SAT 09:00 CD Review (b05xhzz0)

Building a Library: Nielsen: Symphony No 3 (Sinfonia Espansiva)

with Andrew McGregor

0930

Building a Library: Nielsen 150
Andrew Mellor compares recordings of Nielsen's 3rd Symphony, his 'Sinfonia Espansiva', in this his 150th year. It's the only one of his symphonies to include vocal parts, wordless vocal solos for soprano and baritone in the second movement, and is "the most optimistic and characteristically Danish of Nielsen's symphonies" thinks our reviewer.

1030

Anna Picard joins Andrew to discuss recent baroque opera releases including Monteverdi from Boston, Gasparini from Tuscany and Purcell from Kilburn!

1145

Andrew chooses an outstanding release for his disc of the week.

SAT 12:15 Music Matters (b05xhzzl)

Nielsen 150

Tom Service travels to Copenhagen and Odense, in Denmark, in search of Carl Nielsen, the man and his music, as part of Radio 3's Nielsen 150 season celebrating the anniversary of the composer's birth.

SAT 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (b05xj147)

A programme of concertos and arias by Pietro Antonio Locatelli and George Frideric Handel, performed by the Freiburg Baroque Orchestra, with soprano Carolyn Sampson and countertenor Rupert Enticknap. Recorded at the Freiburg Konzerthaus in December last year

Locatelli: Concerto in C minor, Op.1 no.11

Handel: Overtures, arias and duets from Rinaldo, Giulio Cesare, Rodelinda, etc

Carolyn Sampson (soprano)

Rupert Enticknap (countertenor)

Freiburg Baroque Orchestra, Peter Barczy (violin/director).

SAT 14:00 Saturday Classics (b05xj149)

David Nicholls

David Nicholls, best selling author of Starter for Ten, One Day, and Us, and screenwriter of the 2015 film adaptation of Far from the Madding Crowd, presents his selection of Saturday Classics. David's choices include a wide selection from Bach, Schubert, and Brahms to Craig Armstrong, Chet Baker, and Tom Waits.

SAT 16:00 Sound of Cinema (b05xj1qx)

Spies

Matthew Sweet presents an edition of music from spy movies, featuring scores from gritty Carré-esque espionage films to James Bond action fantasies.

This week's new release is Paul Feig's "Spy", starring Melissa McCarthy, with a score by Theodore Shapiro.

Other featured films include "The Lady Vanishes"; "The Third Man"; "On Her Majesty's Secret Service"; "The Spy Who Came In From The Cold"; "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy" and Matthew's Classic Score of the Week - Roy Webb's music for Alfred Hitchcock's "Notorious".

SAT 17:00 Jazz Record Requests (b05xj1qz)

Alyn Shipton's selection of listeners' requests includes music in all styles of jazz, but focuses today on jazz at the dawn of new age music, with a solo improvisation by flautist Paul Horn recorded inside the Taj Mahal. A founding father of West Coast Jazz, as a saxophonist and flautist, Horn pioneered jazz for meditation, and this programme marks the anniversary of his death aged 84 in June 2014.

SAT 18:00 Jazz Line-Up (b05xj1r1)

Loose Tubes at Gateshead - Part 2

Claire Martin presents the second instalment of Loose Tubes in concert at the 2015 Gateshead International Jazz Festival showcasing their unique brand of hi-energy big band jazz. The band reformed last year celebrating their 30th anniversary, and their line-up reads like a who's who of the British jazz scene including Julian Arguelles (baritone sax), Iain Ballamy (alto/soprano sax), Chris Batchelor (trumpet), Martin France (drums), Ashley Slater (trombone), John Parricelli (guitar), Mark Lockheart (tenor sax), Eddie Parker (flute), Julian Nicholas (tenor sax) and their musical director/keyboard player Django Bates. Plus an interview with Grammy Award winning vocalist Kurt Elling and a profile of his brand new album 'Passion World'.

