Verdi's Rigoletto

Verdi's Rigoletto

Presented by Louise Fryer

Verdi's tragic and provocative tale of the cynical court jester who, against his better nature, wreaks havoc with the lives of others. But then the tables are turned and he's doomed to bring about the death of the one person he holds most dear - his daughter Gilda. In this revival of David McVicar's production for the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, conducted by Sir John Eliot Gardiner, Dimitri Platanias is the hunchback jester, Ekaterina Siurina his daughter Gilda, and Vittorio Grigolo the handsome, amoral Duke who poses as a penniless student to gain Gilda's love.

SAT 20:40 Between the Ears (b01jqj1j)

In Search of the Balinese Scarecrow

Fire flies glimmer over the paddy fields. Water trickles through volcanic irrigation canals. On the edge of a palm tree fringed field, Balinese farmer, and composer Bapak I Dewa Arnawa stands silent under the shooting stars, listening to the frogs calling back and forth, back and forth. This is where he draws his inspiration. "Just like gamelan", he says. And it was.

On the Indonesian island of Bali, music is not just entertainment; it is fully integrated into everyday life. Behind the elaborate walls of family compounds and villages, away from tourist eyes, gamelan orchestras practise daily, slit gongs, called kulkul, call the children to school, and music is offered to the Gods in every ceremony of life. Often a bewilderingly chaotic style of music for the Western ear, gamelan in context can make so much more sense. Even the scarecrows make music here; from bamboo chimes and whirring clackers, to rusty tin cans and elaborate the plastic bag mobiles, shaken by the farmers and the wind; all to rid the valuable rice fields of the birds.

In the search for the music of scarecrows we encounter not only the natural and concrete sounds found in gamelan; the toads, birds, geckos, frogs and ducks, but also the new generation of composers and choreographers who are inspired by these sounds to create new music and dances. Farmers are still reputed to make the best composers.

Using the scarecrows, wildlife and the gamelan of Bali, "In Search of the Balinese Scarecrow" explores where the music stops and the sounds of nature begin.

Music included in the programme included compositions by Bapak I Made Arnawa, Pak Dewa Allit, and I Dewa Putu Berata, a musician, composer, and the founder of Āudamani, one of Bali's most innovative new gamelan ensembles. Emiko Saraswati Susilo is a dancer, singer, and musician who has been active in Balinese and Javanese arts for 25 years. She is artistic director of Gamelan Sekar Jaya, a San Franciscan based group, and associate director of Cudamani in Pengosekan, Ubud, Bali, running International Summer schools for people interested in learning gamelan.

Musical specialists advising on the programme are: Andy Channing, the UK's foremost teacher of Balinese Gamelan

And jazz musician and composer Ray Sandoval, who is writing his doctoral thesis on Canadian composer Colin McPhee. Thanks to Emiko, Pak Dewa, all those recorded for the programme and also Gregory Ghent, D'Lo, Anjali, Ida, Danu, and all those who taught, played and were part of the Cudamani Summer School 2011

Producer: Sara Jane Hall

First broadcast in June 2012.

The producer is Neil Myners. It is a Unique production for BBC Radio 3.

SUN 12:00 Private Passions (b01jqkwy)

Celia Imrie

Michael Berkeley's guest this week is one of the most successful British actresses of recent decades. Celia Imrie has enjoyed frequent collaborations with Victoria Wood from the 1970s onwards, appearing as Miss Babs in the spoof TV soap 'Acorn Antiques', and as Philippa Moorcroft in 'Dinnerladies'. Other major TV roles include Diana Neal in After You've Gone, and Gloria Millington in Kingdom. Her film credits include Nanny McPhee, Hilary and Jackie (in which she played Iris du Pre), Calendar Girls, Bridget Jones's Diary, the 2007 remake of St Trinian's, in which she played the Matron, and The Best Exotic Marigold Hotel. She is also a highly successful stage actress, appearing in Michael Frayn's Noises Off in London's West End, for which she was nominated for an Olivier Award.

