Episode 1

As part of the Piano Season on the BBC, Lucie Skeaping presents the first of two programmes about the development of the piano during the eighteenth century.

Lucie looks at the development of the piano from its origins in Florence with Bartolomeo Cristofori.

With contributions from the period instrument restorer Kerstin Schwarz, and Steven Devine, Professor of Fortepiano at Trinity College of Music.

SAT 14:00 Radio 3 Live in Concert (b01n6rnf)

Wigmore Hall: Jennifer Johnston

Live from Wigmore Hall, London.

Presented by Katie Derham.

Live from London's Wigmore Hall. British mezzo-soprano and Radio 3 New Generation Artist Jennifer Johnston sings Wolf, Britten and Mahler accompanied by pianist Joseph Middleton.

Wolf's settings of Goethe's poetry about the young girl Mignon occupies the first half of the concert. The sequence ending with 'Kennst du das Land' - 'Do you know the land' - Mignon's words of longing for her homeland from which she was cruelly snatched as a child. Another sort of longing ends Mahler's Ruckert Lieder as the poet of 'Ich bin der Welt abhanden gekommen' yearns for withdrawal from the everyday turmoil of the world into the most meaningful aspects of his life: his heaven, his life, and his song.

Wolf: Mignon I ('Heiss mich nicht reden')

Wolf: Mignon II ('Nur wer die Sehnsucht kennt')

Wolf: Mignon III ('So lasst mich scheinen')

Wolf: Kennst du das Land

Trad (arr. Britten): Ca' the Yowes

Trad (arr. Britten): At the mid hour of night

Trad (arr. Britten): O waly waly

Mahler: Five Ruckert Lieder: Blicke mir nicht in die Lieder;

Ich atmet einen linden Duft; Um Mitternacht; Liebst du um

Schonheit; Ich bin der Welt abhanden gekommen

Jennifer Johnston (mezzo-soprano)

Joseph Middleton (piano).

SAT 15:00 Saturday Classics (b01n9z9m)

Piano Season: Marc-Andre Hamelin

Continuing the Piano Season on the BBC, the Canadian pianist and composer Marc-André Hamelin chooses a selection of works which feature some extreme pianistic fireworks.

Marc-André Hamelin's unique blend of musicianship and virtuosity brings forth interpretations remarkable for their freedom, originality, and prodigious mastery of the piano's resources. A musician of broad musical interests and curiosity, Hamelin is renowned in equal measure for his fresh readings of the established repertoire and for his exploration of lesser known works of the 19th and 20th century, both in the recording studio and in the concert hall.

Marc-André is the last of a series of five guest presenters, who have been offering a selection of music reflecting their personal musical interests and passions related to the piano. These have been recorded for Saturday Classics especially for the Piano Season on the BBC.

SAT 17:00 Jazz Record Requests (b01n9z9p)

As the Piano Season on the BBC continues, Alyn Shipton presents listeners' requests for jazz by Jean-Yves Thibaudet and Hampton Hawes. Plus there's music by Benny Goodman and Kenny Burrell.

SAT 18:00 Opera on 3 (b01n9z9r)

Handel's Jephtha

Handel's Jephtha

Presented by Louise Fryer.

Katie Mitchell's electrifying production of Jephtha is headed by the tenor Robert Murray in the role of Jephtha, with Fflur Wyn as Iphis, Alan Ewing as Zebul and Diana Montague as Storge, with the chorus and orchestra of Welsh National Opera. The performance is conducted by Paul Goodwin.

Jephtha Robert Murray (tenor)
Zebul Alan Ewing (bass)
Storge..... Diana Montague (mezzo soprano)
Iphis Fflur Wyn (soprano)
Hamor Robin Blaze (counter-tenor)
Angel Claire Ormshaw (soprano)
Chorus and orchestra of Welsh National Opera
Conductor, Paul Goodwin

Handel's final oratorio, written as his health and eyesight were failing, takes as its theme the necessity of man's submission to destiny. Jephtha has led his people through war to a great victory, but there is a terrible catch. Before battle commenced, Jephtha rashly made a vow that, if he were to win, he would sacrifice the first person he encountered on his return. To his horror, his beloved daughter Iphis is the first to greet him on his homecoming...

