SAT 16:00 Opera on 3 (b01r99qh)
Live from the Met

Zandonai's Francesca da Rimini

Zandonai's colourful melodrama, based on a play inspired by Dante's Inferno, centres on Francesca da Rimini's fateful entanglement with the Malatesta family. Francesca has been promised in marriage to Gianciotto Malatesta, the brutal lord of Rimini, who is lame. She is tricked into thinking his handsome younger brother, Paolo, is her betrothed, and falls in love with him. Despite marrying Gianciotto, her love for Paolo develops, arousing the jealousy and suspicion of their other brother, Malatestino.

Francesca da Rimini, full of vibrant melodies, is Zandonai's only opera to achieve lasting success.

Francesca.....Eva-Maria Westbroek (soprano)
Paolo il Bello.....Marcello Giordani (tenor)
Malatestino.....Robert Brubaker (tenor)

The Startling Truths of Old World Sparrows

by Fiona Evans

We swoop into the lives of Rhoda, Stan and Ron as the action inter-cuts between three houses in the same street on a freezing, snowy day. When there's a power cut each person is faced with their worst fear.

A prize-winning innovative drama based on verbatim interviews with three elderly people, and in this new production performed by children.

Produced and directed by Pauline Harris and first broadcast in April 2013.

The producer and writer have interviewed three elderly people over a period of time and woven their verbatim interviews into this fictional day. Through the interviews each person's worst fear emerged. This was not intentional, but as it echoed in each interview it informed the narrative organically, so that each character faces their worse fear.

Rhoda's story: on the eve of her 80th birthday party, Rhoda panics as the snow prevents her from going out, she's run out of cigarettes, she can't get hold of her family, she's worried for their safety in cars on the motorway, and then the phone cuts out. She's suffered panic attacks all her life. With an aneurism the size of a large orange, she's certain she's going to die before her birthday.

Stan locks and re-locks his door. To make sure. It's his biggest fear - not to be able to defend his wife. He's had seven heart attacks but he's not afraid. He used to fight like a bear but it seems as though someone, or kids, or people are trying to get in. First he thinks its kids throwing snowballs but it seems it's more sinister.

Since Ron's stroke, he lives alone in his wheelchair. He has many different carers, a different one comes at breakfast, another at lunch, and so on, each mealtime from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. when they put him to bed. They wheel him into the living room, and there he stays until they wheel him out again. But as the snow thickens, his carer is late. He can't get to the phone - it's out of reach, and as each meal time passes, he keeps waiting for a carer to arrive.

The rendition by children aims to explore the close links of elderly people and children: the vulnerability, simplicity, fragility, resilience.

First broadcast 16th March 2013.

SAT 21:30 Pre-Hear (b01r99qp)

Lukas Foss, Goffredo Petrassi

Italian Goffredo Petrassi lived through all, if not most of the twentieth century's musical revolution and ferment, from late Romanticism, through neo-classicism to the avant garde. He took a particular attitude to music of the past and composed works that recast the musical idioms of former centuries in modern garb.

Goffredo Petrassi addressed the challenge of creating a new musical identity for himself against a largely late-Romantic background, by re-visiting the pre-Romantic past. His Partita for Orchestra consists of a Galliard, a Chaconne and a Gigue. His palette is one of rich orchestral sonority, not of pared-down austerity.

Goffredo Petrassi: Partita for Orchestra
RAI National Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Arturo Tamayo.

BBC Radio 3's Baroque Spring is a month long season of music, drama and comedy dedicated to shedding new light on the Baroque era.

SUN 09:00 Sunday Morning (b01r99tq)
Baroque Spring

For Passion Sunday, Rob Cowan introduces Telemann's cantata Der am Olberg zagende Jesus, in a period instrument recording by Accademia Daniel with bass-baritone Klaus Mertens.
There is more Baroque Spring music from Rameau and J S Bach. And Rob celebrates spring in compositions by Eric Coates, Beethoven, Schumann and Copland.
This week's double concerto is Bartok's for two pianos and percussion, played by Katia and Marielle Labèque, with the CBSO conducted by Sir Simon Rattle.

