SAT 12:15 Music Matters (b041vf8m)
David Zinman, Khovanskygate. Army Bands, Rameau's Zais

Tom Service talks to conductor David Zinman as he moves on from the Zurich Tonhalle after nearly 20 years at the artistic helm of the Swiss orchestra. He travels to the midlands to review Birmingham Opera Company's 'Khovanskygate' a reworking of Mussorgsky's opera Khovanschina which raises strikingly modern parallels with a Russia divided by powerful conservative forces and growing Westernising influence.
Following last summer's report into the future of the British Army Tom learns about the new Army bands which are being set up - the UK's first full-time professional brass bands! He also visits rehearsals and meets the team behind the first UK production of Rameau's opera Zais given by the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment 250 years after the composer's death.

SAT 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (b041vf8p)

18th Century Season: Rolando Villazon

As part of the BBC's 18th Century Season, tenor Rolando Villazon chooses some of his favourite moments from Mozart's operas, alongside music by other composers that was inspired by Mozart's wonderful operatic melodies.

The programme includes music from Die Schuldigkeit des Ersten Gebots, Lucio Silla, Così fan Tutte, Die Zauberflote, Clemenza di Tito, Le Nozze di Figaro and Don Giovanni, as well as sets of variations on Mozart's themes composed by Chopin and Beethoven.

SAT 16:00 Sound of Cinema (b041vf8t)
Robots, Cyborgs and AI

Matthew Sweet with film scores inspired by robots, cyborgs and artificial intelligence in the week that sees the release of Wally Pfister's "Transcendence" and a new score by Mychael Danna.
Matthew's Classic Score of the Week is Gottfried Huppertz's music for Fritz Lang's "Metropolis".

Also in the programme is music by Bruce Broughton, John Williams, Bernard Herrmann, Thomas Newman, James Horner, Paul Misraki and David Arnold.

SAT 17:00 Jazz Record Requests (b041vf8w)

Alyn Shipton selects music from listeners' letters and emails, discovering how Woody Herman and Muggsy Spanier first opened up the world of jazz for some requesters. There's hot jazz from Henry Red Allen and contemporary fare from saxophonist Charles Lloyd and his quartet. Plus there's classic jazz from Jelly Roll Morton, and music from a variety of jazz flautists.

SAT 18:00 Opera on 3 (b041vf8y)
Live from the Met

Mozart's Così fan Tutte

Ferrando and Guglielmo are so confident about the virtue of their lovers, the sisters Fiordiligi and Dorabella, that when Don Alfonso proposes a wager that he can prove them unfaithful, they are happy to accept. The young officers are made to pretend to be called to war, before returning disguised as Albanians to woo the sisters. It's not long before the ladies succumb to temptation, but with the wrong man. Susanna Philips and Isabel Leonard sing the fickle sisters, and Matthew Polenzani and Rodion Pogossow are the men whose confidence in love is shattered.

Presented by Margaret Juntwait and Ira Siff.

Fiordiligi.....Susanna Phillips (Soprano)
Dorabella.....Isabel Leonard (Sopra-soprano)
Despina.....Danielle de Niese (Soprano)
Ferrando.....Matthew Polenzani (Tenor)

Frontiers Festival 2014

Robert Worby presents highlights from the recent Frontiers Festival in Birmingham which brought together the experimental sounds of downtown New York with those of Birmingham's own vibrant new music scene. As well as pieces by Earle Brown, Elliott Sharp and the late Robert Ashley, Robert visits a graphic score exhibition at Birmingham's new library and meets its curator Joe Scarffe.

In the fourth of our new series Composers' Rooms, Sara Mohr-Pietsch visits Dai Fujikura at his London studio inside a converted fire station.

And to mark the 50th birthday this year of the American Nonesuch label, a look back at one of its pioneering early electronic albums, Morton Subotnick's Silver Apples of the Moon, in a feature that includes contributions from Four Tet's Kieran Hebden and writer Rob Young.

Operatic Arias

James Jolly continues the programme's sequence of Beethoven violin sonatas with No. 8 in G (Opus 30 No.3). He also discovers how composers from Beethoven to Sarasate have been inspired to create new music based on operatic arias. And there are archive recordings by the great soprano Margaret Price.

