9.30am Proms Composer: Laura Tunbridge on Mozart

Laura Tunbridge chooses five essential recordings of BBC Proms Composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart and explains why you need to hear them.

Recognised from the off throughout 18th-century Europe as a prodigiously gifted composer-performer, yet dead at the age of 35, Mozart has come to personify divinely inspired genius. His prolific output shows an incredible facility and level of accomplishment in almost every genre of his time, and many of Mozart's works are much-loved staples of the repertoire today, widely acknowledged as among the pinnacles of human achievement.

SAT 11:45 New Generation Artists (m0019s9g)
New Generation Artists Summer Showcase 4 of 8

New Generation Artists Summer Showcase: Kate Molleson celebrates the talents of the current members of Radio 3's prestigious young artist programme. Today Timothy Ridout plays Shostakovich's Viola Sonata, a work completed just a few weeks before his death, in a performance recorded at the Aldeburgh Festival - where the sonata had its first performance outside the Soviet Union.

Shostakovich: Impromptu for viola and piano, Op.33
Timothy Ridout (viola), Artur Pizarro (piano)

Alexander Nikolayevich Tcherepnin: Quatre Préludes
Nostalgiques Op. 23 (1923)
Alexander Gadjev (piano)

Shostakovich: Sonata for Viola and Piano, Op.147
Timothy Ridout (viola), Jäms Coleman (piano)

Established over two decades ago, Radio 3's New Generation Artists scheme is internationally acknowledged as the foremost scheme of its kind. It exists to offer a platform for artists at the beginning of their international careers. Each year six musicians join the scheme for two years, during which time they appear at the UK's major music festivals, enjoy dates with the BBC orchestras and have the opportunity to record in the BBC studios. The artists are also encouraged to form artistic partnerships with one another and to explore a wide range of repertoire, not least the work of contemporary and women composers. In recent years Radio 3's New Generation Artists have appeared at many of the UK's music festivals and concert halls. The BBC New Generation Artists scheme is not itself a prize, rather it offers a unique platform on which artists can develop their prodigious talents. Not surprisingly, the list of alumni reads like a Who's Who of the most exciting musicians of the past two decades.

SAT 12:30 This Classical Life (m0019s9j)
Jess Gillam with... Laura Snowden

Jess's guest this week is the guitarist and composer Laura Snowden. They meet in the TCL studio for a listening party which revels in the beauty of John Tavener's choral music; unwraps a piece for guitar by the Australian composer and synesthete Phillip Houghton during which explores the range of sounds possible to obtain from the instrument; pauses in the sound world of Laurie Anderson, and follows Berlioz's musical journey into psychedelia.

Playlist:
John Tavener: The Lamb (Tenebrae, Nigel Short, conductor)

Burt Bacharach/Hal David: I say a little prayer (Aretha Franklin)
Lauryn Hill: Miseducation of Lauryn Hill (Lauryn Hill)
Buxton/Ratcliffe/Kekaula: Good Luck (Basement Jaxx, Lisa Kekaula)
Laurie Anderson: O Superman (Laurie Anderson)
Trad (Bulgarian): Bučimiš (Avi Avital, mandolin, Itamar Doari, percussion)
Phillip Houghton: Wave Radiance (Los Angeles Guitar Quartet)
Hector Berlioz: Symphonie Fantastique, Op. 14 - V Dream of a witches' Sabbath (Orchestre de Paris, Charles Munch, conductor)

SAT 13:00 Inside Music (m0019s9l)
Flute player Katy Bircher with musical transcendence

Katy Bircher is a flute player who specialises in historical instruments. She plays with ensembles such as the Dunedin Consort, the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment, the Gabrieli Consort and Players and La Serenissima.

Today, Katy explains why she fell in love with the world of early French music, and reveals the wondrous possibilities of the clavichord in the hands of Carole Cerasi. She also muses on her love of the mellow tones of the viola, and plays a lullaby that shows what intimate music making is all about.

Plus, a piece which is, according to Katy, completely perfect...

A series in which each week a musician explores a selection of music - from the inside.

SAT 15:00 Sound of Gaming (m0019s9n)

Crime time - the game is afoot...