Celia Imrie learnt to play the piano as a child, and her musical private passions begin with Shostakovich's Second Piano Concerto, played by Leonard Bernstein. She has also chosen one of Josef Suk's Love Songs for piano, written for his wife, Dvorak's daughter Ottilie. Celia Imrie's mother was a violinist, and her choices include the finale of Brahms's Violin Concerto played by Nigel Kennedy. A great opera-lover, she has selected arias from Charpentier's opera Louise, sung by Montserrat Caballe, and Puccini's Tosca, sung by Maria Callas and Tito Gobbi, which she loves for its dramatic intensity. Celia wanted to be a dancer, and finds it hard to sit still while listening to the waltz from Act 1 of Prokofiev's ballet Cinderella. Her final choice is Shirley Bassey singing 'Diamonds Are Forever'.

First broadcast in June 2012.

SUN 14:00 Sunday Concert (b01jqkx2)

BBC NOW - Vaughan Williams, Berlioz, Ravel, Elgar

From the 2012 St David's Cathedral Festival

Presented by Nicola Heywood Thomas

The Romanesque church of St David's was built to house the shrine of the patron saint of Wales, nestling in a picturesque Pembrokeshire hillside, giving a magical setting for this concert given a week ago. Conductor Sian Edwards joins the orchestra for a concert of French and English music.

The Fantasia on a Theme of Thomas Tallis by Vaughan Williams was written for performance in the grand acoustic of Gloucester Cathedral, so it is perfectly at home here, exploiting distant parts of the building for the "echo" orchestra. Mezzo-soprano Anna Stephany is no stranger to Wales. She represented England in the finals of BBC Cardiff Singer of the World in 2009. She joins us for the voluptuous and sensual song cycle Nuits d'ete by Berlioz, a romantic and passionate selection of love songs for summer nights.

Ravel's Menuet antique started life as a charming piano miniature, written soon after he left the Paris Conservatoire in 1895, many years later, Ravel returned to it and orchestrated it. Sian Edwards closes the concert with Elgar's Variations on an Original Theme (Enigma), a warm and affectionate set of musical portraits of Elgar's closest friends. First performed in 1899, it won immediate popularity and shot Elgar to the forefront of British music making. The rich orchestrations and ear-catching melodies remain as brilliant as ever, enhanced in this concert by the cathedral acoustic and the mighty St David's Cathedral organ.

Vaughan Williams: Tallis Fantasia
Berlioz: Nuits d'ete
Ravel: Menuet antique
Elgar: Enigma Variations

Anna Stephany (mezzo-soprano)
BBC National Orchestra of Wales
Sian Edwards (conductor).

SUN 18:30 Words and Music (b01jql7p)
The Full Montaigne

Jim Broadbent plays Michel de Montaigne, whose 'Essays' entertainingly ponder sex, marriage, animals, memory, and cruelty in an attempt to answer one question: 'How to live?' With music including Bach, Ligeti, Mendelssohn and Randy Newman.

Montaigne drew on a lifetime of experience and observation, but far from inscrutable musings, the Essays are often earthy and direct - at once scatological and astute, philosophical and witty, playful and profound.

The Essays were first published in 1580 and are positively Shakespearean, both in their range and in their humanism. Montaigne speaks as himself, directly and in clear prose, and says the most extraordinarily heretical things. Some of his arguments include the notion that human beings are on a par with the animals and that they are just a tiny part of Nature, all of which deserves equally to be respected and that death is just the end of life and it is life which is the important thing.

In 1676 the Vatican caught up with Montaigne the best part of a century after his death when the Essays were put on its index of prohibited books, where they stayed until 1854. The Essays have been continuously available for the last four and a half centuries not only because they are engaging and entertaining but also because of the spark of self-revelation they so often generate.

In this programme, seasoned Montaignistes will find themselves recognising an old friend, and those coming to the Essays for the first time will find a new one.

David Papp, producer

First broadcast June 2012.

SUN 19:45 Sunday Feature (b01jql7r)
Malvinas Madness

Andrew Graham Yooll, former editor of the Buenos Aires Herald, reveals how Argentine identity and dreams are reevaluated via the distorting mirror of the Falkland islands known to all in Argentina as the Malvinas.