SAT 21:30 The Wire (b01n9z9t)

Everything Between Us

By David Ireland.

Bold and original comic drama about two estranged sisters who come to blows on the first day of a new Truth and Reconciliation Commission in Northern Ireland.

Sandra Richardson is a politician and Member of Northern Ireland's Legislative Assembly. She's about to take her place on the new Commission when her baby sister, Teeni, turns up in a crazed mood and attacks the South African chairperson.

Sandra drags her into an office and, with the press and Stormont's security guards waiting at the other side of the door, the sisters talk about their shared and painful past for the very first time.

David Ireland is currently the Playwright-in-Residence at the Lyric Theatre, Belfast. In 2011 he won the prestigious Meyer Whitworth Award as well as the Stewart Parker Trust Radio Drama Award. Plays include What the Animals Say, Arguments for Terrorism, The End of Hope the End of Desire and Yes, so I said Yes. Everything Between Us has been adapted from the original stage play co-commissioned by Tinderbox Theatre, Belfast and Solas Nua, Washington DC.

Rob Cowan explores music by great composers that was left unfinished, including works by Britten and Saint-Saens. There is also the week's Bach Cantata: Wo soll ich fliehen hin (Where shall I flee), BWV 5, first performed on this Sunday in the Lutheran calendar in 1724.

SUN 12:00 Private Passions (b01n9zgh)

Arlene Phillips

Michael Berkeley welcomes the award-winning choreographer Arlene Phillips, who came to prominence by creating the hugely popular dance group Hot Gossip in the 1970s. After the group achieved TV fame, Arlene worked with major artists from Duran Duran and Diana Ross to Robbie Williams. TV shows and specials, large-scale events such as The Royal Variety Show and Party at the Palace, and worldwide stage productions of shows such as Flashdance, The Sound of Music, Grease and We Will Rock You. She has also directed smash-hit musicals such as Saturday Night Fever, Starlight Express, Jesus Christ Superstar, Saturday Night Fever and Joseph and the Amazing Technicolour Dreamcoat. She has appeared on many TV shows, most notably as a judge on 'Strictly Come Dancing' from 2004 until 2009. In the run-up to the 2012 Olympic Games she was appointed the government's 'Dance Tsar' to help improve the nation's fitness. She has also choreographed over 100 TV commercials in the UK and USA.

Arlene's music choices begin with the Dance at the Gym from Bernstein's West Side Story, which fuelled her love of American Jazz. As a small child, she dreamed of becoming a ballet dancer, and she has chosen the Transformation Scene from Tchaikovsky's Sleeping Beauty, one of the greatest of all ballets. Andrew Lloyd Webber is a personal friend, and the theme from his Paganini Variations is her next choice, followed by a number from the show Les Miserables, sung by Alfie Boe. Mozart's Requiem is another passion, also the famous clog dance from the Herold/Lanchbery ballet La fille mal gardee. Her other choices include music by Philip Glass, Pachelbel's Canon, which was one of the first classical pieces she heard, and an Argentine tango.

SUN 13:00 The Early Music Show (b01n9zgg)

Period Piano

Episode 2

As part of the Piano Season on the BBC, Lucie Skeaping presents the second of two programmes about the development of the piano during the eighteenth century.

Lucie continues her survey of the development of the period piano, ending in the early nineteenth century with instruments for which Beethoven and Haydn wrote music which were recognisable precursors of the modern concert grand piano.

With contributions from Steven Devine Professor of Fortepiano at Trinity College of Music, and Robert Levin.

SUN 14:00 Sunday Concert (b01n9zgm)

BBC Singers

Recorded in the Garrison Church, Copenhagen

The BBC Singers, conducted by David Hill, in a choral concert from their Scandinavian tour

Thomas Tallis: Missa Salve Intemerata
Mogens Pederson: Motets
William Byrd: Laudibus in Sanctis
Thomas Schattenberg: Motets
Michael Tippett: Dance, Clarion Air
Henry Purcell/Sven-David Sandström: Hear my prayer, O Lord
Bob Chilcott: My Prayer
Gabriel Jackson: Choral Symphony (BBC commission; broadcast premiere)

Recorded last week on their Scandinavian tour, the BBC Singers perform choral works from the 16th century as well as our own day, with a particular focus on music evoking the sights, sounds and places of the City of London.

