular music at the time, and also to the flood of books on the American market during the Great Depression.

Gradually, Harding assembled the world's largest collection of popular songbooks and miscellanies in a modest townhouse in a shabby suburb of Chicago. By the time he died, the house contained some 30,000 rare books.

The story of Harding's collection is one of obsession, and of a passionate desire to reconnect with the past through its music and writing.

Abigail Williams tells this largely unknown story with the help of members of the Bodleian Library and those who knew Harding himself, as well as with readings from the correspondence between Harding and the Bodleian, and the journalistic coverage that accompanied this extraordinary bequest.

Dr Williams is a Fellow of St Peter's College, Oxford with a special interest in the Harding Collection and in 18th century miscellanies.

They'll be discussing a Dutch documentarist's portrait of family life in Indonesia, a Sri Lankan writer's novel about an Englishwoman in Mauritius and will mark the centenary of the death of an Irishman who imported a Romanian monster to England, better known as Dracula.

TUE 22:45 The Essay (b01bmlmm)

Happily Ever After

Anne Fine

In this series of five essays, contemporary children's authors and editors each look at a fictional family from children's literature.

They use it as a focal point to explore the changing portrayal of the family in children's books, and consider both what it tells us about the society it reflects, and how relevant it is to determining a young generation's attitudes to the future.

In the second programme of the series, writer Anne Fine examines family life in Judith Kerr's classic The Tiger Who Came to Tea from a feminist perspective. She argues that our nostalgia for the books from our childhood mean that today's children are continually presented with outdated stereotypes of gender roles which no longer reflect today's society - a fact which, she believes, children find it hard to discern themselves.

London Philharmonic - Martinu, Liszt, Dvorak

Live from the Royal Festival Hall

Martin Handley presents a concert in which Marin Alsop conducts the London Philharmonic Orchestra in a programme where Liszt's first two piano concertos are framed by two Czech masterpieces. But whilst Martinu wrote his vibrant Sixth Symphony with the conductor Charles Munch very much in mind, Dvorak wrote his Eighth Symphony to satisfy nobody but himself. As he remarked, it is 'a work singing of the joy of green pastures, of summer evenings, of the melancholy of blue forests, of the defiant merry-making of the Czech peasants'.

Bohuslav Martinu: Symphony No.6 (Fantaisies symphoniques)
Franz Liszt: Piano Concerto No.1 in E flat major

8.15pm Music Interval - a chance to hear some of Bohuslav Martinu's seldom heard choral music

WED 22:00 Night Waves (b01bmm7g)

William Boyd, Yayoi Kusama, Argentina, Waiting for Godot

William Boyd's new novel, Waiting For Sunrise, begins in Vienna in 1913 with a young Englishman beginning a course of psychoanalysis, with one of the followers of Dr Freud. But what begins as an inner journey for the novel's protagonist, Lysander Rief, becomes a flight across Europe enmeshed in the politics and trauma of the first world war. William Boyd speaks to Rana Mitter talks about the themes that he returns to in his novels again and again.

A new retrospective of the work of Yayoi Kusama opens at Tate Modern tomorrow. Over 90 years the reclusive Japanese artist has re-created her style spanning painting, drawing, sculpture and film.

As a British warship is despatched once again to the Falkland Islands, and the front pages of the Argentinian newspapers today carry the words of President Cristina Fernández de Kirchner to David Cameron asking him to 'Give Peace a Chance', Night Waves asks how different Argentina is today to the country of the 1970s and 80s, and how photography, film and the novel are tracing the changes in Argentinian society since then. Maria Delgado of Queen Mary University, Stephen Hart of University College London and Vicky Bell of Goldsmith's College discuss a society trying still to rise above the trauma of dictatorship.

And playwright Gabriel Gbadamosi reviews a new production of Samuel Beckett's Waiting for Godot, featuring an all-black cast, at the West Yorkshire Playhouse.

WED 22:45 The Essay (b01bmm7j)

Happily Ever After

Trish Cooke

In this series of five essays, contemporary children's authors and editors each look at a fictional family from children's literature. They use it as a focal point to explore the changing portrayal of the family in children's books, and consider both what it tells us about the society it reflects, and how relevant it is to determining a young generation's attitudes to the future.

In the third programme of the series, children's author Trish Cooke examines the relevance of "self identification" in the books she read as a child and children's books today. With Dominican parents and nine siblings from both the West Indies and the UK, British born Trish asks how the Ladybird reading series Peter and Jane - about white, middle class families - impacted on how she saw herself as a black child growing up on a Bradford council estate in the 1960s. Trish compares the families in her first reading books with the families in her own books and asks how important it is for a child to see their culture reflected in the books they read.