SUN 12:00 Private Passions (b00z60ts)
Amanda Vickery

Michael Berkeley's guest this week is Amanda Vickery, Professor of Early Modern History at Queen Mary, University of London, where she lectures on British social, political and cultural history. She is the author of The Gentleman's Daughter (1998) and Behind Closed Doors: At Home in Georgian England (2009), and writes and presents history documentaries for TV and radio, including A History of Private Life and Voices from the Old Bailey for BBC Radio 4, and the television series At Home with the Georgians for BBC2.

Many of her musical choices reflect aspects of everyday life in the 18th century - love and courtship as seen through the Northumbrian folksong O Waly, Waly and the duet Bei Mannern welche Liebe fühlen from Mozart's opera The Magic Flute; the intimacy and religious discipline of the closet (a movement from a Bach solo cello suite); a great public event (Handel's Music for the Royal Fireworks, written to celebrate the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1749; the contrast between women singers who were allowed to earn a living publicly (represented by an aria from Arne's 1762 opera Artaxerxes) and those who had to pursue their music-making only in the domestic sphere (a Clementi sonata for piano duet). There's also more recent music by Poulenc (Hommage à Edith Piaf), Miles Davis and Amy Winehouse, as well as The Housewife's Lament sung by Gwyneth Herbert (from A History of Private Life).

Part of Baroque Spring

First broadcast in October 2011.

SUN 18:30 Words and Music (b01r9p58)
Goodbye to All That

Goodbye to All That: words and music saying farewell to all things old: the collapse of old orders; the end of a relationship; or a farewell to one's old life. With words from Hermann Hesse, Cicely Fox Smith, Graham Greene and Shakespeare and music from Bach, Strauss and Benjamin Britten.

Robert Graves wrote that his autobiography 'Goodbye to All That' was 'a bitter leave-taking' of England. It was published after the First World War and described the collapse of society as he saw it. Taking Graves's title, this edition of Words and Music threads together different coloured goodbyes, which are very much on my mind at the moment as I bid my own farewell to Radio 3.

Although for Graves it was bitter, the end of something can offer hope, as Hermann Hesse explains in 'Stages', the opening poem of the programme. With an end comes a new beginning and the poet urges us to 'Be ready bravely and without remorse'. Hope runs through this programme like thread through a needle, finding its expression in the music of Haydn's The Creation, Parry's Songs of Farewell, and even Durufle's hymn Sanctus from his Requiem.

But of course farewells can be woven with sadness especially when marking the end of a relationship, as Alun Lewis, Graham Greene and Cole Porter evince. Strauss takes us by the hand, through sorrow and joy, to say one final goodbye to the day in 'Im Abendrot' ('At Sunset') which brings the programme to a close.

Producer: Gavin Heard.

SUN 19:45 Sunday Feature (b01r9p5b)
50 Years of the Traverse Theatre

Joyce McMillan marks the 50th anniversary of the Traverse Theatre, Edinburgh's powerhouse of new, Scottish and international drama.

The Traverse is one of the two most important theatres for new writing in Britain (the other being the Royal Court). It was founded by the artist Ricard Demarco, publisher John Calder and producer Jim Haynes, to provide 'the fringe all year round'.

In a tiny first floor room in what had been a brothel seats were arranged on either side of the acting space. Terry Lane, the first artistic director, thought this was 'traverse' rather than 'transverse'. He realised his mistake but it was too late - the name stuck, through moves to larger premises in the Grassmarket, then the purpose-built, twin auditoria complex it occupies today.

On the second night Colette O'Neil was stabbed onstage. Ever since the theatre's work has been dangerous and intense. It has nurtured major playwrights, such as Gregory Burke, David Greig and Liz Lochhead. The roster of its actors is extraordinary - Robbie Coltrane, Tilda Swinton, Alan Cumming and Siobhan Redmond. Artistic Directors include Max Stafford-Clark, Jenny Killick and Orla O'Loughlin. The theatre constantly develops new writing, acting and directorial talent: it celebrated its 50th birthday with 50 new, 500 word plays.

Joyce McMillan 'The Scotsman's' Political Columnist as well as Theatre Critic, has been reviewing Traverse shows for three decades. She interviews several of these writers, directors and actors. The programme includes location recordings and excerpts from famous productions.

Joyce considers, too, the role of the theatre in the light of recent developments, such as the founding of the National Theatre of Scotland, and the possibility of independence.

Producer: Julian May.

SUN 20:30 Drama on 3 (b01r9p88)
Sea Change

By John Fletcher.