In part one, music by the two greatest composers of Elizabethan London - Thomas Tallis and William Byrd - is placed alongside works by two Danish contemporaries. Mogens Pederson studied with Giovanni Gabrieli and later visited London with the court of the Danish King, while Thomas Schattenberg was for many years an organist in the Danish capital.

Following that, a work by Michael Tippett celebrating the Coronation of Elizabeth II is the cue for music by a famous Londoner of the 17th century - Henry Purcell, performed in modern reworkings by Sven-David Sandström and Bob Chilcott. And the programme is completed by a piece celebrating the City itself: the new work by BBC Singers' Associate Composer Gabriel Jackson (receiving its premiere performances on this tour) is a four-movement symphony for unaccompanied voices which celebrates both London itself and its vibrant multiculturalism.

SUN 16:00 Choral Evensong (b01n6v9d)

Peter King - Director of Music
Marcus Sealy - Sub Organist.

SUN 17:00 Choir and Organ (b01n9zgp)

Gabriel Jackson

Should Australian Aboriginal poetry, the work of a Bengali Hindu and a Japanese Samurai poem have any place in a requiem? Composer Gabriel Jackson clearly thinks so, and joins Aled Jones to talk about his recent new work for the Vasari Singers.

SUN 18:30 Words and Music (b01n9zgr)

Piano

Piano Season on the BBC.

Louise Jameson and Joshua Richards with poetry, prose and music celebrating the piano.

The piano inspires a kaleidoscope of musical styles, but packs an emotional punch as well. Join actors Louise Jameson and Joshua Richards for poetry and prose that celebrates love, loss, nostalgia, grim determination and joy, all inspired by the piano. With music to match, of course.

SUN 19:45 Sunday Feature (b01n9zgv)

Kashmir - the Flower of India

Jatinder Verma reports on India's troubled relationship with the contested region of Kashmir. He describes the seismic cultural change that has occurred in Kashmir since the collapse of the old world order after the fall of communism and the major eruption of violence in the region in 1989 - a local uprising rapidly became a stand off between India and Pakistan.

Jatinder Verma, the director of Tara Arts theatre company, talks to key players in the cultural life of Kashmir.

Loosely using the framework of Indian cinema, Jatinder explores the ways in which India's relationship to this beautiful Himalayan region has changed over the years.

He describes the famous syncretic elements that once defined traditional Kashmiri culture and discovers how well that culture has survived decades of violence. Do the local Sufi beliefs of the region and the particular culture of the Hindu minority continue to flourish? Now that thousands of Indian tourists are returning to the once idyllic valley, with its mountains, famous lakes and landscaped gardens, is normal life resumed?

SUN 20:30 Drama on 3 (b011pmmr)

Flare Path

Flare Path is a play by Terence Rattigan, written in 1941 and first staged in 1942. Set in a hotel near an RAF Bomber Command airbase during the Second World War, the story involves a love triangle between a pilot, his actress wife and a famous film star.

The title of the play refers to the flares that were used to light runways to allow planes to take off and land but the flare paths were also used by the Germans to target the RAF planes. In writing the play, Terence Rattigan drew on his experiences as a tail gunner in the RAF Coastal Command.

Darbar Festival 2012

Veena and Khyal Singing

Lopa Kothari introduces highlights from the Darbar Festival of Indian classical music, which took place last month at the Purcell Room in London. With music on the South Indian veena played by Chitraveena Ravikan, and singing in the North Indian khyal tradition from Shruti Sadolikar.

The Darbar Festival has established itself as the UK's premier festival of Indian classical music, a four-day event with concerts in the mornings and afternoons as well as in the evenings, allowing for performances of ragas associated with specific times of the day. The festival has always championed the lesser-known music of South India, as well as the more familiar Hindustani music. This is the last of three programmes devoted to this year's Festival.