As the 30th anniversary of the surrender of the Argentinian Junta on June 14th and the failure to reclaim the islands by force looms into view, Yooll hears from Argentines, across the generations and political divide, who detail the delusion, despair, revulsion and dreams folded up into the rocky outlines of the islands.

Andrew Graham Yooll is himself an Anglo Argentine, born and raised in Buenos Aires. He was one of the few to stand up to the murderous Junta as thousands disappeared under El Proceso, with his life threatened, Yooll fled the country just in time to report on the Falklands conflict for The Guardian. Yooll understands just how deep the entanglement of history, myth and geography is for his homeland.

What does this heartfelt desire for the Falklands, an obsession periodically stoked by populist rhetoric and the Peronist legacy, reveal about Argentine identity? Are the claims for return for the islands increasingly an excuse to ignore domestic issues? And can Argentines ever find peace without dreaming of Las Islas?

Producer Mark Burman.

Henceforward

Martin Jarvis directs Jared Harris and Joanne Whalley in Alan Ayckbourn's darkly prophetic comedy. What's the most important thing for composer Jerome: a great new work, or his family?

It's sometime in the near future. Composer Jerome has been suffering a creative block. His only company is his beloved music, the ultra-modern recording devices that surround him, and a malfunctioning humanoid robot, NAN 300F.

Jerome has been unable to work since his wife, Corinna, left with their daughter Geain 4 years ago. Desperate to see Geain again and hoping she'll release the flood-gates, he engages a young actress, Zoe, to pretend to be his fiancée. He wants to deceive his ex-wife into believing he's a fit person to be allowed to spend time with Geain. But, owing to his obsession with recording every intimate moment, Zoe quits. Can Jerome now re-programme robot Nan to sound and look like "perfect" Zoe? And what is most important to Jerome - writing the perfect piece of music on the subject of "love - or being back with his family? Life or Art? Plus - which is better - a robot or a human being?

This is Ayckbourn's 34th play. It received its 1987 world premiere at the Stephen Joseph Theatre-in-the-Round, Scarborough. In November 1988 it opened at the Vaudeville Theatre in the West End, where it ran for ten months, winning the Evening Standard Award for Best Comedy.

Review and Session with Uday Bhawalkar

Lucy Duran is joined by Arwa Haider and John L. Walters for a review of new world music albums, and Uday Bhawalkar sings the ancient Indian classical style of dhrupad.

Uday Bhawalkar comes from the Indian city of Pune, and he has devoted his life to singing 'dhrupad', an ancient style of devotional singing. In dhrupad, the sacred words are drawn out over a long period, the singer slowly exploring the sound of each syllable, intended to induce a trance-like state in both singer and listeners.

Francis Poulenc (1899-1963)

Episode 1

Francis Poulenc wrote some of the warmest, most immediately appealing music of the 20th century - music that's adored by the general concert-going public for its easy French charm and witty zest. Yet even his biographer admits that he could be "rich, spoilt and glib" - the latter a criticism that's often made by the musical establishment about his music, which remained happily tuneful and apparently uncomplicated throughout his whole career, even among the avant-garde experiments of modernists in the 1960s.

This week, Donald Macleod explores Poulenc's unique musical voice - and sometimes troublesome character - whilst showcasing a blend of much-loved favourites and rare works.
Chamber and orchestral works thread through the week, with Wednesday's episode devoted to the genre which provided Poulenc perhaps his greatest medium: the solo song. By contrast, Thursday's episode gives us a rare complete performance of one of Poulenc's most original and charming works: his setting of the story of Babar, the little elephant, for narrator and orchestra - a delightful French counterpart to Prokofiev's "Peter and The Wolf" or Britten's "Young Person's Guide To The Orchestra". The week ends with a rare complete performance of Poulenc's choral work, "Sept Repons De Tenebres", and two beautiful late wind sonatas.

In today's first episode, Donald Macleod introduces Poulenc's scandalous musical successes of the 1920s.