This is the story of the battle between appeasers and anti-appeasers in the period before - and just after - the start of the Second World War, and the formation of a coalition which, like the election of 2010, abruptly ruptured all previous political alignments.

New political alliances and social organizations - which had first arisen in the Bridgewater by-election of 1938, but which had been ignored by the London-based political and media establishments - united in their fight against appeasement. Suddenly and dramatically, in May of that year, this new united front rose against the government and, in the space of only three days, overthrew it. Somewhat surprisingly, the magnificent story behind this overthrow is little known. It is a story of ferocious loyalty and betrayal, outrageous media manipulation, blackmail, prejudice - and not a little courage.

The appeasers are principally represented by Neville Chamberlain and his ruthless, over-protective spin doctor Joseph Ball - a man who would have eaten Alistair Campbell for breakfast. The anti-appeasers, battling through various foreign policy crises, are a disparate group: an Australian, Rex Leeper, the Foreign Office's press officer, constantly - and largely unsuccessfully - countering Ball's pro-appeasement spin from Number 10; Harold Nicolson MP, bravely opposing appeasement amid the innuendos of fellow backbenchers and Ball's press smears; Vernon Bartlett, a radical foreign correspondent for the News Chronicle, who is asked to stand as the anti-appeasement candidate in the Bridgewater by-election; and Guy Burgess, anti-appeasement patriot, communist and BBC political producer, who is blackmailed over his homosexuality by Ball into couriering secret messages between Chamberlain and the dictators.

The fascinating and little known story of the struggle to establish the coalition government of 1940 - a story of idealism, blackmail, and political skulduggery. Based on real events.

SUN 22:00 World Routes (b01r9p69)

The Baroque and Beyond

Episode 3

Throughout March, as part of Baroque Spring, Lucy Duran visits South America. This week, she concludes her visit to Paraguay, where she meets one of the world's greatest exponents of the Paraguayan harp Kike Pedersen. Plus, in the historic Misiones region, she records cowboy-musicians on a working ranch, and records music of the Latin American Baroque on one of the continent's only replica Baroque harps. Next week: Bolivia. Producer James Parkin.

World Routes gets to the heart of Latin American Baroque in two of the continent's most musical nations. The programme makes exclusive recordings of music and musicians that date from before or after the 16th and 17th Centuries.

In Paraguay, the focus is the harp which has become the national instrument. Duran records one of the only true replicas of a Baroque harp on the whole continent, and savours the unique atmosphere of Misiones where she stands amongst the ruins listening to young students recreating the choral sounds of the banished Jesuits. Plus there's country music recorded on a working ranch and a session with one of the world's greatest female guitarists, Berta Rojas.

In La Paz, Bolivia, Duran records the traditional panpipes of Lake Titicaca at around 4000m above sea level. Further down the mountain, there's the Andean sounds of Bolivia's most celebrated group: Los Masis. They're based very close to the spot in Sucre where Simon Boliva declared independence for the continent. And there's music from Amazonian Indians, and Baroque music written by indigenous composers in the 17th Century: performed these days by a youth orchestra in the exquisitely renovated churches of San Jose de Chiquitos.

SUN 23:00 Jazz Line-Up (b01r9p6c)

Mark Lockheart. Marius Neset Quartet

Julian Joseph presents concert music by tenor saxophonist Marius Neset and his quartet, recorded at the 2013 Southport "Jazz on a Winter's Weekend", featuring the stellar line-up of pianist Ivo Neame, bassist Jasper Hoiby and drummer Anton Eger. Plus an interview with saxophonist Mark Lockheart about his latest project 'Ellington in Anticipation' which sees him deconstruct some of the Duke's most famous compositions and arrange these into a fascinating set of new music. The impressive line-up of the 'Ellington In Anticipation' project includes Seb Rochford (drums) Liam Noble (piano) Tom Herbert (bass) Finn Peters (alto sax), James Allsop (clarinets) and Emma Smith (violin).

MON 06:30 Breakfast (b01r9ph0)

Monday - Petroc Trelawny

Petroc Trelawny presents Radio 3's classical breakfast show, celebrating the Baroque Spring season. Featuring Breakfast Forty-Eight - a daily morning dose of the 48 Preludes and Fugues of J.S. Bach's Well-Tempered Clavier. As part of Breakfast's Musical Map of Britain, running throughout 2013, Breakfast will be asking listeners to highlight Baroque connections to their area of the UK. BBC Radio 3's Baroque Spring is a month long season of music, drama and comedy dedicated to shedding new light on the Baroque era.