Granados and Albeniz (1867-1916 and 1860-1909)

Episode 1

Isaac Albéniz and Enrique Granados stand at the head of a generation of composers who breathed new life into Spanish music. Having emerged from the Napoleonic wars and years of civil unrest, by the mid nineteenth century Spain was experiencing a period of social and cultural transition. The demand for piano music among the upwardly mobile bourgeois classes created opportunity for composer-pianists like Albéniz and Granados. Capitalising on the popularity of their early salon works, drawn from Chopin and the German romantics, they became part of the development of a national style of music, internationally acclaimed for their achievements.

Albéniz's childhood and training are confused by contradictory stories. Part of the blame for this lies with his early biographers, but at least some of the tales were encouraged by Albéniz himself. Whether or not he did, or didn't, and now it seems that he didn't, meet the great master of the piano, Liszt, in Budapest is one of many such examples. What is known for sure is that Albéniz's professional career as a gifted pianist began at the tender age of 8, touring the Spanish provinces with his sister Clementina. In between these recital tours, made necessary by his civil servant father's unemployment, Albéniz studied in Paris, Brussels and Leipzig.

Like Albéniz, Granados, who was 7 years younger, studied piano with Joan Pujol, before spending two years in Paris studying privately at the Conservatoire. His professional career as a solo pianist began in his twenties, and again like Albéniz, his talents were well received. In both cases, pianistic skill proved an effective way of bringing their music to the public's attention.

Donald Macleod introduces a selection of works that reflect Albéniz and Granados' pianistic concerns.

BBC National Orchestra of Wales

Episode 1

A week devoted to the BBC National Orchestra of Wales pays tribute to Welsh composer Daniel Jones (1912-1993) in this his centenary year. Pembroke-born Jones, close friend of Dylan Thomas, has a growing band of fans of whom Welsh cellist Paul Watkins can be counted. Today Watkins is the soloist in Jones's Cello Concerto with its lyrical slow movement in a concert from the Hafren, Newtown conducted by Andrew Gourlay. Dvorak's symphonic poem The Wood Dove, which reimagines the tale of a murderess spooked by the cooing of dove, begins the concert, and is coupled with the Prelude to Wagner's opera Die Meistersinger, and Beethoven's Symphony No.4. Afternoon on 3 begins with an exuberant and compelling early orchestral work by Englishman Frank Bridge, his Dance Rhapsody, written in 1908 before the composer became unsettled by the First World War. Threaded through the week, performed by a distinguished line-up of soloists and the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra, are piano concertos most of which could be labelled Romantic. Today we make an exception with a twentieth-century score by Scotsman, Eric Chisholm (1904-1965), his Piano Concerto No.1 'Piobaireachd' (Pipe music) concerto, a work infused with the soundworld and spirit of Highland Bagpipes. Gilded Goldbergs - Part 1

Live from the church of St John the Baptist, Hatherleigh

Presented by Tom Redmond

As Part of Piano Season on the BBC, Robin Holloway's Gilded Goldbergs are given a rare live performance by Huw Watkins and Ashley Wass in the atmospheric setting of one of Devon's most beautiful churches.

Robin Holloway's haunting, scintillating one hundred minute two-piano Odyssey begins and ends with simple transcription and opens out in ever-widening curves of exploration as the composer pays homage not just to JS Bach, "with his foundations in mighty structure and his head in the starry heavens," but to Robin Holloway's many musical friends, "pictured within." The result is a virtual encyclopaedia of twentieth-century musical practice, a tribute to modernism (and romanticism) as much as to Bach, embracing an emotional range from melancholic introspection to crashing triumph, extending en route to satire, burlesque and post-modern "polystylism." Yet because every variation is dedicated to a friend "pictured within" - including pianist-composer, Huw Watkins - the whole breathtaking enterprise is infused with the tender warmth of an intimate form of domestic music-making which Bach himself would have recognised.

John Keats: A New Life

Nicholas Roe's new biography of celebrated romantic poet John Keats offers a fresh reassessment of him as a tragic figure, with new keys to his artistic quest. Roe is the first biographer to provide a full and fresh account of Keats's childhood in the City of London and how it came to shape him.