First broadcast in February 2012.

Dvorak - The Jacobin

Katie Derham presents a recent concert performance, at The Barbican, of Dvorak's opera The Jacobin, by the BBC Symphony Orchestra and chief conductor Jiri Belohlavek.

Like many of the operas of his fellow countrymen, Dvorak set music to a libretto whose plot revolves around the theme of reconciliation - in this instance that of an exiled son disowned by his father as a revolutionary - a Jacobin. In an attempt to make amends with his father, Bohus returns to his home town, accompanied by his wife, from the fermented unrest of France. There ensues a story of young love and the emotive power of childhood lullabies, served up with a twist of treachery, mockery and the unwanted attention of an insipid romantic suitor. Perfect material, then, for Dvorak to spin a musical yarn that explicitly stresses the role of music in the Czech national psyche.

Lucian Freud, David Gascoyne, African Economic Evolution, Antoni Tapies

Lucian Freud was one of the 20th century's most important artists, a modern master of portrait painting. The Lucian Freud Portraits exhibition at the National Portrait Gallery is the artist's first posthumous exhibit, comprising over 100 works from museums and private collections throughout the world, some of which have never been seen before. Anne McElvoy visits the show with Freud's biographer and friend William Feaver.

Also on the programme, the poet David Gascoyne's biographer talks about the man best known for introducing surrealism to Britain, and why although he counted Andre Breton, Salvador Dali and many other surrealists amongst his friends, he grew disillusioned with the movement and turned to a mystic existentialism that marked his later poetry.

And how is Africa's complex past shaping its economic evolution today? Duncan Clarke's new book 'Africa's Future: Darkness to Destiny' attempts to answer this huge question in a plethora of history and detail. He is joined by Binyavanga Wainaina, director of the Chinua Achebe Center for African Literature and Languages and Business Reporter Matthew Davies of the BBC World Service to discuss.

We also look at the life of the late European artist Antoni Tapies, who found international acclaim with his painting and sculpture. His work often featured cruciform shapes, collages, and numbers and symbols scratched into varnished surfaces through which he explored the themes of emptiness, nature and esoteric philosophy. He was given Spain's most prestigious art award, the Velazquez Prize in 2003. On Tapies' death, aged 88, art historian Richard Cork looks back at his long and successful career.

Julia Eccleshare

In this series of five essays, contemporary children's authors and editors each look at a fictional family from children's literature. They use it as a focal point to explore the changing portrayal of the family in children's books, and consider both what it tells us about the society it reflects, and how relevant it is to determining a young generation's attitudes to the future.

In the fourth programme of the series, writer, broadcaster and lecturer Julia Eccleshare looks at Jacqueline Wilson's The Illustrated Mum.

Although Wilson was appointed Children's Laureate in 2005 in recognition of her work, for the first twenty years of her career her books were treated with caution by many parents who dismissed them as social realism and unsuitable for children. Julia explores the possibility that, instead of breaking the rules of "happily ever after", Jacqueline Wilson is actually telling thoroughly modern fairy stories which reflect the social/economic upheavals of today, in the same way that our original fairy stories reflected the problems of their times. Julia goes on to examine our continuing need for such fairy tales, which help to teach children not to be frightened by the world.

Lincolnshire International Chamber Music Festival 2011

Episode 4

This week's Lunchtime Concerts come from last summer's Lincolnshire International Chamber Music Festival - the theme of which was "Performer Composers". This programme features music by Arensky and Brahms in performances by violinists Alexander Sitkovetsky & Tai Murray, violist Jennifer Stumm, cellists Alexander Chaushian, Richard Harwood & Kristina Blaumane and pianists Ashley Wass & Martin Roscoe.

BRAHMS - Piano Trio No.3 in E flat, Op.55

ARENASKY - Quartet for violin, viola & 2 cellos in A minor, Op.35.

FRI 14:00 Afternoon Concert (b01bnp5v)

Katie Derham introduces the seldom heard Serenade for Orchestra by Jakub Ryba, plus Manfred Honeck conducts the Czech Philharmonic Orchestra in a performance of Dvorak's Stabat Mater. Written whilst Dvorak mourned the death of his daughter, Josefa, and finished following the tragic passing of his two remaining children, the Latin text to which he set the composition tells of the grief of the Virgin Mary at the death of her son, Jesus, as she stands under his cross.