MON 09:00 Essential Classics (b01r9ph2)

Monday - Rob Cowan

Essential Classics guests in the month-long Baroque Spring season include baroque music enthusiasts, and this week Rob Cowan is joined by the philosopher Alain de Botton. Alain has written on the topics of love, travel, architecture and literature, and his books have been described as a 'philosophy of everyday life.' His first book, Essays in Love, was published when he was twenty-three, and has sold two million copies worldwide. Other titles include How Proust can Change your Life (which earned him a global audience) and The Art of Travel. In 2009 he was appointed Heathrow's first Writer-in-Residence and wrote a book about his experiences, A Week at the Airport. His latest book, Religion for Atheists, was published in the UK last year.

Alain also started and helps to run a school in London called

The School of Life, dedicated to a new vision of education, which challenges traditional conceptions about knowledge, directing it towards life, rather than knowledge for its own sake. He has had several TV series, including The Perfect Home and Philosophy: A Guide To Happiness, and in 2011 he presented a series of talks for A Point of View (BBC Radio 4).

Each week in Baroque Spring we feature pioneers of the Baroque repertoire as our Artists of the Week, and this week's artist is Christopher Hogwood.

Each day on Essential Classics throughout the season, Simon Heighes offers his 'Baroque Bites?' insights into what is so special about the Baroque period: quirky looks at the composers; glimpses of the world as it was at the time; the musical treasures of the period. These Baroque Bites will all be available as downloads after broadcast.

9am

A selection of music, including the Essential CD of the Week: S'il vous plait ? Mie Miki (accordion), BIS CD 1804

9.30-10.30am

A daily brainteaser, and performances by our Baroque Spring Artist of the Week, Christopher Hogwood, one of the great pioneers of early music performance.

Christopher Hogwood (conductor).

MON 12:00 Composer of the Week (b01r9ph4)

Antonio Vivaldi (1678-1741)

Vivaldi and Venice

As part of Baroque Spring, a month long season of Baroque music and culture, Donald Macleod explores the life and music of Vivaldi, beginning with the relationship between composer and his home town of Venice.

As Friedrich Nietzsche put it, "When I search for a word to replace that of Music, I can think only of Venice." Vivaldi lived in Venice almost his entire life and had fingers in many Venetian pies: he played the violin at St Mark's, wrote sacred music for services and festivals at some of the hundreds of churches, convents and oratories in the city, provided operas for the famous Carnival and taught at the Pietà. This week - the story of the perfect storm: one of the most prolific composers the world has ever known, born (during an earthquake) into the most musical city in Europe.

MON 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (b01r9ph6)

St Lawrence String Quartet

Today's live Wigmore Hall lunchtime concert is given by the American-based St. Lawrence String Quartet, whose stated mission is to bring every piece of music to the audience in vivid colour. Their programme comprises two staples of the chamber music repertoire, Haydn's 1793 String Quartet in D, and the third of Beethoven's mighty Razumovsky Quartets.

Presented by Catherine Bott.

Haydn: String Quartet in D Op. 71 No. 2

Beethoven: String Quartet in C Op. 59 No. 3 'Razumovsky'

St. Lawrence String Quartet.

MON 14:00 Afternoon Concert (b01r9ph8)

Baroque Spring

Episode 1

Penny Gore this week highlights Baroque music making from around Europe.

There's a focus on the seldom-performed dramatic oratorios heard in eighteenth century Naples, Rome and Venice including the first performance in modern times of Pergolesi's 'Seven Words,' Porpora's Vespers and Vivaldi's Juditha Triumphans, commissioned to celebrate the victory of the Republic of Venice over the Turks during the siege of Corfu in 1716 and first performed by the girls of a Venetian orphanage. There will also be a chance to hear Johan Helmich Roman's 'Wedding Music,' the Swedish equivalent of Handel's Firework's Music - written for performance at Drottningholm Palace in 1744 and settings of the Magnificat by Jan Zelenka, Johann Kuhnau - Johann Sebastian Bach's predecessor at St Thomas' church Leipzig - and by the great master himself, all performed by the Bach Collegium of Japan directed by Masaaki Suzuki.