John Keats: A New Life is published by Yale University Press

Michael Chabon

The Pulitzer Prize winning novelist discusses his new novel Telegraph Avenue and reflects on the joys and perils of nostalgia; his fascination with Dr Who, and what Barack Obama has in common with Sherlock Holmes.

Telegraph Avenue is published by Fourth Estate.

The Ash Tree

A devastating new fungus could mean the end of the ash tree in the UK, with fears that it's about to have a Dutch Elm-style crisis. The disease, 'chalarra', has already devastated parts of Europe - 90% of all of Denmark's ash trees have been wiped out in the last seven years. Campaigners are calling for an immediate ban on all imported ash saplings from infected areas, but the disease has already been found in newly planted trees in several parts of the UK. A government consultation on the threat to the ash is underway and will report back next week. With 30% of all of the UK's trees being ash, their death would leave a huge hole in our landscape. But with the ash tree being such an important part of European myths - what hole would the death of this fabled tree leave in our cultural landscape? Matthew Sweet talks to the novelist AS Byatt and Lecturer in English at the University of Liverpool, Alexandra Harris, about the tree known as the world ash.

Anglo-Saxon Portraits

Vortigern

Portraits of thirty ground-breaking Anglo-Saxon men and women.

The Anglo-Saxons are somewhat out of fashion, yet the half millennium between the creation of the English nation in around 550 and the Norman Conquest in 1066 was a formative one.

This major new series for BBC Radio 3 rediscovers the Anglo-Saxons through vivid portraits of thirty individuals.

Contributors include Nobel prize-winner Seamus Heaney on the Beowulf bard; departing Archbishop of Canterbury Rowan Williams on the first Archbishop of Canterbury, St Augustine; writer David Almond on the oldest surviving English poet, Caedmon; Michael Wood on King Alfred; Martin Carver on Raedwald; Richard Gameson on Eadfrith the Scribe; Helena Hamerow on the peasant-farmer; Geoffrey Robertson QC on the law-makers.

1. Vortigern: Barry Cunliffe on the king whom history has often held responsible for inviting in the first Anglo-Saxons.

Vortigern is one of the few Britons known to us by name from the transitional period between the end of Roman rule in around 400 AD and the consolidation of the Anglo-Saxon kingdoms in the early 6th Century.

He has traditionally had a bad press, having apparently invited in the legendary Anglo-Saxon brothers, Hengist and Horsa, hoping they would protect the country from barbarian attack. Of course his plan of containment failed. The rest is history.

But Barry Cunliffe, Emeritus Professor of European Archaeology at Oxford, believes Vortigern has been unfairly demonised. Against a backdrop of fading Roman rule, papal attempts to enforce a single version of Christianity, and coastal raids by migrants from across the North Sea, he paints a vivid portrait of a dynamic and individualistic king battling against the odds as one era of British history drew to a close and another began.

Producer: Beaty Rubens.

Wagner's Ring

Das Rheingold

Wagner's Das Rheingold

Presented by Donald Macleod

The first of the music dramas comprising Wagner's epic Ring Cycle launches the relay of the four Ring operas which come live from the Royal Opera House Covent Garden over the next fortnight. In Das Rheingold, the dwarf Alberich renounces love and steals the Rhinegold from which he forges a magic ring. Meanwhile Wotan, chief of the gods, has built his mighty fortress Valhalla with the help of the giants. But in order to pay them back, Wotan in turn needs to steal the Rhinegold back from Alberich. And so with this double theft Wagner sets up the theme of love versus power that reverberates throughout all four dramas.

Presentation includes interviews with the artists and also with Wagner expert John Deathridge.

2.The peasant farmer: Helena Hamerow on the countless peasant-farmers who have left behind no words or names but who shaped the English landscape as we know it today.

During the first few Anglo-Saxon centuries, almost everyone was a farmer or the child of a farmer, yet time has rendered the voices of these men, women and children silent. They could not write and are rarely mentioned by those who could.

Yet, drawing on archaeological finds and a few later written sources, archaeologist Helena Hamerow brings these shadowy people vividly back to life, while she also reveals their permanent legacy - the villages, fields, route-ways and place-names that are woven into the fabric of the English landscape itself.