SAT 19:30 Radio 3 Live in Concert (b05xj1r3)

Halle - Beethoven's Missa Solemnis

Stuart Flinders introduces a performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis from the Bridgewater Hall given by the Hallé, Hallé Choir and Sir Mark Elder

Beethoven's great solemn mass is widely regarded as one of his greatest achievements and stands as one of the finest of all settings of the mass. It was first performed in St Petersburg in 1824. Tonight it comes live from Manchester with a striking line-up of soloists.

Beethoven: Missa Solemnis in D Op123

SAT 21:30 Between the Ears (b05xj1r5)

Wake Up Baby

A baby sleeps.

A man in another room watches her on a screen.

Her loving father?

No.

This man does not know this baby. He's in another country, thousands of miles away. And, each night, he watches a different baby.

Wake Up, Baby! is an atmospheric journey into the sometimes unsettling world of "reassuring" technology.

The media storm that surrounded the 1932 'baby Lindbergh kidnap', and the subsequent trial, planted the fear of child abduction into the public imagination. In 1937, Zenith produced the Radio Nurse, the world's first baby monitor, designed to fit well into an elegant sitting room, with a transmitting unit in baby's nursery.

The Radio Nurse was a tiny private radio station, casting baby's cries onto the electromagnetic seas. To feel the presence of baby in whichever room you occupied while she stayed safe in the nursery was a kind of magic - wonderfully reassuring to a couple in their big house. But it was prone to interference. You might hear things other than baby: a police radio, a pilot preparing to land, or even someone else's baby, picked up from a similar device nearby.

The problem of stray interference went away in the digital age. The baby monitor, now with pictures as well as sound, became wi-fi-enabled. In recent years, there have been several well-reported cases of devices being hacked. A couple in Ohio heard "Wake up, baby. Wake up, baby!" screaming from their baby's monitor. Someone had taken control of the wi-fi device across the internet.

SAT 22:00 Hear and Now (b05xj1r7)

Tectonics Festival Glasgow 2015

Episode 4

Robert Worby presents the final instalment of recordings from this year's Tectonics Glasgow, the festival co-curated by Ilan Volkov and Alasdair Campbell, and presented in association with the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra. The event takes place at Glasgow's City Halls and in tonight's programme we hear two site-specific works written specially for the venue: Mural by the Norwegian French horn player and composer Hild Sofie Tafjord, and Glass Hundreds by Daniel Padden of the One Ensemble and Volcano the Bear. Orchestral music includes the UK premiere of Enno Poppe's Altbau and the world premiere of a work co-composed by harpist Rhodri Davies and Christopher Fox, Topophony. Plus improvised music from saxophonist Peter Brotzmann in collaboration with experimental slide guitarist Heather Leigh.

SUNDAY 07 JUNE 2015

SUN 09:00 Sunday Morning (b05xq4r0)

James Jolly

The current season of Bach's Brandenburg Concertos in order reaches No. 5, in D, BWV 1050, in James Jolly's selection of music.

James also includes this week's listener suggestion in the weekly Sunday Supplement feature, which in this programme celebrates the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer Albin Magnard, with an example of his symphonic work.

SUN 12:00 Private Passions (b05xq4r2)

Christopher Le Brun

The President of the Royal Academy of Arts, Christopher Le Brun, gives Michael Berkeley a tour of this year's Summer Exhibition and shares his musical and artistic passions.

The RA Summer Exhibition is the largest open submission exhibition in the world, and Christopher shares the excitement in the days running up to the opening as 1000 pictures - selected from 10,000 - are hung in the brightly-painted galleries.

An acclaimed painter, sculptor and print-maker Christopher Le Brun has work in public and private collections around the world. He is passionate about the music of the late 19th and 20th centuries, and his work has frequently been inspired by music. He takes Michael to the RA library to show him a series of etchings inspired by Wagner, and we hear music by William Walton that has also stimulated his work.