SUN 12:00 Private Passions (b041vfxn)

Jonathan Meades

Writer and broadcaster Jonathan Meades's fascination with architecture began on a school trip to Marsh Court in Stockbridge, Hampshire - designed by that great architect of English Country Houses Edwin Lutynens. Subsequently, in a broadcasting career which spans 40 years, he has written and performed in more than 50 television shows on a wide range of topographical subjects: from shacks to garden cities, to buildings associated with vertigo; from beer and pigs, to the architecture of Hitler and Stalin. He was also a food critic for 15 years, winning the coveted Glenfiddich Award in 1999, and has written three novels and a memoir: "Encyclopedia of Myself". His latest television series, "Bunkers, Brutalism and Bloody-mindedness", was screened on BBC 4 in February.

He now lives in the iconic Corbusier building, Cité Radieuse in Marseille - and his musical choices reflect his adopted country's love of chanson: French singer / songwriter Barbara's "Ma Plus Belle Histoire d'Amour" features, as does Jacques Brel's Mijn Vlakke Land. Film was not only Jonathan Meades's chosen career; his love of cinema also provided him with a rich musical education. Among his musical choices are Hans Werner Henze's soundtrack to the Alain Resnais film Muriel, and The Aquarium, from Saint-Saëns's Carnival of the Animals, which Terence Malick used in his ground breaking film Days of Heaven.

SUN 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (b0414z91)

SUN 14:00 The Early Music Show (b041vfxq)

18th Century Season Composer Profile: Carl Friedrich Abel

As part of the BBC's 18th Century Season, Lucie Skeaping looks at the life and music of the German composer Carl Friedrich Abel, who spent most of his career in London.

Abel arrived in London in 1754 as a virtuoso viola-da-gamba player, and soon became one of the biggest names on the London music scene. Along with his fellow German musician JC Bach, Abel set up England's first subscription concerts, which allowed them to promote not only their own pieces, but also those of other composers - including Joseph Haydn.

He composed many pieces for his own instrument, the viola da gamba, as well as trio sonatas, concertos for the new-fangled square piano and early forays into the classical-style symphony which were a huge influence on the young Mozart.

SUN 18:45 Sunday Feature (b041vg00)
Educating Isaac

Could your child compose like Mozart? While searching for a creative and fun way to teach his 3-year-old son, Nick Baragwanath discovered a forgotten history of music completely different from the usual dull routine of practice and graded exams. In the 18th century, the conservatoires (orphanages) of Naples developed an education system that enabled destitute children to become professional-level composers and performers by their early teens. Almost every famous musician of the time was trained in this way, in what is an astonishing untold rags-to-riches story. Airbrushed from history by Romantic writers, who valued the idea of spontaneous genius above the reality of craft training, the real story of 'classical' music is finally coming to light. And modern conservatoires, such as the Royal Academy of Music, are taking notice. Could this revival transform the way we teach children music?

The 18th century is widely regarded as a golden age for European music, producing Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. But it is often forgotten that professional music-making was dominated by Italians, especially those trained at one of the Neapolitan orphanage-conservatories. How many music lovers today could name even one of the 'big four' put forward by Charles Burney in 1770: Jommelli, Galuppi, Piccinni and Sacchini? Not to mention others such as Pergolesi, Scarlatti, Paisiello, Cimarosa, etc.

They stand witness to an incredible rags-to-riches story, testament to the egalitarian ideals of the enlightenment.

Poverty, disease and prostitution were rife in 18th-century Naples, resulting in a large number of abandoned children. Conservatories took them in and taught them a lucrative trade: music. Discipline was a constant problem, and the conservatories were policed by special priests chosen for their burliness. But they developed an education system which devolved on creativity, enabling disadvantaged children to compose immaculate operas and symphonies by their early teens. Through what was probably the most effective music education system ever devised, poor children could become famous artists, rubbing shoulders with princes and the super-rich. The penniless 17-year-old Haydn had the good fortune to learn this system from Neapolitan maestro Nicola Porpora (teacher of Farinelli), in return for cleaning his boots.