Professor of Early Medieval Archaeology and Head of the School of Archaeology at the University of Oxford, Helena Hamerow describes the homes, diets and harsh everyday lives of the peasant farmer in vivid detail. She culminates with the astonishing fact that while some became free and prosperous, taking advantage of growing trade-routes and markets, many were forced to work entirely for their local lords - lords so demanding that they even claimed rights over the dung produced by their peasants' sheep.

WED 22:00 Night Waves (b01nb0qy)

Hanna Rosin, Hollywood Costume, Psychoanalysis and Climate Change, 1922

Philip Dodd discusses The End of Men and the Rise of Women with author Hanna Rosin whose new book examines the future fate of men and the qualities that make women thrive.

He experiences the world of Hollywood Costume at the Victoria & Albert museum with the exhibition's curator Deborah Nadoolman Landis - Her thesis is that film costume is not fashion but an essential story-telling device, an integral part of screenplay, and the cinderella of the cinema arts.

Engaging with climate change is something the psychoanalytic community is attempting to do in a collection of essays edited by the analyst Sally Weintrobe - what is the contribution that psychoanalysis can make to possibly the most traumatic issue facing humanity and yet one which the vast majority of us simply ignore?

And Kevin Jackson's new book 'Constellation of Genius - 1922, Modernism, Year One' puts the accomplishments of Eliot and Joyce in the context of the world in which their works appeared. What Ezra Pound called Year One of a New Era began with the publication of Ulysses and ended with the Waste Land. In between.....Hitchcock, Kandinsky, Klee, Charlie Chaplin, Louis Armstrong, the collapse of the Ottoman Empire, the death of Dada and Proust and much much more.

That's Night Waves with Philip Dodd.

WED 22:45 The Essay (b01nb0sr)

Anglo-Saxon Portraits

St Augustine

Portraits of thirty ground-breaking Anglo-Saxon men and women.

The Anglo Saxons are somewhat out of fashion, yet the half millennium between the creation of the English nation in around 550 and the Norman Conquest in 1066 was a formative one.

This major new series rediscovers the Anglo-Saxons through vivid portraits of thirty key individuals.

Contributors include Nobel prize-winner Seamus Heaney on the Beowulf bard; writer David Almond on the oldest surviving English poet, Caedmon; Michael Wood on King Alfred; Martin Carver on Raedwald; Richard Gameson on Eadfrith the Scribe; Helena Hamerow on the peasant-farmer; Geoffrey Robertson QC on the law-makers.

3. Departing Archbishop of Canterbury, Rowan Williams, on his predecessor, St Augustine, first ever Archbishop of Canterbury.

Rowan Williams tells the story of the arrival in Kent of Augustine, a nervous and untried young monk from Rome, sent by Pope Gregory to convert the barbarian Britons from their Pagan religions.

Drawing on the letters sent by Augustine to Gregory, he sympathetically imagines the feelings of isolation and uncertainty experienced by Augustine, and reflects on his particular areas of concern, many of which, to a modern eye, exhibit an unhealthy preoccupation with sex.

With his own characteristic blend of scholarship, humour and humanity, Rowan Williams paints a vivid portrait of a figure whose arrival in Kent he believes marked the true beginnings of English history and left a legacy on the history of the entire world.

Producer: Beaty Rubens.

Granados and Albeniz (1867-1916 and 1860-1909)

Episode 4

In 1890 Albéniz moved to London and then Paris, where he became a popular member of musical circles, playing and organising concerts, composing and teaching. In Spain, concert life in Barcelona was booming, so Granados was able to make full use of its possibilities. On top of his teaching, administrative and solo career, he expanded his roles to include conductor, concert organiser and adjudicator. Donald Macleod introduces music which reflects the two composers' various interests, from the impressionistic to the virtuosic.