Christopher's other choices include music by Schoenberg, Poulenc and Django Reinhardt, and he shares the nasty surprise he once gave his mother when she sat down at the piano to play a Grieg nocturne.

Producer: Jane Greenwood

A Loftus production for BBC Radio 3.

SUN 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (b05wytj1)

SUN 17:30 Words and Music (b05xq4rb)
Yeats at 150

A century and a half after the birth of WB Yeats, this edition of Words and Music seeks to convey the scope of this prolific poet's work and also the inspiration that his poems have provided over the ensuing years for a wide range of composers from Sir Michael Tippett to Joni Mitchell. The poems are read by Brid Brennan and Lorcan Cranitch.

Producer: Torquil MacLeod.

SUN 18:45 Sunday Feature (b05xq4rd)
WB Yeats and the Artifice of Eternity

"Yeats dreamed Ireland into existence," says the poet Paula Meehan. WB Yeats was born 150 years ago. He is still a vital presence in the cultural and public life of Ireland and the wider world - his poetry is read all over the globe. In Dublin, poet and broadcaster Theo Dorgan investigates the eternal appeal of his art, with readings of the poems by Jim Norton.

His early poems, drawing on the faery tales of ancient Ireland, are often dismissed as whimsy. But Paula Meehan, Ireland's current Professor of Poetry, argues that throughout his life magic was crucial to Yeats.

At The Abbey, created by Yeats and Lady Gregory as a national theatre, its director Fiach Mac Conghail reveals how this dreamer was a practical man of the theatre, and a modernist, absorbing dramatic styles from all over the world.

Declan Kiberd, the leading Yeats scholar, teases out the complexities of Yeats's character: fervent for independence, yet no democrat; a mythologiser of women who could not establish happy relationships; a lyric poet with steely ambition; the Irishman who failed to learn the language, spent much of his time in England, and never went to the pub. Out of such contradictions Yeats wrote some of the most magnificent poetry in English, not just of the 20th century, but ever.

The historian Diarmaid Ferriter shows that the poet, 'a 60-year-old smiling public man', was very effective as a senator. Catriona Crowe, of the National Archives of Ireland, tells Theo what these reveal of his place in the national memory. And Ireland's president, Michael D. Higgins, himself a poet, ponders what Yeats would think of the Ireland he dreamed into being, and the place of poetry in politics today.

Producer Julian May.

Breaking Free: A Patriot for Me

2015 marks the 50th anniversary of John Osborne's sensational and ground-breaking epic play about Alfred Redl, "A Patriot for Me". Redl was an officer in the Austro-Hungarian intelligence service in the 1890s. His homosexuality made him a target for blackmail and persecution. Perhaps surprisingly, Osborne's play is not only a sweeping epic but also an angry plea for tolerance and a condemnation of hypocrisy that is as relevant now as it was to him in 1965.

The play has been credited with helping to bring an end to official censorship in the UK.

A Patriot for Me centres on an ambitious rising star in the army, in the decadent society of turn-of-the-century Austria, whose journey of self-discovery leads to blackmail, betrayal and murder. Redl is compromised by his newly realised sexual freedom and is compelled by the Russian army to spy on the country and countrymen he cares for.

THE HISTORY OF THE PLAY

Produced at the Royal Court with Maximilian Schell as Redl, the great famous set piece is an upper-class drag ball, which put the nail in the coffin of the play's licensing by the Lord Chamberlain, though it was a huge success when performed in a private members' club and revived brilliantly many years later at Chichester by Ronald Eyre, starring Alan Bates.

Part of Radio 3's season of programmes exploring the era of the Second Viennese School: "Breaking Free - the minds that changed music".

Felix Mendelssohn (1809-1847)

Mendelssohn in Britain

Donald Macleod explores Mendelssohn's connections with Britain.