Recently uncovered by scholars, 18th-century methods are gaining currency in a modern system often criticised for stifling individualism. Nicholas Baragwanath has started to train his 3-year-old son, Isaac, in the old Neapolitan way. He travels to Naples to uncover the forgotten story of the musicians who were really famous during the 18th century and to find out how they became so skilled in such a short time. Their methods involved giving children simple musical games and puzzles to play with, rather than teaching them how to read a score 'correctly'. He visits an 8-year-old girl in Surrey who has already been trained through these methods and who has composed critically acclaimed operas and string quartets. He investigates what this might mean for modern music education by speaking with educators from the UK, USA, Italy, and Switzerland.

SUN 19:30 Radio 3 Live in Concert (b041vg02)
LSO - Mahler's Symphony No 7

Live from the Barbican Hall, London

Presented by Ian Skelly

The LSO plays Mahler's Symphony no.7, conducted by Danielle Gatti.

Mahler: Symphony no.7

London Symphony Orchestra
conductor Danielle Gatti

After a gap of almost two decades Daniele Gatti returns to the LSO with a programme consisting of a single work, Mahler's awe-inspiring Seventh Symphony. It is more enigmatic than some of his other symphonies; Mahler is at a musical turning point at the start of the 20th century.

SUN 22:00 Drama on 3 (b01g4vv1)
Shakespeare on 3

Romeo and Juliet

Shakespeare's quick witted summer tragedy, with Trystan Gravelle and Vanessa Kirby as the lovers, and David Tennant as the Prince. In a town full of hatred, where the streets ring with the Capulet Montague feud, and swords are too easily drawn, Romeo and Juliet find each other, and love, and never let go.

Part of Radio 3's celebration of the 450th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth. Following a new production of Antony and Cleopatra, Shakespeare's epic tale of mature love, this is a chance to hear his tragedy of young love, the two plays bridging the week of his birthday.

Sound Design, Colin Guthrie

First broadcast in 2012.

Johann Christian Bach (1735-1782)

Lured by the Stage

Donald Macleod introduces music and stories from the life of Johann Christian Bach, these days best known as the youngest son of JS Bach, but in his day, the most famous Bach of all. Today, we follow JC Bach as he veers away from a typically Bach career as a provincial organist, and heads instead to Italy, and opera.

MON 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (b041vg74)

Wigmore Hall: Toby Spence

Live from Wigmore Hall in London, tenor Toby Spence and pianist Julian Milford perform Schubert's last song-set, Schwanengesang. Published shortly after his death, it contains fourteen settings of poems by Ludwig Rellstab, Heinrich Heine and Johann Gabriel Seidl, including the well-known 'Ständchen' and eerie 'Der Doppelgänger'.

Presented by Sara Mohr-Pietsch.

MON 14:00 Afternoon Concert (b041vg76)

BBC National Orchestra of Wales

Episode 1

Katie Derham presents a week of programmes showcasing the BBC National Orchestra of Wales with performances from recent tours. Plus the orchestra in concert live from BBC Hoddinott Hall on Tuesday and a live concert by the BBC Singers from St Paul's Knightsbridge on Thursday.

Young violinist Callum Smart attracted attention when, at the age of just thirteen, he won the strings category of the 2010 BBC Young Musicians Competition. Since then he has toured as a soloist and chamber musician all whilst still at school. He joins the BBC National Orchestra of Wales to perform Mozart's Concerto no. 5 in A major, K.219. One of the first ever Radio 3 New Generation Artists back in 1999, cellist Alban Gerhardt is no stranger to being a precociously talented young string player himself. He joins the orchestra to play Barber's Op.22 concerto. Plus Beethoven, Bartok, and Schubert's 9th Symphony, the 'Great'.

Beethoven: Leonore - overture no. 1, Op.138

in Utica)

Live from Wigmore Hall, London. Swedish mezzo Ann Hallenberg joins Christophe Rousset and his high-energy ensemble Les Talens Lyriques for a concert featuring arias written for the famous castrato Farinelli - not least by his brother Riccardo Broschi. If you love Handel, don't miss this opportunity to hear little-known gems by several of the other star composers of Baroque opera - exploiting the vocal talents of the man who was for years its star performer.