Louise Blain with gaming music designed to underscore the murky world of crime and punishment. Louise's guest is the composer Richard Wilkinson who talks about his score for the forthcoming Peaky Blinders game. The programme also features music from Sherlock Holmes: Crimes & Punishments, Austin Wontory's Assassin's Creed Syndicate, Jesse Harlin's Mafia, Woody Jackson's Red Dead Redemption 2, Thief by Luc St-Pierre, Jesper Kyd's Hitman: Blood Money, and Michael Hunter's music for Grand Theft Auto 4.

SAT 16:00 Music Planet (m0019s9q)

Dudu Tassa and the Kuwaitis

Kathryn Tickell with new music from across the globe, plus highlights from the WOMAD festival set by Israeli band Dudu Tassa and the Kuwaitis - they are reviving the music of the Iraqi Al-Kuwaiti brothers, whose music was celebrated throughout the Arab world until it was banned when Saddam Hussein discovered their Jewish heritage.

SAT 17:00 J to Z (m0019s9s)

Yazz Ahmed in concert plus Nduduzo Makhathini

Kevin Le Gendre presents concert highlights from British-Bahraini trumpeter Yazz Ahmed performing with her band at Tampere Jazz Happening 2021. Yazz is widely celebrated for her innovative and expansive compositions, which draw on her heritage, fusing jazz, Arabic music, electronic textures and more. Her eclectic style has led her to work with musicians from across the spectrum including Radiohead, Natacha Atlas and the late Lee "Scratch" Perry. In 2020 she won the Jazz FM Award for UK Jazz Act of the Year, and the Jazz FM Album of the Year for her 2019 album 'Polyhymnia' and has also won the prestigious Ivor Novello Award for Innovation.

Also in the programme, we hear from South African piano virtuoso and educator Nduduzo Makhathini. Mentored by Bheki Msekelu, Makhathini continues to build upon the rich legacy of jazz greats in South Africa. He has released eight studio albums since 2014 and shows no sign of slowing down with his latest album 'In the Spirit of Ndu' released earlier this year. Here he shares his inspirations, including a soul-stirring blues track by South African jazz guitarist and vocalist Philip Tabane.

Prom 27: NYOGB play Elfman, Gershwin and Ravel

Live at the BBC Proms: National Youth Orchestra of Great Britain and conductor Andrew Gourlay in Ravel's complete ballet Daphnis and Chloé and Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue with pianist Simone Dinnerstein and to start a special commission from Hollywood legend, Danny Elfman.

Presented by Linton Stephens, live from the Royal Albert Hall, London.

Danny Elfman: Wunderkammer
Gershwin: Rhapsody in Blue (orch. Grofé)

c.8.20pm

Interval: Ahead of the performance of Ravel's score for the ballet Daphnis et Chloé, classicist Natalie Haynes joins Linton Stephens to shed some light on the source from which its drawn – Greek writer Longus's novel from the 2nd century CE – and other works that owe a debt to this ancient text from Shakespeare's comedies to The Princess Bride.

c.8.40pm

Ravel: Daphnis et Chloé

Simone Dinnerstein (piano)
National Youth Orchestra of Great Britain, Andrew Gourlay (conductor)

'I think and feel in sounds,' said Maurice Ravel. So, when he wrote his ballet Daphnis and Chloé, he created a sumptuous musical panorama in which you can hear every drop of dew, every flurry of birdsong and every ray of glittering light. Sounds thrilling? Now hear it performed by the 'world's greatest orchestra of teenagers' – playing with an energy and joy that make even the Royal Albert Hall feel a bit on the small side. The National Youth Orchestra of Great Britain's annual Prom is always a highlight of the season, and tonight its 150-plus players are working on a cinematic scale: Simone Dinnerstein performs Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, and there's a spectacular, specially commissioned opener from Hollywood legend Danny Elfman.

SAT 22:00 New Music Show (m0019s9z)

Alexander Goehr's Combat of Joseph della Reina and the Devil

Kate Molleson presents the latest sounds in new music, including the world premiere of a 40-minute chamber opera by Alexander Goehr, who celebrates his 90th birthday on Wednesday. The story is a 'Jewish Faust' story of the combat between a rabbi and the Devil.