Felix Mendelssohn had a remarkable, if brief career, cut short at the age of just 38 in 1847. He was born into an exceptional family. His grandfather Moses was a much respected Jewish philosopher, while his father Abraham, a wealthy Jewish banker and his mother Lea, a cultivated, musical woman had the standing and means to provide their four children with every opportunity Berlin society could offer. Only a handful of composers can match Mendelssohn's precocious talent. A child prodigy, famously likened by his friend Robert Schumann to Mozart, Felix's public career began at the age of 9. Between the ages of 11 and 15, he wrote 13 strings symphonies, 5 concertos, 4 operas, chamber music, piano and organ pieces, solo songs and choral pieces. Across the week Donald explores the musical treasures inspired by these formative years.

Few composers can have received a warmer welcome in Britain than Felix Mendelssohn. He owes one of his biggest successes, "Elijah" to the warm reception it received from the British public. He arrived for what would be the first of many visits in 1829. After a very rough crossing during which he endured terrible sea-sickness, his first destination was London, where he put up in rented rooms at 103 Great Portland Street, just around the corner from the BBC's Broadcasting House. Armed with a set of visiting cards to which the English "Mr." had been added, he cut an elegant figure in London society, enjoying great success as a conductor, pianist and composer. Having charmed the English, Mendelssohn travelled to Scotland, where a trip to the Hebridean island of Staffa inspired one of his best loved overtures.

Antonin Dvorak (1841-1904)
String Quintet in E flat major Op 97

The Skampa Quartet perform an all-Czech programme in today's live Wigmore Hall recital: Josef Suk's melodious Meditation on an Old Czech Hymn 'St Wenceslas' was written following the outbreak of the First World War. To end, the quartet is joined by viola player Krzysztof Chorzelski for Dvorak's sunny String Quintet in E flat major, a work written just after his famous "American" Quartet while Dvorak was still in Iowa. The middle work of the concert was written by the quartet's former first violin, Pavel Fischer; his Third String Quartet, 'Mad Piper', continuing the concert's theme, is influenced by folk music.

Yeats by Heart

Winner of the Nobel Prize in 1923, William Butler Yeats is a commanding presence in 20th-century literature and has inspired, and occasionally infuriated, successive generations of readers, writers, and performers ever since.

Marking the 150th anniversary of his birth on 13th June 1865, five of Ireland's leading cultural figures reflect on their relationship with his work. The authors include novelist, John Banville, writer Fintan O'Toole and poets, Paul Muldoon and Paula Meehan.

In this edition, celebrated actor and director Fiona Shaw explains the lasting impact of her childhood introduction to the work of WB Yeats.

Producer: Stan Ferguson.

MON 23:00 Jazz on 3 (b054q5wm)
Motif, Tricko

Norwegian sextet Motif in concert, plus Kit Downes and Lucy Railton's Tricko

Led by bassist Ole Morten Vågan, Motif have been shaping their sound over the last decade, bringing together some of the best players from the young Norwegian improvising scene. Vågan's intense writing allows pieces to spiral from a central phrase or idea, whether it be an urgent groove, a melodic exploration or propulsive free-play. The bassist is joined by Håkon Mjaset Johansen on drums and Håvard Wilk on piano in a powerhouse rhythm section, while the rich frontline features the paired clarinets of Atle Nymo and Michael Thieke alongside trumpeter Eivind Lønning.

The concert also featured a set from Tricko - pianist Kit Downes and cellist Lucy Railton. Their thoughtfully crafted pieces journey through stately themes, brooding melodicism and beautiful, slowly evolving soundscapes.

Felix Mendelssohn had a remarkable, if brief career, cut short at the age of just 38 in 1847. He was born into an exceptional family. His grandfather Moses was a much respected Jewish philosopher, while his father Abraham, a wealthy Jewish banker and his mother Lea, a cultivated, musical woman had the standing and means to provide their four children with every opportunity Berlin society could offer. WED 09:00 Essential Classics (b05xqgk8)

Wednesday - Sarah Walker with Hugh Bonneville

9am

A selection of music including '5 Reasons to Love... concerti grossi'. Sarah explores this characteristic sound world of the baroque period, showcasing works by composers such as Handel and Corelli (the first person to actually publish a work called 'concerto grosso') and looking at the influence of the form on 20th-century composers including Vaughan Williams.