MON 22:00 Sunday Feature (b0419n4c)

Shakespeare: For and Against

As celebrations begin to mark Shakespeare's 450th birthday, playwright Mark Ravenhill challenges our adulation of the Bard and asks: Is Shakespeare's genius beyond question? Casting a sceptical eye over centuries of bardolatry, Ravenhill calls for a new approach to the plays.

Exploring the intellectual tradition that has seen important figures from Voltaire to Tolstoy to Wittgenstein challenge Shakespeare's supremacy, Ravenhill searches for today's dissenting voices. Tracing the transformation of a working playwright into a national poet, global brand and secular god, Ravenhill asks if it's still possible to enjoy Shakespeare without being overwhelmed by the cultural and commercial baggage of 'brand Shakespeare'.

Meeting Royal Shakespeare Company Artistic Director Gregory Doran, theatre director Phyllida Lloyd and actors Simon Russell Beale and Fiona Shaw, Ravenhill explores what Shakespeare's plays mean to theatre-makers today and asks if Shakespeare is a problem for a contemporary theatre which seeks to give an equal representation of women's experience of the world.

Joining RSC actors in a primary school for a performance of Taming Of The Shrew, Ravenhill wonders if a play of such dark and complex sexual politics is really suitable material for ten-year-olds.

Scholar Ania Looma describes India's changing relationship with Shakespeare, while Professor Gary Taylor talks about the ambivalence of large parts of America toward the Bard.

Other interviewees include: playwrights Edward Bond and Howard Barker, RSC Deputy Artistic Director Erica Whyman, Shakespeare academics Ewan Fernie, Dr Martin Wiggins, Michael Dobson and Dr Erin Sullivan of the University of Birmingham Shakespeare Institute.

With readings by Amanda Drew and Paul Ritter.

Producer: Matt Willis

Part of Radio 3's celebration of the 450th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth.

MON 22:45 The Essay (b041vgfk)

Georgian Portraits

Claire Tomalin on Dora Jordan

In the first essay of the week, shedding light on key figures of the Georgian era, biographer Claire Tomalin explores the life of Dora Jordan, the greatest comic actress of her day and renowned for being lover to the future king.

The rest of the essays in this series are by the actor and writer Ian Kelly on actor, playwright, and theatre manager David Garrick; historian Amanda Vickery on Lancashire gentlemans Elizabeth Parker Shackleton; writer and cartoonist Martin Rowson on Hogarth and historian Dan Cruikshank on architect

Robert Adam.

Producer: Mohini Patel.

MON 23:00 Jazz on 3 (b041vgfm)

Elliot Galvin Trio

Rising star of the British jazz scene, pianist Elliot Galvin performs with his trio in an intimate front-room gig.

Emerging over the last year through the work of the Chaos Collective - and previously featured on Jazz on 3 with the Laura Jurd Quintet - the young keyboardist is fast becoming one of the most talked-about new faces. His debut album as leader, Dreamland, has already attracted critical attention and just weeks since its release the trio have been awarded the prestigious European Young Artists' Jazz Award for 2014. Playful experimentation lies at the heart of Galvin's music, where a love for complexity is balanced with equal good humour and quick-witted ingenuity. Amongst fiery improv and thoughtful melodicism, watch out for excursions on prepared piano and the addition of a tiny toy piano. Galvin is joined by bassist Tom McCredie and drummer Simon Roth for this performance at a private London venue, part of Pop-Up Circus's 'Kitchen Sink Series'.

Presenter: Jez Nelson

Producer: Miranda Hinkley.

Louange a l'eternite de Jesus, from Quartet for the End of Time

Brahms: Cello Sonata no. 3 in D minor, Op.108

Yo-Yo Ma, cello
Kathryn Stott, piano

The American cellist returns to Wigmore Hall for the first time in over twenty years. The recital's first half comprises works influenced by the past, exploring how composers as diverse as Villa-Lobos and Guarnieri, Stravinsky and Piazzolla carried traditional forms into the modern world. And, in the second half, Messiaen's sublime Louange a l'eternite de Jesus from his Quartet for the End of Time serves as a bridge into Brahms's sonful last Sonata Op. 108.