Today there's Handel's youthful Dixit Dominus written in Italy and his Water Music first heard from a barge on the River Thames in honour of George I. There's also the chance to sample a similarly festive work by one of Handel's Danish contemporaries and a setting of the Magnificat by Bach's predecessor at St Thomas's Church, Leipzig.

Vivaldi: Vivaldi Concerto in C for soprano recorder RV 444
Giardino Armonico, Milan, Giovanni Antonini (recorder and director)

2.10pm

Johann Kuhnau: Magnificat
Joanne Lum (soprano), Hannah Morrison (soprano), Margot Oitzinger (contralto), Makoto Sakurada (tenor), Dominik Wörne (bass), Bach Collegium Japan, Masaaki Suzuki (director)

MON 16:30 In Tune (b01r9phb)

Ryo Terakado, Clare Hammond, Robert Mitchell, Dominic West

Suzu Klein's guests include Ryo Terakado, exponent of a long-forgotten Baroque instrument - the shoulder cello. Also today, actor Dominic West reads poetry from the Baroque era - the first of a two-week series as part of Radio 3's Baroque Spring season.

There's more live music from pianists Clare Hammond and Robert Mitchell as they prepare for Leftitude - a festival in Camden's The Forge dedicated to left-handed piano repertoire.

Main headlines are at 5pm and 6pm.

MON 22:00 Night Waves (b01r9phg)

David Bowie, Javier Marias, David Cannadine

Matthew Sweet talks to the Spanish novelist Javier Marias about his new book 'The Infatuations' in which the murder novel becomes a metaphysical enquiry into death, love and morality. What is truth? Love? Why is it threatening for the dead to return to us?

In his new book 'The Undivided Past' David Cannadine is looking beyond the supposed clash of religions, classes and civilisations to the things that unite us with a plea to those engaged in public debate to see our common humanity across the world and history. Is an attempt to 'undivide' the past a useful tool for re-emphasising what brings us together in the present? Or does a "History Beyond Our Differences" lead to confusion in the absence of polarised views?

But there's always David Bowie - he never lost control, and tonight Night Waves takes stock of the man who sold the world as a new exhibition 'David Bowie is....' gets set to open at the Victoria and Albert Museum later this week.

MON 23:00 Jazz on 3 (b01r9phx)

Henri Texier Trio, Trevor Watts/Veryan Weston Duo

Performances by French bassist Henri Texier and his trio, and free-improvising duo Trevor Watts and Veryan Weston, recorded at last year's London Jazz Festival.

On the face of it, these two groups adopt strikingly different approaches to improvised music: Texier's melodic, often folksy themes are built on grooves driven by his warm, virtuosic bass playing; Watts and Weston, on the other hand, shape their music as they go, jumping restlessly and spontaneously from one idea to another. But they have more in common than meets the eye. The trio, with Henri's son Sébastien on reeds and Louis Moutin on drums, has an open-ness about it that reflects Texier senior's grounding in the more avant-garde end of the music. Meanwhile, there's often a distinctive jazz flavour to the free-roaming journeys that Watts (saxophone) and Weston (piano) embark upon, taking in epic high-points and spikier, more playful moments along the way.

Presenter: Jez Nelson
Producers: Peggy Sutton & Chris Elcombe.

Antonio Vivaldi (1678-1741)

Vivaldi and the Pieta

As part of Baroque Spring, a month long season of Baroque music and culture, Donald Macleod explores the life and works of Vivaldi.

Venice was famous for its Ospedali, foundations set up to take care of orphaned or otherwise unwanted children. Vivaldi had a long relationship with the Pieta, which took in girls and trained them in domestic skills and in music-making. Vivaldi was employed as a violin teacher, and was soon writing music for the girls to sing and play too. Very quickly, no trip to Venice was complete without attending a service or performance at the Pieta. As one visitor wrote home, "it leads in the perfection of symphonic music .. they play the violin, the recorder, the organ, the oboe, the cello, the bassoon, in short, there is no instrument large enough to frighten them ..".