Alexander Goehr: Combat of Joseph della Reina and the Devil (Text from a 19th-century Kabbalistic legend)

Héloïse Werner, Emilia Bertolini (sopranos), Clare Presland (mezzo-soprano), Joshua Ellicott (tenor)
Nash Ensemble, Alasdair Beatson (piano/director)

SUNDAY 07 AUGUST 2022

SUN 00:00 Freeness (m00161yk)

Ambient Melodies

Corey Mwamba presents the best in new improvised music. Laura Cannell talks about her new album, Antiphony of the Trees, and shares her inspirations. Of the album, created during a lockdown wave, she said: "the birds were singing so loudly that I had to sing back." Here, she reinterprets birdsong through the recorder. Mimicking and extending the tonal quality of birdsong, through a mixture of composition and improvisation, she creates a beguiling dialogue with the natural world. Elsewhere in the programme, Francesco Covarino weaves soothing lullabies for his daughter from sparse guitar, toy instruments and field recordings. Plus, oceanic meditations on consciousness from Ukrainian violinist Valentina Goncharova.

Sarah Walker with an invigorating musical mix

Sarah Walker chooses three hours of attractive and uplifting music to complement your morning.

Sarah begins with an uplifting performance of one of Mendelssohn's Songs without Words arranged for violin and piano, and plays an immersive choral work by organist Anna Lapwood: O Nata Lux.

She also finds melancholy in a song about mining by Ewan McColl, and pianist Mikhail Pletnev plays a Scriabin prelude with an air of mystery, and a delicate touch.

Plus, Liszt's symphonic poem Orpheus takes us on a dreamlike musical journey...

David Nutt

Professor David Nutt is an expert on drugs, and how they work on the brain. He trained as a psychiatrist, and for almost 50 years his research has focused on new drug treatments for anxiety, depression and addiction. In the late 1980s, at Bristol University, he set up the first unit in Britain to bridge psychiatry and pharmacology. He's now at Imperial College, where he is Professor of Neuro-psychopharmacology. He has published hundreds of scientific papers and 27 books.

All of this makes David Nutt sound like a pillar of the establishment. But the reason most people know his name is that he has repeatedly challenged the government over its policies on illegal drugs and alcohol, arguing, for instance, that it's more risky to go horse-riding than to take ecstasy. In his words: "no one in a position of authority dares to speak the truth". But he also stresses "I have repeatedly said that cannabis is not safe".

In conversation with Michael Berkeley, David Nutt looks back on the childhood that gave him the confidence to challenge established opinion. Living on a council estate, he felt out of place at Bristol Grammar School, and was a very anxious child who couldn't sleep. At night he used to creep to the stairs to hear the Proms drifting up from his father's radio. Professor Nutt describes fascinating new research into treating depression using the active ingredient of magic mushrooms, and he reveals which music he plays to his patients during these experiments.

Music choices include Faure, Nielsen, Grieg and Beethoven – his Seventh Symphony, which David persuaded the crowd to dance to at a New Year's Eve party. That experiment, he says, was a resounding success.

Proms at Bristol: Alina Ibragimova and Cédric Tiberghien

From the BBC Proms: Alina Ibragimova and Cédric Tiberghien perform romantic showpieces for violin and piano, including music by Franck, Ysaÿe and Havergal Brian.

Presented by Nicola Heywood Thomas, from St. George's, Brandon Hill, Bristol.

Havergal Brian: Legend

Eugène Ysaÿe: Poème élégiaque

César Franck: Violin Sonata in A major

Alina Ibragimova, violin

Cédric Tiberghien, piano

'Both of these players have the potential to conquer the world,' wrote The Times soon after violinist Alina Ibragimova and pianist Cédric Tiberghien – then both BBC Radio 3 New Generation Artists – first played together in 2007. 15 years on, they're being described as 'today's partnership of choice for violin and piano repertoire' and this lunchtime concert from the elegant surroundings of St George's Bristol shows why. From the brooding passion of Ysaÿe's Poème to the high drama and soaring melodies of César Franck's much-loved Sonata – as well as an anniversary tribute to British maverick Havergal Brian, who died 50 years ago – this is a concert that demands emotional commitment and fearless virtuosity. Ibragimova and Tiberghien will supply them in abundance.

Prom 28: Leif Ove Andsnes – Mozart Momentum 1

Live at the BBC Proms: Leif Ove Andsnes directs the Mahler Chamber Orchestra from the keyboard in an all-Mozart programme including two contrasting piano concertos.