BBC Concert Orchestra - London on Film

Live from the Queen Elizabeth Hall, South Bank Centre, London

Presented by Mark Kermode

As London becomes the focus of the international sporting calendar, film expert Mark Kermode, conductor Robert Ziegler and the BBC Concert Orchestra look at the lasting legacy the capital has had on film. Ian Shaw sings music from Bond to Bacharach; Caroline Jaya Ratnam is the piano soloist in Bernard Herrmann's Hangover Square, and Cynthia Fleming plays solo violin in Howard Shore's score from Eastern Promises.

David Arnold: Bond - Casino Royale suite, main theme
John Barry arr Ziegler: The Ipcress File
Michael Nyman: The End of the Affair
Bernard Herrmann: Hangover Square - Concerto Macabre for piano and orchestra
Stephen Sondheim: Johanna (from Sweeney Todd)
Alexandre Desplat : The King's Speech

8.15pm Interval

Composers, fixers, players, studio owners and engineers offer some insights into why big name international producers and composers choose to record their soundtracks in London.

PART 2

Pete Townshend arr Rachel Fuller: Love Reign O'er Me (from Quadrophenia)

BBC Concert Orchestra
Robert Ziegler (conductor).

MON 22:00 Night Waves (b01jqmv6)

Pina Bausch, Martin Amis, Philosophy at the Institut Francais, Snow White

She's been called the 'mother of modern dance' and her World Cities season at the Barbican and Sadler's Wells has been greeted with rave reviews and standing ovations. Tonight on Night Waves we get behind the hype and discuss Tanztheater Wuppertal Pina Bausch - the themes, the iconic moments, and the legacy - with the actress Fiona Shaw, the choreographer Michael Keegan Dolan, and the dance critic Sarah Crompton.

Martin Amis' new novel 'Lionel Asbo: State of England' has burst onto the literary scene like a hand grenade of brilliant divisiveness. Reviewers seem to either love or hate the book which describes the lottery winning lunacy of one feckless urban criminal and his grossly extended family. Martin Amis talks to Rana Mitter.

There was an all-nighter of philosophy at the Institut Francais in London at the week-end and Night Waves was there to find out what such a French happening has to teach us.

And during this apology for a summer two new blockbuster films reimagine the story of Snow White: 'Mirror Mirror' and 'Snow White and the Huntsman.' But according to Radio 3 New Generation Thinker Corin Throsby, both films are following a long literary tradition of adapting this most familiar fairy tale.

MON 22:45 The Essay (b01jqmv8)

What Is a Nation?

The US Scotch-Irish

What is a nation? Is it the same as a country? Are a people, or a tribe, the same thing as a nation?

American writer Michael Goldfarb looks for a definition of "Nation" for the globalised 21st century. Goldfarb who spent most of the last two decades covering conflicts and conflict resolution draws on his experiences in Bosnia, Iraq, and Northern Ireland to look at the question. These essays contain not just ideas but vivid anecdotes of real people caught up in the frequently violent confrontations sparked by unresolved questions of nationhood.

The first essay looks at the close connections between Ulster's Protestant community and their blood relations in America, the Scotch-Irish. Separated by centuries and an ocean they still have many cultural similarities including using religion as a principle of political action.

First broadcast in June 2012.

MON 23:00 Jazz on 3 (b01jqmnb)
Vijay Iyer

Jez Nelson presents American pianist Vijay Iyer in concert with his trio at The Vortex jazz club in London. Drawing influence from Indian, modern classical and pop styles, Iyer has gained a reputation as one of the most original and daring voices of his generation, creating music that is at once rhythmically complex and direct. His already prolific career has included numerous notable collaborations that reflect the breadth of his musical influences, including with saxophonist Rudresh Mahanthappa and the poet Mike Ladd. This trio - featuring Stephan Crump on bass and Marcus Gilmore on drums - caused a stir with the release of their first album, Historicity. Celebrating the release of their much-anticipated follow-up Accelerando, they continue to reinvent familiar repertoire and deliver stellar originals.

Presenter: Jez Nelson
Producers: Peggy Sutton & Chris Elcombe.