TUE 19:30 Radio 3 Live in Concert (b01r9qfj)

Carducci Quartet - Haydn, Britten, Shostakovich

Live from Cardiff University Concert Hall

Presented by Nicola Heywood Thomas

Cardiff University Quartet in Residence, the Carducci Quartet, perform two powerful works from the 20th century repertoire along with a mature masterpiece from the 'Father of the String Quartet'

Haydn: String Quartet in C, op.54 no.2

Shostakovich: String Quartet no.11

c. 2015 Interval Music

Britten: String Quartet no.2

Britten's Quartet No.2, composed in 1945 for the 250th anniversary of Purcell's death, was written in the wake of a tour of Germany to play for survivors of the Nazi concentration camps. In the huge, final 'Chacony' movement Britten uses Purcell's technique of variations over a repeated bass line to build a telling climax that, despite its triumphal final chords, seem infused with sadness and regret.

Shostakovich's String Quartet No.11 also seems filled with thoughts of mortality. It was composed after a serious illness which marked a beginning to the long, slow decline of Shostakovich's final decade. The strange, fractured music seems to be infused with fear and thoughts of impending death, with none of the sense of resignation that would come in his later works.

The concert begins with a quartet from the composer who, arguably, invented the String Quartet form and brought it to maturity. His Op.54 No.2 was written in 1788 when he was at the height of his powers and on the cusp of becoming the most famous composer on the world. The last movement has a typical bit of Haydn subversion, leaving the usual fast finale until very late in the music, and then immediately throwing it over for a slow and gentle ending.

TUE 22:00 Night Waves (b01r9q6f)

Noam Chomsky, Anthony Seldon

Noam Chomsky came to prominence in the 1950s for his work in linguistics and the philosophy of language. But in the 1960s he became a vocal opponent of the US war in Vietnam, and he's been one of the leading critics of US foreign policy ever since.

In London to deliver the Edward W Said Lecture on Middle Eastern Politics, Philip Dodd meets Chomsky for an extended conversation on American individualism, the role of reason, and a life spent holding authority to account.

Continuing the theme of authority and power, Philip goes to Wellington College in Berkshire to talk to the school's Master, Anthony Seldon. As well as being an educationalist and head of a major institution, Seldon has written biographies of Thatcher, Major, Blair and Brown, and brings a very different perspective to bear on how power operates in society.

Produced by Luke Mulhall.

The Book that Changed Me

Othello

Poet and musician Musa Okwonga on how Shakespeare's Othello mirrored his experience of isolation as a young black British-Ugandan growing up in a predominantly white environment. Feeling out of place at work and in his own skin, reading Othello provided an outlet for his demons and eventually the courage to create a new life as a poet.

Vivaldi and Anna

As part of Baroque Spring, a month long season of Baroque music and culture, Donald Macleod explores the life and works of Vivaldi.

Vivaldi met the singer Anna Giro during a trip to Mantua and they quickly became inseparable. He wrote role after role for her, and they toured for months at a time, putting on operas as they went, with Anna in the starring role. According to Vivaldi's librettist, she "did not have a beautiful voice, nor was she a great musician, but she was pretty and attractive, she acted well and had protectors: one needs nothing more to deserve the role of a prima donna."

Penny Gore presents the Vespers for the Assumption by Nicola Antonio Porpora.

The fabled Naples-born singing teacher of the great castrati of the day, sometime rival to Handel in London and teacher of the young Haydn in Vienna, Porpora was once one of the most fashionable composers of the Baroque.

This afternoon there is a rare chance to hear a complete performance of his extended Vespro per la Festività dell'Assunta which was first performed in Venice in 1744 by the girls of the Ospedaleto, one of four orphanages that specialised in music, and a rival to Vivaldi's Pietà. Maestro Porpora of the Ospedaleto would later become a character in George Sand's novel Consuelo.

Haydn

Live from the Bridgewater Hall, Manchester

Presented by Tom McKinney

The Hallé conducted by Mark Elder play Haydn's "London" Symphony and Mahler's Symphony No 4, with Ailish Tynan as soprano soloist.

Haydn Symphony No.104, 'London'

Hallé

Ailish Tynan soprano

Sir Mark Elder, conductor |

Mahler believed the symphony 'must be like the world - it must embrace everything' and here he puts his words into glorious practice. The first movement gestures back to Viennese classicism, the second portrays the dark fiddler of German folklore and the third is a sublime Beethovenian slow movement. Finally comes the wide-eyed innocence of the fourth movement, a child's vision of the heavenly life with sweets in abundance and bread baked by angels. The concert opens with Haydn's 'London' Symphony, No 104 - entertaining, surprising and ever-eloquent.