Presented by Tom Service, live from the Royal Albert Hall, London

Mozart:

The Marriage of Figaro – overture

Piano Concerto No. 20 in D minor

c.3.40pm

Interval: Tom Service talks to Leif Ove Andsnes about his love of Mozart.

c.4pm

Mozart: Piano Concerto No. 22 in E flat major

Mahler Chamber Orchestra

Leif Ove Andsnes, piano / director

When Mozart composed his piano concertos, he had a very specific performer in mind – himself. For Norwegian pianist Leif Ove Andsnes, that's part of the appeal. 'When you realise how quickly Mozart developed during the early years of the 1780s it makes you ask: why did this happen? What was going on?' Tonight, this endlessly engaging, multi-award-winning pianist puts himself in Mozart's shoes, as he plays two contrasting masterworks from 1785: the tempestuous and tender Concerto No. 20, and the sunny, gloriously playful Concerto No. 22. Throughout, he'll direct the Mahler Chamber Orchestra from the keyboard, just as Mozart would have done. Expect eloquence, insight and (because this is Mozart, after all) lots and lots of fun.

SUN 17:00 The Listening Service (b078n3r2)

What is it about Mozart?

The Listening Service - an odyssey through the musical universe with Tom Service. Join him on a journey of imagination and insight, exploring how music works.

Today's programme asks, "What is it about Mozart?" - how have his life and music become the template for what a composer should be - a child prodigy, a virtuoso, a cultural monument, not to mention a confectionery industry... And is there anything that we can say is uniquely "Mozartian" - what makes his music so distinctive, and why does it connect so readily with audiences? Explore Mozart's music with Tom and see what conclusions you come to.

Each week, Tom aims to open our ears to different ways of imagining a musical idea, a work, or a musical conundrum, on the premise that "to listen" is a decidedly active verb.

How does music connect with us, make us feel that gamut of sensations from the fiercely passionate to the rationally intellectual, from the expressively poetic to the overwhelmingly visceral? What's happening in the pieces we love that takes us on that emotional rollercoaster? And what's going on in our brains when we hear them?

When we listen - really listen - we're not just attending to the way that songs, symphonies, and string quartets work as collections of notes and melodies. We're also creating meanings and connections that reverberate powerfully with other worlds of ideas, of history and culture, as well as the widest range of musical genres. We're engaging the world with our ears. The Listening Service aims to help make those connections, to listen actively.

Tune in and rethink music with The Listening Service.

Electricity

From pylons "tall with prophecy" to the literal darkness of power cuts and the life force of lightning - today's programme hears extracts from writers including Naomi Alderman, Michel Faber, DH Lawrence, Stephen Spender, Gregory Orr and Polly Atkin who have explored electricity as a life-force of energy and the metaphor for the spark of creativity. Music fizzles through the programme, from Bjork, Janacek, Philip Glass, Jeff Beck, Blanck Mass, along with Bob Dylan's electric masterpiece Maggie's Farm and the exquisite electricity of the tragic young American violinist Michael Rabin. Please make sure your radio is properly earthed. Sparks may fly.

SUN 18:45 Sunday Feature (m000kwm0)
Silent Witness - John Cage, Zen and Japan

John Cage is arguably the most important composer of the 20th century, even though he's perhaps famous, or infamous depending on your point of view, for writing a piece of music that is 4'33" of silence.

Famous because it made his reputation - after all composers write music not silence – and infamous because not unsurprisingly, it's outraged, perplexed and fascinated audiences since its premiere in 1952.

Cage though was deadly serious about his silent piece, and Robert Worby goes on an odyssey to find out what Cage thought silence was, and why silence was central to his life and work.

Robert goes to the quietest place in the UK - so quiet you can't hear a pin drop - to experience what John Cage did, when he entered an anechoic chamber in the 50s in search of silence.

But it's not as straightforward as you might think, as Robert discovers Cage didn't find the silence he was seeking, and instead found something even more surprising.

The key to understanding 4'33", and Cage's fascination with silence, is his interest in the discipline of Zen Buddhism, which unlocked a whole new world of hearing sound that he charted through chance operations.

It led to a meeting of like minds when Cage met Yoko Ono in New York, who instantly saw the Zen influence on his work. In 1962 Ono and her husband, Toshi Ichihyanagi, invited Cage to visit Japan - his Zen spiritual homeland - a trip that later became known as the 'Cage Shock'. It was a turning point in his career, whose groundbreaking performances sealed his reputation as the most controversial and experimental composer in the world.