TUE 22:00 Free Thinking (b041y0sw)

Eighteenth-Century Sexual Politics

Philip Dodd explores the sexual mores of eighteenth-century England talking to Faramerz Dabhoiwala of Exeter College, Oxford, Joanne Bailey of Oxford Brookes University, David Turner of Swansea University, author and broadcaster Hallie Rubenhold and Judith Hawley of Royal Holloway College.

John Cleland's erotic novel Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure - otherwise known as Fanny Hill - was first published in 1749 but subsequently withdrawn. Pirated copies led to the first known obscenity case in the USA and a trial in England in 1964. In 1789 Harris's List of Covent Garden Ladies - identifying the name, location and special charms of London prostitutes - sold for half a crown and 8,000 copies of the first edition were printed. What do these publications tell us about the way sex was seen in eighteenth-century London?

WEDNESDAY 30 APRIL 2014

WED 00:30 Through the Night (b041xzvg)
18th Century Season

18th Century season: Ariosti's opera La fede ne' tradimenti.

Attilio Ariosti was co-director with Handel of the original Royal Academy of Music in London. He played in more than one of Handel's operas; he was a monk who, as a young man, had been given permission to be a composer and musician for the Count of Mantua and he spent the rest of his life at the most important courts of Europe before coming to London.

La fede ne' tradimenti was written in Berlin and first performed in 1702. This performance is one of only a handful since then, having had its first modern performance in the 2000s by Europa Galante.

Johann Christian Bach (1735-1782)

Bach and Abel

Donald Macleod introduces music and stories from the life of Johann Christian Bach - today, his friendships with the German composer Carl Abel, and the painter Thomas Gainsborough.

They must have made quite a threesome - two German composers, Johann Christian Bach and Carl Friedrich Abel, and the English painter Thomas Gainsborough. Bach and Abel were housemates, and business partners, collaborating on a series of subscription concerts in Soho for twenty years. Gainsborough, famously boozey and passionate about music, was the third side of the triangle, risking their ridicule by performing for them, and swapping his paintings for his friends' instruments. Donald Macleod discovers what they got up to in 18th-century London.

WED 22:00 Free Thinking (b041y0tl)

The Radiophonic Workshop

The BBC Radiophonic workshop was founded in 1958 by Desmond Briscoe and Daphne Oram. This group of experimental composers, sound engineers and musical innovators provided music for programmes including The Body in Question, Horizon, Quatermass, Newsround, The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy, Chronicle and Delia Derbyshire's iconic Doctor Who Theme before being shut down by Director General John Birt in 1998.

In an edition recorded just as the Workshop prepare to release a new album, and tour the UK, Matthew Sweet brings together Radiophonic Workshop members Dick Mills, Paddy Kingsland, Roger Limb, Peter Howell, and Mark Ayres to reflect on the days and nights they spent in the workshop, coaxing ageing machines into otherworldly life, and pioneering electronic music. Also in the programme, producer and former drummer with The Prodigy Kieron Pepper, Oscar winning Gravity composer Steven Price, Vile Electrodes, and Matt Hodson, on the influence the Radiophonic Workshop had on them.

Producer: Laura Thomas

Johann Christian Bach (1735-1782)

Meeting Mozart in London

Donald Macleod explores Johann Christian Bach's relationship with his famous pupil - the eight-year-old Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

In 1764, the Mozarts' tour of Europe took them to London, where the Royal music master, JC Bach, arranged for them to perform for the King and Queen. The relationship between Bach and the eight-year-old Mozart flourished - and as Donald Macleod discovers in today's programme, young Wolfgang's chief ambition was that "my name will be as famous as that of Christian Bach".

THU 19:30 Radio 3 Live in Concert (b041xsb0)
BBC SSO - Janacek, Dvorak, Bartok

Live from City Halls, Glasgow

Presented by Jamie MacDougall

As the climax of a concert full of vivid orchestral colours the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra take centre-stage in the virtuosic "Concerto for Orchestra" by Bartok. Written by the composer in America it captures, in its bright and urgent music, the verve and energy of this adopted country. But it also seems to reflect - with its use of traditional modes and rhythms - a memory of a far-away homeland.