Baritone Thomas Hampson performs Mahler's deeply moving Kindertotenlieder with the Czech Philharmonic Orchestra, traversing the range of somber emotional responses a parent might pass through at the death of a child - from anguish, through fantasy resuscitation, to resignation and transcendence. The text, written as Ruckert attempted to come to terms with the loss of his children to scarlet fever, was set as a song-cycle between 1901-1904 by Mahler who, poignantly, lost his own daughter, Maria, to scarlet fever sometime later.

FRI 19:30 Radio 3 Live in Concert (b01bnp5z)

Live from the Barbican, London

Dvorak, Rebecca Saunders

Live from the Barbican, London.

Presented by Petroc Trelawny

Young French conductor Lionel Bringuier conducts the BBC Symphony Orchestra and violinist Carolin Widmann in the UK Premiere of 'Still' by Rebecca Saunders, after Dvorak's ever-popular Carnival Overture. Tchaikovsky's melodic 5th Symphony completes the programme.

Dvorák's burst of uninhibited joy launches this concert, and Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony ends in triumph too, though only after a doleful beginning and many travails as the composer explores the theme of fate. Heard alongside this full-throated affirmation, the exploratory, minutely detailed art of Rebecca Saunders will make a startling and thought-provoking contrast. The BBC Symphony Orchestra is conducted by the 25-year-old hot-shot Lionel Bringuier, who is fast making a reputation as a star of the future.

Dvorák: Carnival Overture

FRI 20:00 Discovering Music (b01bnp61)

Tchaikovsky: Symphony No. 5

Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony is the middle of a last, great trilogy of symphonies whose musical ideas, the composer admitted, address great issues of Fate, Death, and Providence.

Stephen Johnson explores the connections between Tchaikovsky's last three symphonies, written at a time when the composer was struggling with depression and fears over his homosexuality.

How do these masterpieces intersect with the composer's own troubled psychological state? And how much can we really read into the way that their themes and motifs develop and intersect as emblematic of Tchaikovsky's own inner world?

FRI 22:00 The Verb (b01bnp65)

Adonis, The Gerry Diver Speech Project, Greenlandic Poetry, Will Eaves

This week on The Verb Ian McMillan introduces the work of a superstar of Arabic poetry, Adonis. The 82 year old Syrian poet Ali Ahmad Said Esber writes under the pen name Adonis and has been hugely influential as a writer of modernist Arabic poetry, a publisher of literary magazines, a translator and cultural commentator. Ian is joined by the poet Khaled Mattawa who translates Adonis' work into English, and Chinese poet and fan of Adonis Yang Lian to celebrate his work.

The Gerry Diver Speech Project is part song, music and an unusual oral history told in very personal interviews with Irish folk greats including Christy Moore, Joe Cooley and Shane McGowan. Gerry joins Ian to share some of the astonishing song-stories he's created.

Nancy Campbell tells Ian about her concrete poetry based around words in endangered Greenlandic Inuit, a language with an alphabet of only 18 letters of which only 12 can begin a word. A single word in Greenlandic can express multiple different meanings and the suggestion of whole stories, like the word kingunikortorpoq 'He drinks a second brew from old coffee grounds or tea leaves'.

And The Verb is excited to present an extract from Will Eaves' forthcoming novel This Is Paradise. Telling the story of the Allden family over several decades, from the awkward youth of son Clive to the illness of matriarch Emily, The Verb has periodically featured extracts of This Is Paradise as a work in progress, and now follows it to publication.

Producer: Allegra McIlroy.

FRI 22:45 The Essay (b01bnp6r)

Happily Ever After

Michael Rosen

In this series of five essays, contemporary children's authors and editors each look at a fictional family from children's literature.

They use it as a focal point to explore the changing portrayal of the family in children's books, and consider both what it tells us about the society it reflects, and how relevant it is to determining a young generation's attitudes to the future.

In the fifth programme of the series, writer and broadcaster Michael Rosen explores the part that children's literature plays in the ongoing conversation we have about parenting and childcare. Looking at The History of the Fairchild Family by Mrs Sherwood, Michael considers that this story, popular in the early nineteenth century, was renowned at the time for its realistic portrayal of childhood but is now viewed as an example of an out-dated didactic style of parenting. He goes on to explore how the portrayal of the fictional parent has so altered that children's books are increasingly full of moments where the balance of power has shifted in the child's favour. A fact which, he believes, illustrates how differently modern society now sees the parental role.

First broadcast in February 2012.

FRI 23:00 World on 3 (b01bnp6t)

Punch Brothers

Presented by Lopa Kothari and featuring progressive bluegrass group Punch Brothers live in concert at this year's Celtic Connections Festival in Glasgow. Plus a round-up of the latest new releases from around the world.