The programme features two UK premieres on Radio 3, an interview Robert recorded with John Cage when he met the composer in NYC in the 80s after finding his number in the phone book, and Cage reading his Lecture on Nothing, his enigmatic musing on silence.

Prom 29: Leif Ove Andsnes – Mozart Momentum 2

Live at the BBC Proms: Leif Ove Andsnes with the soprano Christiane Karg join the Mahler Chamber Orchestra in the second of three all-Mozart Proms.

Presented by Tom Service, live from the Royal Albert Hall, London.

Mozart:
Symphony No. 38 in D major, 'Prague'
Die Zufriedenheit
Der Zauberer
Das Veilchen
Concert Aria 'Ch'io mi scordi di te?'

c.8.15pm

c.8.35pm
Mozart:
Masonic Funeral Music
Piano Concerto No. 24 in C minor

Christiane Karg, soprano
Mahler Chamber Orchestra
Leif Ove Andsnes, piano / director

Mozart aimed to please. He created arias that were 'perfectly tailored' to their singer's voice, and rituals of solemn grandeur for his fellow Freemasons. And for his superfans in the music-loving city of Prague, he wrote a symphony designed to knock them backwards with its daring, its energy and its sheer theatrical flair. In this second of three Mozart Momentum concerts at the Proms, Norwegian pianist Leif Ove Andsnes zooms in on the year 1786, and finds Amadeus at the absolute peak of his game. Soprano Christiane Karg is one of the supreme Mozart interpreters of our time; and Andsnes takes the place of the composer, directing Mozart's tragic C minor Piano Concerto – some say his greatest – from the piano.

SUN 23:00 Free the Music with Pekka Kuusisto (m0012gjm)
A Time and a Place

Pekka Kuusisto is a solo violinist, conductor, composer and folk musician who can change the way people think about music.

In this three-part series, he muses on how much creative freedom a musician really has, and the complex relationship between improvisation and 'sticking to the plan'. How is a performance dictated by time, place, tradition, learned techniques and mindset? And how can we open the door to wider musical freedom in the future, for performers, composers and listeners?

Pekka illustrates his thoughts with a wide selection of music, ranging from Purcell and Paganini to Mahler, Miles Davis and the White Stripes, and he also gets his violin out to create some on the spot improvisations.

In this first episode, Pekka muses on improvisation in its many guises. He shares examples of musicians who exhibit freedom in their performances, including a self-destructing Vivaldi concerto, Dolly Parton's Jolene as you've never heard it before, and a Monteverdi song which Pekka is so fond of that he's tempted to arrange a private performance of it as a birthday present to himself.

Rebecka Oberg and Jordan Mascoll

Linton Stephens hosts a new series of Classical Fix, introducing music-loving guests to classical music. This week, Linton is joined by BBC Open Music trainees, Rebecka Oberg and Jordan Mascoll.

Rebecka and Jordan's playlist:

Pauline Viardot - 2 pieces for piano: Serenade
George Frederic Handel - Sarabande from harpsichord suite in D minor
Couperin/Ades - Les Baricades Mysterieuses
Rebecca Dale - Materna Requiem: 6. Paradisum Interlude
John Dowland - I saw my lady weep
Fiona Monbet - Joy Song

Open Music brings new creatives and musicians of all genres, styles and backgrounds from across the UK to the BBC; designed to develop new collaborations, exciting ideas and reflect today's audiences in live orchestral music. Alongside training sessions, masterclasses, hands-on experience and mentoring, trainees work with the BBC Concert Orchestra, BBC Proms & other BBC teams to build, shape and deliver a BBC Prom in 2022.

Classical Fix is a podcast aimed at opening up the world of classical music to anyone who fancies giving it a go. Each week, Linton mixes a bespoke playlist for his guest, who then joins him to share their impressions of their new classical discoveries.

Linton Stephens is a bassoonist with the Chineke! Orchestra and has also performed with the BBC Philharmonic, Halle Orchestra and Opera North, amongst many others.

Proms at Battersea: Leif Ove Andsnes – Mozart Momentum 3

Live at the BBC Proms: Leif Ove Andsnes and three Mahler Chamber Orchestra members play Mozart Piano Trio in B flat major and Piano Quartet in E flat major.