Before that, the young American cellist Joshua Roman joins the orchestra for music by another composer writing whilst far from home. Dvorak, in his popular Cello Concerto, also took inspiration from America. During tonight's interval in New York, it is said to take inspiration from Niagara Falls, and is one of the composer's most singingly melodic works.

And the concert opens with instrumental music by Janacek taken from his sparky operatic work "The Cunning Little Vixen."

Janacek (arr. Talich): Suite - The Cunning Little Vixen
Dvorak: Cello Concerto

8.40 Interval Music

Arnold Schoenberg was another composer who sought refuge and creative rejuvenation in America. During tonight's interval is a chance to hear a specially recorded performance, from City Halls, of Schoenberg's cabaret inspired Brettlied, from Shai Wosner (piano) and Katherine Broderick (soprano)

THU 22:00 Free Thinking (b041y11p)
Thom Gunn's Poetry, Michael Cunningham

Poets Paul Farley, Fiona Sampson and Clive Wilmer discuss the poems of Thom Gunn with Samira Ahmed. Born in Gravesend, Gunn was associated with Ted Hughes, Donald Davie, Philip Larkin, Elizabeth Jennings and The Movement before he moved in 1954 to California. In the '60s and '70s he experimented with different poetic forms in writing which touched on his drug taking and gay lifestyle. In 1992 his collection "The Man with Night Sweats" was dominated by elegies for friends affected by AIDS. He died in April ten years ago.

American novelist Michael Cunningham won the Pulitzer Prize for his novel The Hours. His new novel The Snow Queen is haunted by the literary ghosts of Hans Christian Anderson and Flaubert. Set in contemporary metropolitan America, it features two brothers - one of whom experiences a vision. What place does faith and the unquantifiable have in a rational world ?

The historians Charlie Laderman and Umit Ungor explore the symbolism of Turkey's recent decision "to offer condolences for the mass killings of Armenians under Ottoman rule during World War One". For years Armenians have campaigned to have the episode recognised as genocide and for years Turkey has refused to accept this definition. Does the new formula represent a significant shift in this bitter argument ?

Producer: Zahid Warley.

Johann Christian Bach (1735-1782)

Fame Is a Fickle Business

Donald Macleod concludes his exploration of the life and work of JC Bach, the youngest son of Johann Sebastian.

He tells the story of JC Bach's decline. Johann Christian was famous - the toast of 18th century London society, music master and friend of Queen Charlotte, musical mentor to Mozart. Yet when he died, he left substantial debts and was buried in an unmarked grave, with only four people present.

Tinariwen in Session, Commonwealth Connections 13

Mary Ann Kennedy introduces a live session with Tinariwen, the Tuareg band from the Sahara desert, and our Commonwealth Connections series, this week with music from Solomon Islands and Samoa.

TINARIWEN LIVE

A live session in our studio, plus interview, with this celebrated nomadic Tuareg band from the Sahara desert, offering more of their unique brand of Malian blues. Tinariwen plays material from their new album Emmaar, recorded in another desert, in California, miles away from their homeland because of its political instability.

COMMONWEALTH CONNECTIONS FEATURE: SOLOMON ISLANDS

Bamboo grows all over the Solomon Islands and provides a perfect natural material for making musical instruments. The 13 piece Waurana Pan Pipe Ensemble makes full use of the bamboo which grows around them to create their joyful, life-affirming sound. Hear the musicians talk about the history of this form of music making and enjoy a special session which captures a raw, hi-energy performance recorded at the Solomon Islands Broadcasting studios in the capital city of Honiara.

COMMONWEALTH CONNECTIONS HERITAGE TRACK: Samoa

Sia Figiel is a novelist, painter and poet who won the 1997 Commonwealth Writers' Prize for Fiction (SE Asia/Pacific Region). Her choice of Heritage Track LOTA NU'U, sung by the Samoa Teachers' Choir, evokes deep emotions not only in her, but in many Samoans across the world, and is almost an unofficial national anthem, dissolving boundaries and bringing them, and all Pacific peoples, together as children of the great ocean, Moana.