WED 22:00 Night Waves (b01r9q6r)

Baroque Spring

Rana Mitter in a special edition as part of Radio 3's Baroque Spring season, talks to artists and designers about the legacy of baroque and its influence today.

Seaton Delaval Hall, in Northumberland, has been described as a landmark of the English Baroque and the art historian Anthony Geraghty explains why. It was John Vanburgh's final building and in 2009, after a vigorous campaign by local people and international architects, was taken over by the National Trust. It has been closed for major restoration works and will reopen to the public later this month.

Trying to get to grips with the idea of the Baroque can prove somewhat slippery. Is it an historical period, an identifiable style, a plank in the Catholic counter-reformation or an attitude that transcends history? Helen Hills, Anthony Julius and Stephen Calloway discuss the idea of the Baroque with Rana Mitter.

And the avant-garde poet Christian Bök joins them to explore the resonances of the Baroque today. Can you put on "baroque glasses" to view the world?

The writer and woodcarver David Esterley was involved in restoring the intricate limewood carvings of Grinling Gibbons which were damaged in the fire at Hampton Court Palace in the 1990's. His new memoir explores the art of woodcarving and maps the process of restoration as a kind of illuminating struggle with the mysterious master craftsman.

9.30-10.30am

A daily brainteaser, and performances by our Baroque Spring Artist of the Week, Christopher Hogwood, one of the great pioneers of early music performance.

10.30am

This week Rob Cowan is joined by the philosopher Alain de Botton, a keen Baroque enthusiast. Alain has written on the topics of love, travel, architecture and literature, and his books have been described as a 'philosophy of everyday life.' His first book, Essays in Love, was published when he was twenty-three, and has sold two million copies worldwide. Other titles include How Proust can change your Life (which earned him a global audience) and The Art of Travel. In 2009 he was appointed Heathrow's first Writer-in-Residence and wrote a book about his experiences, A Week at the Airport. His latest book, Religion for Atheists, was published in the UK last year.

Alain also started and helps to run a school in London called The School of Life, dedicated to a new vision of education, which challenges traditional conceptions about knowledge, directing it towards life, rather than knowledge for its own sake. He has had several TV series, including The Perfect Home and Philosophy: A Guide To Happiness, and in 2011 he presented a series of talks for the BBC Radio 4 programme, A Point of View.

Antonio Vivaldi (1678-1741)

La Chiesa

As part of Baroque Spring, a month long season of Baroque music and culture, Donald Macleod explores the sacred music of Vivaldi.

For a small city, Venice in the eighteenth century was teeming with churches, convents and oratories. It's estimated that 1 in 20 adult Venetians was a priest or a nun, and that included Vivaldi himself. His two careers, as musician and priest, ran side by side for his whole life (although he applied himself to one with rather more enthusiasm than the other). The result was a collection of glorious music for use in Church, where huge congregations would gather and unable to applaud, would show their appreciation of the music of the Maestro by shuffling their feet and coughing.

Episode 3

Vienna Piano Trio at LSO St Luke's.

The Vienna Piano Trio perform at LSO St Luke's as part of their residency their last year, playing two works by composers with strong Viennese connections, as well as Ravel's famous trio.

Haydn dedicated his Piano Trio in C to a talented amateur pianist, Therese Bartolozzi, which may explain the tricky piano part. Beethoven wrote his Allegretto in B flat for the ten-year-old daughter of an acquaintance - dedicating it to his "little friend" as "encouragement in pianoforte playing". Ravel's Trio was written as the clouds of the First World War were gathering over Europe and although composition was at first slow, the outbreak of war in August 1914 spurred on Ravel to finish the work quickly so that he could enlist in the army.

Haydn: Piano Trio in C major, HobXV/27

Episode 4

Penny Gore presents Vivaldi's masterful oratorio Juditha Triumphans devicta Holofernis barbarie, written for performance by the orphans of the Ospedale della Pietà in Venice

The story of Judith and her victory on the invading Holofernes was an allegory of Venice defeating the invading Turks in Corfu: the Assyrian king Nebuchadnezzar sends an army against Israel to demand overdue tributes. Under the leadership of the general Holofernes, the Assyrians lay siege to the town of Bethulia and are about to conquer it. The young Jewish widow Judith goes to him to implore mercy. He falls in love with her and she indulges him. After a rich banquet and having drunk much wine, Holofernes falls asleep. Judith beheads him, flees the enemy camp, and returns victorious to Bethulia.