Presented by Petroc Trelawny, live from Battersea Arts Centre, London.

Mozart:
Piano Trio in B flat major
Piano Quartet in E flat major

Leif Ove Andsnes (piano)
Matthew Truscott (violin)
Joel Hunter (viola)
Frank-Michael Guthmann (cello)

The music of friends: for pianist Leif Ove Andsnes, performing with the musicians of the Mahler Chamber Orchestra is first and foremost about 'partnership, a companionship'. Together, they've explored the music of Beethoven; now they turn to Mozart and in this lunchtime recital at Battersea Arts Centre they pare it down to basics – Andsnes, three MCO players and some of the loveliest chamber music ever created: the Piano Trio, K502, and the warm-hearted Piano Quartet, K493. This is music that Mozart conceived to be played at home, intimate without being inhibited, and playful without being flashy. Just inspiration, wit and melodies that speak straight to the heart.

Monday - Puccini's Il Tabarro at the BBC Proms

Fiona Talkington introduces another chance to hear Puccini's one-act operatic masterpiece "Il Tabarro" at the BBC Proms - a score that swirls and throbs with the energy of the River Seine.

Natalya Romaniw stars as the unhappily married Giorgetta, whose affair is the catalyst for murder. Two orchestral favourites set the watery scene: Respighi's Fountains of Rome – by turns glistening in the sunlight and swathed in dawn mist – and the irrepressible musical antics of Dukas's The Sorcerer's Apprentice.

"Convinced that his love is spurned, the artist poisons himself with opium ..." Hector Berlioz never did anything by halves, and in his Symphonie fantastique a doomed love story becomes a no-holds-barred phantasmagoria: a fabulous, wide-eyed fantasy of severed heads, demonic orgies and unrequited love, written in the grip of an obsession and scored in technicolour for a supersized orchestra. Ryan Bancroft unleashes the full power of the BBC National Orchestra of Wales, and goes even larger with the world premiere of Gavin Higgins's new Concerto Grosso celebrating the British brass band tradition. A full symphony orchestra collides with the multi-award winning Tredegar Band (stars of the movie Pride) – and sends sparks hurtling.

The Tidal Sense

What does the tide mean, and could it be trying to tell us something? Multimedia artist Signe Lidén reflects on both ancient and emerging knowledge across disciplines and cultures that understands the tide as more than just a mechanical phenomenon.

While recording sounds on the dunes of an island off Denmark, Lidén was surprised by the rapid rise in sea level without being able to see the change from moment to moment. She has since devoted herself to studying the tide, recording an entire tidal zone using a 28-metre canvas as a microphone, and noticing the different sense of time she gets through close and extended listening. Could a deeper connection to the tide offer new ways of sensing and relating to the world around us, and help us to grasp the scale of environmental change that is happening in it?

Recent research has begun to show us how the tide influences life at a cellular level. Coastal organisms from sea-lice to shore-dwelling sheep have body clocks that are synchronised to the tidal schedule on their home beach. Could there be a resonant echo in our own bodies of this ancient circatidal mechanism? Is this something we can reconnect with, and what might this mean for our relationship with the oceans?

Coastal landscapes are places of between-ness and flux, where remnants of the past - a piece of driftwood or a dialect word - lie alongside the chaos and renewal of the constant ebbing and flowing of the waves. What might this teach us about living in times of loss and radical change?

Many indigenous cultures believe that personhood extends beyond humans to other entities. If we were all to relate to water as a living being, might it change how we move through the world? And is it fantastical to imagine the tide as the thought process of the ocean, creating life on Earth through repetitive rhythms unfolding over billions of years?

Lidén loves the way that the medium of sound captures the 'constant becoming of a place'. As she listens to the interlocking rhythms of her recordings, and the perspectives of other tidal thinkers, she notices how her sense of her place in the world is shifting.

With contributions from biologist and writer Arjen Mulder, neurobiologist Michael Hastings, Shetland poet Roseanne Watt, historian and kayaker David Gange, and Grace Dillon, a member of the Anishinaabe and professor in indigenous nations studies.