Shadows

Tenebrae is the Latin term for shadows or darkness. The Christian religious service Tenebrae is characterised by the gradual extinguishing of candles while psalms and readings are chanted or recited, whilst in literature and popular culture, shadows have become a symbol of a peculiarly sinister darkness.

In tonight's interval feature, poet Michael Symmons-Roberts introduces his own personal reflection on the subject.

"To them, I said, the truth would be literally nothing but the shadows of the images." - Plato, The Republic

Shadow -

1. a dark figure or image cast on the ground or some surface by a body intercepting light.
2. shade or comparative darkness, as in an area.
3. darkness, especially that coming after sunset.
4. shelter; protection:
5. a slight suggestion; trace:.

Harry Belafonte

Matthew Sweet talks to the singer, actor and civil rights campaigner Harry Belafonte. The man who described Colin Powell as behaving like 'a house slave' over the war with Iraq talks about his long campaigning history, from ground breaking films like Island in the Sun which pushed at the boundaries of acceptable depictions of race relations to his role as a leading anti apartheid campaigner and close friend of Martin Luther King. He tells Matthew how he and Sidney Poitier were like Apollo astronauts, sharing a pioneering role that's hard for anyone else to understand.

And as British race relations films Sapphire and Flame in the Streets are re-released Matthew is joined by film historian Stephen Bourne, anthropologist Kit Davis and actress Adjoa Andoh to discuss the films.

What Is a Nation?

The Kurds

What is a nation? Is it the same as a country? Are a people, or a tribe, the same thing as a nation?

In this episode, Michael Goldfarb looks at the case of the Kurds, the world's largest ethnic group without a homeland of their own. He explains how they were promised a national state by the Great Powers after World War I and why that promise was unfulfilled.

In a series of five essays, American writer Michael Goldfarb looks for a definition of the "nation" for the 21st century. Goldfarb who spent most of the last two decades covering conflicts and conflict-resolution draws on his experiences in Bosnia, Iraq, and Northern Ireland to look at the question. These essays contain not just ideas but vivid anecdotes of real people caught up in the frequently violent confrontations sparked by unresolved questions of nationhood.

Poulenc is regarded as perhaps the greatest French song composer of the 20th century. In today's episode, Donald Macleod takes us through more than four decades of brilliant, original art songs: from an early musical bestiary to the bawdy "Chansons Gaillardes" - and on through two contrasting sets of songs of wartime, to his last major vocal work: a dazzling eight-minute scena for soprano and orchestra. At the centre of the episode is perhaps Francis Poulenc's greatest set of songs: the sublime "Tel Jour, Telle Nuit".

In the second concert in this series featuring international soloists, Daniel Muller Schott and Robert Kulek perform a recital of 19th-century sonatas for cello and piano by Brahms and Franck. Brahms' Sonata in E minor Op. 38 is an homage to J.S. Bach - the themes from the first movement and the fugal theme of the finale are based on music from Bach's Art of Fugue. Franck's Sonata in A major is titled for violin (or viola or cello or flute) and piano. The sonata was composed during the last decade of Franck's life and was a the composer's wedding gift to the Belgian violinist, Eugene Ysaeye, in 1886

Belcea Quartet - Beethoven

Live from Wigmore Hall, London

Presented by Martin Handley

The Belcea String Quartet continue their complete Beethoven Quartet cycle with an early quartet set against a late quartet with its original final movement - the complex and inward looking 'Grosse Fuge'.

Beethoven's string quartets are considered the pinnacle of quartet writing - both for the technical demands they make on the players and for the depth of Beethoven's musical utterances. Even the six early opus 18 quartets, written when he was a young man, though indebted to the classical precedents of Haydn and Mozart already bare Beethoven's remarkable personal stamp - the fifth of the set opens tonight's concert. By the time Beethoven wrote his late opus 130 quartet he was completely deaf and living in an inner sound world. The hugely complex double fugue - the Grosse Fuge - which he originally wrote as the finale to the quartet proved too difficult for his listeners in 1826 and Beethoven was persuaded to replace it with something more palatable. Tonight though the Belcea Quartet perform his opus 130 with the original Grosse Fuge finale.