THU 14:00 Afternoon Concert (b01nb0nc)

Episode 4

Two deeply felt contemplations of death and the transience of life today. Kenneth Leighton's Symphony No.2, a requiem dedicated to the composer's mother, is a score of great visceral power for soprano soloist orchestra and choir. Its six movements set the metaphysical poets and are nourished by the words of John Donne, Thomas Traherne and George Herbert. Mahler's Das Lied von der Erde pursues similar themes, life, death, and salvation, and for many remains unrivalled in the sublimity stakes. Birgit Remmert and John Daszak take the solo roles in a performance from Swansea's Brangwyn Hall. Mahler never heard that piece and nor did American Edward MacDowell his Piano Concerto No.2 in D Minor which is our centrepiece. The story goes that MacDowell was so captivated by a performance by the actress Ellen Terry as Beatrice in 'Much Ado About Nothing' that the second movement of this concerto was forged immediately afterwards. Presented by Penny Gore.

Die Walkure

Acts 1 and 2

Wagner's Die Walküre

Live from the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden

Presented by Donald Macleod

In the second of the Ring dramas, live from the Royal Opera House Covent Garden, we move from the realm of the gods to the human sphere, where love enters the story in the blossoming relationship between the twins Siegmund and Sieglinde. But Fricka, as guardian of marriage, insists that her husband, Wotan, strikes down Siegmund for his transgression. And we meet one of the main characters in the story, the Valkyrie, Brünnhilde who fails to carry out Wotan's order to destroy Siegmund. As a result she is stripped of her divinity and left on a fire-encircled rock.

Donald Macleod is joined by Wagner expert Barbara Eichner.

Wagner

In the late 1860s Wagner, already hailed as a genius, was in the process of bringing the first two parts of the Ring Cycle to the stage; Nietzsche was an upcoming classicist and philosopher, the youngest man ever to have been made Professor in a German university.

The friendship that developed between the two is documented in a vast collection of letters and writings, reflecting one of the most resonant cultural and philosophical scenes of 19th century Europe.

In a special edition Anne McElvoy maps the intellectual development which informed Wagner's work.

Producer Gavin Heard.

THU 21:00 The Writers' Ring Cycle (b01nb1gn)

The Twins of Whiting Bay

'The Twins of Whiting Bay' continues the series in which four prominent writers respond to the four operas in The Ring with new works of their own. Award-winning novelist and poet, Jackie Kay reads her short story inspired by the tale of Siegmund and Sieglinde in Die Walkure. Set on the Isle of Arran, a place as steeped in folklore as any Scandinavian Saga. Here selkies are the local sprites; shapeshifters, who live as seals in the sea and shed their skins to become women on land. As the seas lap the shore, storm clouds gather... Recorded in front of an audience at The Linbury Theatre at the Royal Opera House.

The producer is Frank Stirling and it is a Unique production for BBC Radio 3.

Die Walkure

Act 3

Wagner's Die Walküre

Live from the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden

Presented by Donald Macleod

In the second of the Ring dramas, live from the Royal Opera House Covent Garden, we move from the realm of the gods to the human sphere, where love enters the story in the blossoming relationship between the twins Siegmund and Sieglinde. But Fricka, as guardian of marriage, insists that her husband, Wotan, strikes down Siegmund for his transgression. And we meet one of the main characters in the story, the Valkyrie, Brünnhilde who fails to carry out Wotan's order to destroy Siegmund. As a result she is stripped of her divinity and left on a fire-encircled rock.

Donald Macleod is joined by Wagner expert Barbara Eichner.

Anglo-Saxon Portraits

Three Alpha Females

Portraits of thirty ground-breaking Anglo-Saxon men and women.

The Anglo Saxons are somewhat out of fashion, yet the half millennium between the creation of the English nation in around 550 and the Norman Conquest in 1066 was a formative one.

This major new series rediscovers the Anglo-Saxons through vivid portraits of thirty individuals, written and read by leading historians, archaeologists and enthusiasts in the field.

4.Three Alpha Females: Martin Carver brings back to life three powerful pagan women

Archaeologist Martin Carver devoted his career to re-animating the lives of individuals silenced in their graves. As he puts it: "lives which we can glimpse in a string of beads, feel in the undulating surface of a metal sword handle".