Holofernes, Assyrian General... Delphine Galou (contralto),
Juditha, a young Bethulian widow..... José Maria Lo Monaco (mezzo-soprano), Vagaus, eunuch, Holofernes's squire..... Vivica Genaux (mezzo-soprano),
Abra, Juditha's handmaid..... Maria Hinojosa Montenegro (soprano),
Ozias, high priest of Bethulia..... Alessandra Visentin (contralto),
Assyrian soldiers and Bethulian women..... Capella Cracoviensis Vocal Ensemble,
Accademia Bizantina, Ottavio Dantone (harpichord and director)
[recorded at the Misteria Paschalia Festival, Krakow in April 2012]

Based on the the Book of Judith, Vivaldi's Judith triumphant over the barbarians of Holofernes was commissioned to celebrate the victory of the Republic of Venice over the Turks during the siege of Corfu in July 1716 and in this, his sole surviving oratorio, Vivaldi certainly rose to the occasion: the orchestra deploys an extraordinary panoply of exotica including timpani, 2 trumpets, mandolin, four theorbos, five violas all'inglese (viola da gamba), a viola d'amore, two recorders and two soprano chalumeaux, the latter depicting the chirping turtle doves.

Royal Liverpool Philharmonic - Mahler

Live from Philharmonic Hall in Liverpool.

Presented by Simon Hoban

Vassily Petrenko conducts the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra in Mahler's Symphony No.10 - the unfinished turbulent swan-song, completed in the 1960s by Deryck Cooke.

Mahler, compl. Deryck Cooke: Symphony No.10

Vassily Petrenko (conductor)
Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra

It was the musical equivalent of raising the Titanic. When musicologist Deryck Cooke rescued Mahler's tantalisingly incomplete 10th symphony and put it back into the concert hall, he salvaged one of the most moving masterpieces of 20th century art: a huge, profoundly-felt meditation on the meaning of life itself. Great cries of pain turn into soaring songs of love, and musical puzzles yield up the most intimate of secrets. It's a musical experience that leaves no-one who hears it unchanged. Under the baton of Vasily Petrenko, whose sold-out Mahler Edition concerts over the last two years have wowed audiences and critics alike, this should be an emotionally charged high point of the season.

THU 22:00 Night Waves (b01r9q72)

The Book of Mormon, Constitutions, Press Regulation, Lina Prokofiev

On tonight's multi-volume Night Waves, Anne McElvoy will be opening with The Book of Mormon: the new musical from the writers of the controversial cartoon South Park. Susannah Clapp has a first night review.

Anne will be examining the fine words and good intentions of national constitutions. As Zimbabwe votes in favour of a new one, Albie Sachs, one of the architects of South Africa's new constitution, Chibli Mallat, who has advised Iraq and Arab Spring countries on drawing up their own constitutions, and the journalist and author Simon Jenkins discuss whether constitutions aid or impede democracy.

Also, in light of this week's news of a cross-party deal on press regulation established by Royal Charter, the satirist and editor of Private Eye, Ian Hislop, and British media expert James Curran discuss whether lessons can be learned by examining the historical relationship between the state and the press.

And, a new biography of Lina Prokofiev - aspiring singer and wife of the composer and pianist Sergei Prokofiev - which reveals the disastrous consequences of the couple's move back to the newly established Soviet Union. The author, Simon Morrison, explains what happened.

Shostakovich: Symphony No. 8

In the wake of the huge success of the Leningrad Symphony, in 1943 Shostakovich returned to the subject of war in his Eighth Symphony. This time he wanted to reflect on the tragedy of a war in which he said, "twenty-seven million Soviet lives were lost." At the time though, its popularity with audiences wasn't matched by the Soviet authorities, who denounced it as counter-revolutionary. The Minister of Culture went so far as to declare it "repulsive and ultra individualist" and by 1948 it had almost disappeared from the repertory. Stephen Johnson examines the forces at play in the Eighth Symphony, a work seen by the composer as a "poem of suffering".