Formed in 1994 the Belcea Quartet was one of the first participants in the BBC New Generation Artists scheme and is now a multi award-winning group, in demand all over the world.

Episode 4

Critics have often criticised Poulenc's response to the horrors of World War Two - relatively wealthy and in possession of a well-appointed country house, after his national service he was able to largely escape the traumas of the conflict and continue his social life. Yet the war did affect him deeply musically. Donald Macleod introduces four very different wartime compositions: a plangent motet, a furious violin sonata, a sneaky act of musical resistance aimed at ignorant German soldiers in the audience at the Paris Opera...and perhaps Poulenc's most charming and characteristic work: his setting of Jean de Brunhoff's "Babar The Elephant" for narrator and orchestra.

Ronald Brautigam

Chamber Music in the Ulster Hall 3/4

The penultimate recital this week recorded in the Ulster Hall. Ronald Brautigam performs an all Beethoven programme - The Sonata in B flat has been lauded as the crowning glory of the composer's early sonatas and was apparently Beethoven's favourite! The Eroica Variations are dedicated to Count Moritz Lichnowsky - the brother of Beethoven's patron Prince Karl Lichnowsky and a former pupil of Mozart. The theme of the variations appears in several other works-the finale of Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, and in the ballet The Creatures of Prometheus; indeed had the composer's intentions been followed the work may well have been known as the Prometheus Variations.

Thursday Opera Matinee

Donizetti - La fille du Regiment

This week's Thursday Opera Matinee is a performance of Donizetti's La Fille du Regiment given at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden. The heroine of Donizetti's comedy is Marie, the 'daughter' or mascot of the 21st Regiment. She's in love with a hunky peasant called Tonio, but can only marry a soldier from the 21st. Natalie Dessay sings Marie, and Juan Diego Florez supplies the famous top Cs as Tonio. And there's a cameo for Dawn French in the hilarious spoken role of the

Duchess of Crackentorp

Plus today's Russian music is from the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra: a performance of Lyadov's 8 Russian Folk songs.

Presented by Penny Gore.

Live from Christ Church, Spitalfields, London

Presented by Katie Derham

Russian composer Igor Stravinsky was always fascinated by music of earlier times especially the classical style and Renaissance polyphony. This programme interleaves Stravinsky's neo-classical Mass for voices and wind among some of the great works of Renaissance polyphony and in a programme that spans 500 years.

Cosmopolis, Science and the Arts. The Islands, Rachel Whiteread

Director David Cronenberg has built a career by depicting dystopian worlds in which shady, amoral corporations infiltrate people's lives and technology runs haywire. His latest film is an adaptation of Don DeLillo's 2003 novel 'Cosmopolis'. It's a study of a 28 year-old multi billionaire on the verge of a nervous breakdown, and poised to take the world economy with him. So does Cronenberg see himself as a political commentator, or are his films all about the spectacle?

Lord Robert Winston has criticised the Cultural Olympiad for the lack of science in the four-year celebration. He says science is an essential part of our culture and needs to be put on an equal footing with the arts. But when did the two areas diverge - and has anything changed in the fifty years since CP Snow first argued that science and the humanities are two cultures? Anne McElvoy is joined by Lord Winston and the historian of science Richard Holmes to discuss the relationship between science and the arts.

This week marks the 30th anniversary of the end of the Falklands war, and Anne McElvoy talks to one of Argentina's most revered authors, Carlos Gamerro. His novel "The Islands", recently translated in English, gives a surreal account of the war and explores its impact on the Argentinian psyche.

And we take a look at the artist Rachel Whiteread's first permanent public commission in this country - a new façade for the Whitechapel Gallery in London. Anne is joined by the art critic for The Times, Rachel Campbell-Johnston.

What Is a Nation?

Germany

What is a nation? Is it the same as a country? Are a people, or a tribe, the same thing as a nation?

The story of the Germans and their two-century long struggle to create from 330-plus different political entities, a single, stable nation called Germany. German philosophers invented the concept of "nationalism" during the Enlightenment, yet of all the great centres of the Enlightenment it is Germany that has had the hardest time defining exactly what their nation is.