9.30am

Take part in our daily musical challenge: identify a piece of music played backwards.

10am

Sarah's guest this week is the stage and screen actor Hugh Bonneville. Hugh is a familiar face to television audiences having taken leading roles in the award-winning Downton Abbey and the comedy series Twenty Twelve and W1A, as well as enjoying success on the big screen with recent films including Paddington and The Monuments Men. Hugh will be sharing a selection of his favourite classical music with Sarah every day at 10am.

11am

Sarah's artist of the week is the conductor Stephen Layton. Layton is regarded as one of world's finest interpreters of choral music and has won accolades for his direction of choirs including Polyphony, the Choir of Trinity College, Cambridge and the Holst Singers. Layton is also a champion of new music and throughout the week Sarah features his recordings of works by composers ranging from Bruckner and Handel to MacMillan and Part.

Felix Mendelssohn (1809-1847)

The Mozart of the 19th Century

Felix Mendelssohn had a remarkable, if brief career, cut short at the age of just 38 in 1847. He was born into an exceptional family. His grandfather Moses was a much respected Jewish philosopher, while his father Abraham, a wealthy Jewish banker and his mother Lea, a cultivated, musical woman had the standing and means to provide their four children with every opportunity Berlin society could offer. Only a handful of composers can match Mendelssohn's precocious talent. A child prodigy, famously likened by his friend Robert Schumann to Mozart, Felix's public career began at the age of 9. Between the ages of 11 and 15, he wrote 13 strings symphonies, 5 concertos, 4 operas, chamber music, piano and organ pieces, solo songs and choral pieces. Across the week Donald explores the musical treasures inspired by these formative years.

Mendelssohn's education was nothing if not thorough. From the age of nine, a long list of tutors arrived at the family home to teach a comprehensive list of subjects ranging from Latin to geography but perhaps the man who was to have the most profound influence over him in his early years was Carl Zelter, the director of Singakademie. Today Donald Macleod looks at Mendelssohn's early training.

Landmark: Saul Bellow's Herzog

Martin Amis, Zachary Leader and Sarah Churchwell join Matthew Sweet to discuss Saul Bellow and his masterpiece, Herzog with readings by Kerry Shale.

Born exactly one hundred years ago on June 10th 1915 in Quebec, Bellow spent most of his life in Chicago and it formed the backdrop for many of his novels. In 1976 he won the Nobel Prize for Literature. Herzog depicts the mid life crisis of a Jewish academic whose mind begins to unravel when his wife leaves him for his best friend. His rage drives him to write a series of letters to friends, family and the famous in a bid to understand his predicament. They are never sent but they colour the book's emotional landscape. Herzog was nominated as one of the 100 best novels in the English language by TIME magazine.

WED 22:45 The Essay (b05xqf1f)

WB Yeats at 150

The Second Coming of the Second Coming

Winner of the Nobel Prize in 1923, William Butler Yeats is a commanding presence in 20th-century literature and has inspired, and occasionally infuriated, successive generations of readers, writers, and performers ever since.

Marking the 150th anniversary of his birth on 13th June 1865, five of Ireland's leading cultural figures reflect on their relationship with his work. The authors include novelist John Banville, actor Fiona Shaw, writer Fintan O'Toole and poet Paula Meehan.

In this edition, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Paul Muldoon explores the connections between Yeats's post-World War One masterpiece 'The Second Coming' and Shelley's 'Ozymandias' written a century earlier in the aftermath of the Battle of Waterloo.

Producer: Stan Ferguson.