Famous for his excavations of the ship burial at Sutton Hoo, Martin is also particularly fascinated by what archaeology can reveal about the lives of women: "some say history has not been kind to women, but archaeology reports both sexes equally; and in their graves the Anglo-Saxons celebrated their women as much as their men - or more so".

Describing in loving detail the graves of what he calls three "Anglo-Saxon Alpha Females", he re-animates the lives of a privileged pagan girl from the earliest period; a "cunning woman" with her bag of tools and healing herbs; and a princess buried in her bed.

Through them, he recreates the lives of other women in the early era "before Christian government succeeded in clamping down on diversity and rewriting the rules."

Granados and Albeniz (1867-1916 and 1860-1909)

Episode 5

During the final years of his life and now in failing health, Albéniz divided his time between Nice, Paris and Tiana. Remarkably his frailty didn't diminish his powers of composition. He produced a remarkable final statement, his masterpiece Iberia, a cycle of piano pieces that evoke different aspects of Spain. It was Spain's heritage that spoke to Granados. A talented cartoonist himself, he produced two sets of piano works "Goyescas", inspired by the cartoons depicting scenes of everyday life in Madrid created by the artist Francisco Goya. Presented by Donald Macleod.

The BBC Symphony Orchestra's Michael Tippett series opens with a rare opportunity to hear the Triple Concerto, a masterpiece of his late period when he confessed that he had 'turned my back with some pleasure on the cruel world'. And complementing Radio 3's broadcasts of the Ring from the Royal Opera House, the concert concludes with Henk de Vlieger's exuberant Orchestral Adventure through all the major scenes of Wagner's great opera cycle, beginning with Das Rheingold's magnificent Prelude and culminating in the destruction of the Gods and Valhalla.

FRI 22:00 The Verb (b01nb0r4)

Mark Haddon, Frances Leviston, Sarfraz Manzoor, Scouse Dialect

Ian McMillan presents Radio 3's 'Cabaret of the word' with guests Mark Haddon, Frances Leviston, Sarfraz Manzoor, and Tony Crowley.

Sarfraz Manzoor talks about the challenge of adapting the memoir of his obsession with Bruce Springsteen into a one-man show - and what The Boss taught him about perfecting a persona for the stage.

'The Boss Rules' tours London, Otley, Birmingham and Halesworth in October and November.

Mark Haddon, poet, novelist and dramatist, shares extracts from his talk 'Swimming and Flying' and explains how adapting 'The Curious Incident of The Dog and the Night-time' helped him think about the way audiences 'hear' writing in performance. Mark's novel 'The Red House' is published by Jonathan Cape

Frances Leviston was nominated for the T.S.Eliot prize for her first poetry collection 'Public Dream' - she shares a new poem 'Pyramid' and reflects on how thinking about form and shape helped her to write differently.

'Pyramid' is to be published in The Manchester Review, and Frances' new collection 'Disinformation' is forthcoming from Picador.

Tony Crowley grew up in Liverpool and has now written the definitive history of Scouse dialect. He shares Scouse poetry and explains why Scouse is a more recent invention than Liverpudlians tend to think.

"Scouse: Social and Cultural History" published by Liverpool University Press.

Anglo-Saxon Portraits

King Raedwald

The Anglo Saxons are somewhat out of fashion, yet the half millennium between the creation of the English nation in around 550 and the Norman Conquest in 1066 was a formative one.

This major new series rediscovers the Anglo-Saxons through vivid portraits of thirty individuals by leading historians, archaeologists and enthusiasts in the field.

5.Raedwald: Martin Carver on the inhabitant of the magnificent Sutton Hoo ship burial

Martin Carver tells the sensational story of the unearthing of Britain's richest ever grave, at Sutton Hoo, in spring 1939. He goes on to describe the role of his own team from the University of York in the second wave of excavations there, and vividly recreates the life, death and burial of its probable inhabitant, King Raedwald.

With a fabulous eye for detail, he describes some of the 263 objects of gold, silver, bronze, iron, gems, leather, wood, textiles, feather and fur, laid out in a wooden chamber at the centre of a buried ship. And he uses these to recreate the life and turbulent times of this early Anglo-Saxon king and his clever, devoted wife.