In a series of five essays, American writer Michael Goldfarb looks for a definition of the "nation" for the globalised 21st century. Goldfarb who spent most of the last two decades covering conflicts and conflict-resolution draws on his experiences in Bosnia, Iraq, and Northern Ireland to look at the question. These essays contain not just ideas but vivid anecdotes of real people caught up in the frequently violent confrontations sparked by unresolved questions of nationhood.

First broadcast in June 2012.

Chamber Music in the Ulster Hall 4/ 4

Austrian virtuoso violinist, Benjamin Schmid and the Argentinian pianist, Jose Gallardo bring this series of Radio 3 Lunchtime concerts marking the 150th anniversary of the Ulster Hall to a close. Beethoven's Violin Sonata in E flat Op. 12 No. 3 is dedicated to Antonio Salieri who was tutoring the young Beethoven at the time. Beethoven titled his Op. 12 as Sonatas for keyboard and violin but Beethoven certainly conceived this music as an equal partnership. Prokofiev began composing his First Violin Sonata during the summer of 1938 and completed it several years later in 1946. It is dedicated to the great Russian violinist, David Oistrakh. The mood of the sonata is sombre and Oistrakh performed movements from the work at Prokofiev's funeral in 1953

Live from St David's Hall, Cardiff

Strauss

Live from St.David's Hall, Cardiff

Presented by Elin Manahan Thomas

Principal Conductor Thierry Fischer says farewell to Cardiff after six years at the helm of the BBC National Orchestra of Wales in a suitably grand fashion. The concert features one of the most powerful and overwhelming of all symphonies, the Alpine Symphony by Richard Strauss. It's a day in the mountains, from sunrise through a soundscape of waterfalls, meadows, glaciers, mountain summits, a huge storm, and finally sunset dies away into night. Strauss writes for an orchestra of suitably massive proportions, over 100 players including six trumpets, six trombones, twenty horns, organ and wind machine, alongside a string section of over sixty players. It's a mighty paean to the oneness of humanity and nature, a "purification through strength, freedom through work and a reverence for nature, eternal and magnificent". It promises to be a performance demonstrating both orchestra and conductor at their very peak.

Before that, Canadian pianist Angela Hewitt joins the orchestra for Mozart. Angela is well known for her her sensuality of tone and powerful intellectual drive, virtues she can ably display in Piano Concerto no.22 in E flat major. Written at the height of Mozart's popularity in Vienna in 1785-6, this concerto is full of rich melodies and bright orchestral colours, with an expansive, aristocratic grandeur and finely crafted scoring for wind - in particular Mozart's fondness for the clarinet.

Seamus Collins, with 'Das Goat' a new play developed as part of the BBC's Writersroom10 scheme.

John Schad, with his new short story 'Our Lives, Mrs Dalloway' which deftly weaves family archive, philosophy and modernist fiction.

And singer and multi-instrumentalist Tanya Auclair performs 'Gabriel' and explains how she builds her songs from the breath up.

Producer: Faith Lawrence.

FRI 22:45 The Essay (b01jrk4)

What Is a Nation?

Europe

What is a nation? Is it the same as a country? Are a people, or a tribe, the same thing as a nation?

The euro zone crisis has confirmed for British euro sceptics their deepest suspicions: That the EU elites are trying to create a United States of Europe by the back door. In this final essay, Michael Goldfarb looks at the crisis and asks if definitions of nationhood and national sovereignty that arose in the 19th century are fit for purpose in the globalized 21st. And what of the argument that integration is inevitable in a world where capital and those who manipulate it operate with no boundaries and no national loyalty?

In a series of five essays, American writer Michael Goldfarb looks for a definition of the "nation" for the globalised 21st century. Goldfarb who spent most of the last two decades covering conflicts and conflict-resolution draws on his experiences in Bosnia, Iraq, and Northern Ireland to look at the question. These essays contain not just ideas but vivid anecdotes of real people caught up in the frequently violent confrontations sparked by unresolved questions of nationhood.