The Land Where the Lemon Trees Grow

His grandfather Moses was a much respected Jewish philosopher, while his father Abraham, a wealthy Jewish banker and his mother Lea, a cultivated, musical woman had the standing and means to provide their four children with every opportunity Berlin society could offer. Across the week Donald explores the musical treasures inspired by these formative years.

Growing up in the nineteenth century, part of a young man's experience was an extensive period of travel. Having won over the great man of letters, Goethe, a few years earlier, armed with a reputation that ensured a warm welcome wherever he went, in 1829 Mendelssohn left his teenage years well and truly behind him. He spread his wings on a trip that would occupy him for the best part of three years. Wherever he went he collected impressions, among them the material for his so-called "Italian" symphony, which he said was going to be, "the jolliest piece I have ever done"! With Donald Macleod.

FRI 09:00 Essential Classics (b05xqgkl)

Friday - Sarah Walker with Hugh Bonneville

9am

A selection of music including '5 Reasons to Love... concerti grossi'. Sarah explores this characteristic sound world of the baroque period, showcasing works by composers such as Handel and Corelli (the first person to actually publish a work called 'concerto grosso') and looking at the influence of the form on 20th-century composers including Vaughan Williams.

9.30am

Take part in our daily musical challenge: Two pieces of music have been altered. Can you identify them?

10am

Sarah's guest this week is the stage and screen actor Hugh Bonneville. Hugh is a familiar face to television audiences having taken leading roles in the award-winning Downton Abbey and the comedy series Twenty Twelve and W1A, as well as enjoying success on the big screen with recent films including Paddington and The Monuments Men. Hugh will be sharing a selection of his favourite classical music with Sarah every day at 10am.

11am

Sarah's artist of the week is the conductor Stephen Layton. Layton is regarded as one of world's finest interpreters of choral music and has won accolades for his direction of choirs including Polyphony, the Choir of Trinity College, Cambridge and the Holst Singers. Layton is also a champion of new music and throughout the week Sarah features his recordings of works by composers ranging from Bruckner and Handel to MacMillan and Pärt.

FRI 12:00 Composer of the Week (b03x1gp4)
Felix Mendelssohn (1809-1847)

The Rise, Fall and Rise of Mendelssohn

Felix Mendelssohn had a remarkable, if brief career, cut short at the age of just 38 in 1847. He was born into an exceptional family. His grandfather Moses was a much respected Jewish philosopher, while his father Abraham, a wealthy Jewish banker and his mother Lea, a cultivated, musical woman had the standing and means to provide their four children with every opportunity Berlin society could offer. Only a handful of composers can match Mendelssohn's precocious talent. A child prodigy, famously likened by his friend Robert Schumann to Mozart, Felix's public career began at the age of 9. Between the ages of 11 and 15, he wrote 13 strings symphonies, 5 concertos, 4 operas, chamber music, piano and organ pieces, solo songs and choral pieces. Across the week Donald explores the musical treasures inspired by these formative years.

After spending the week in the company of the young Mendelssohn, in the final chapter of his survey, Donald Macleod looks at the rather bumpier ride Mendelssohn's reputation was given in the years after his death, before the reassessment he's enjoying in our own century.

FRI 22:45 The Essay (b05xqf1k)
WB Yeats at 150

Of Miracle, of Magic

Winner of the Nobel Prize in 1923, William Butler Yeats is a commanding presence in 20th-century literature and has inspired, and occasionally infuriated, successive generations of readers, writers, and performers ever since.

Marking the 150th anniversary of his birth on 13th June 1865, five of Ireland's leading cultural figures reflect on their relationship with his work. The authors include novelist John Banville, actor Fiona Shaw, writer Fintan O'Toole and poet Paul Muldoon.

In this edition, Ireland's current Professor of Poetry, Paula Meehan, explores the influence of the magical and the mystical in the work of WB Yeats.

Producer: Stan Ferguson.