Edvard Grieg (1843-1907)

A Difficult Relationship

Donald Macleod explores Grieg's links with Bergen, and Troldhaugen – the house he built just outside the city

On 9th September 1907, it's estimated that some forty to fifty thousand people turned out to pay their respects and watch Edvard Grieg's cortège pass through the streets of Bergen. It's an image that speaks of the enormous affection and esteem in which Grieg was held at the time of his death, Bergen was where Grieg was born in 1843, and in a speech he made 60 years later, he acknowledged that his music was drawn from the life of its people, the surroundings of the town and its natural beauty. His birthplace is one of several locations which provided Grieg with professional opportunity and creative nourishment. This week Donald Macleod is exploring Grieg's life through the contrasting environments he needed to find the inspiration to write music. Donald begins his survey in Bergen, before assessing the decade Grieg spent in Oslo, and the solitude he found in the picturesque Hardanger region. But Grieg had another, contradictory side to his nature, he was also a restless spirit and a keen traveller.

The Bergen Grieg knew as a child was a thriving fishing centre. The bustling harbour was an essential part of the city's character and, recollecting this later, Grieg was to say fondly, "I'm sure my music has a taste of the codfish in it."

There's an 'electric buzz in Belfast', according to at least one critic, and the combined energy of the Ulster Orchestra and its dynamic Chief Conductor Daniele Rustioni illuminates everything they play together. Tonight, it's all about Austro-German Romanticism at its most ardent: whether Schumann's punchy but poetic Fourth Symphony, the dreams of a young Gustav Mahler, or Wagner's thrillingly sensual opera of unleashed love, lust and creativity. Louise Alder is the soloist in Richard Strauss's Four Last Songs, and The Times called her 'a terrific talent, combining a big, lustrous voice with flawless intonation and keen intelligence'. This young British star could have been born to sing Strauss's lovely (and much-loved) final songs.

TUE 21:15 Sunday Feature (m000nc8j) Cave Life for Beginners

Caves have long been a source of inspiration to artists, writers, poets and prophets, but what precisely is it that inspires?

Is it the dark or the smell, the disorientation or the discomfort? Why do hermits seek the solitary life within nature's dark rooms? And what has this to do with inspiration? Can caves induce euphoria? Mania? Visions?

Ben Cottam heads for the Lake District to spend a damp, dripping night or two in imitation of his hero - the self-styled 'Professor of Adventure' Millican Dalton (1867-1947). At thirty-six, Dalton gave up working in the insurance business in the City of London, to live a simple, outsider life, and devote himself to outdoor pursuits in Cumbria. Making his home in a beautiful slate cave on a fellside above Borrowdale, he set himself up as an early mountain guide, hosting men, and more shockingly, women, in his beloved 'cave hotel', where he was to live, for the next fifty years.

Vegetarian, teetotaler, pacifist - Dalton lived an alternative lifestyle long before the term had come into use...

How could anyone make a home in a cave? Ben travels to Cumbria to spend some nights in Dalton's cave in the company of psychiatrist and fellow Dalton enthusiast Giles Story.

Ben is joined in the mouth of the Borrowdale cave by the actor Peter MacQueen, writer and performer of a one-man show about Dalton, in a final attempt to understand the enigmatic 'Professor of Adventure', whilst relating the success - or otherwise - of his own time living in a cave. Soon he is on a journey back into the past to better understand the illumination man has derived from his darkest environment.

He receives advice and inspiration from Will Hunt, author of Underground, who has spent a decade exploring subterranean spaces - from a rare glimpse of an ochre mine in Western Australia, to spending 24 hours in total darkness underground in West Virginia.

Archaeologist Rebecca Wragg Sykes, author of Kindred, rebuts the traditional image of the cave dweller as brutish and uncultured, revealing a world of fine dining and artistry. Professor Yulia Ustinova, author of Caves And The Ancient Greek Mind – Descending Underground in the Search for Ultimate Truth, tells him both the sensory deprivation and poisonous gases found in caves might have inspired many Greek myths and legends.

And, talking to Paul Hanley, former drummer of cult post-punk group The Fall, and author of 'Have A Bleedin Guess - The Story of Hex Induction Hour; he examines a more recent rock myth - did The Fall record some of their 1982 album Hex Induction Hour in a cave?

TUE 22:00 The Essay (m000khk8) New Generation Thinkers 2020

Digging Deep

There is fascinating evidence that 5,000 years ago, people living in Britain and Ireland had a deep and meaningful relationship with the underworld seen in the carved chalk, animal bones and human skeletons found at Cranborne Chase in Dorset in a large pit, at the base of which had been sunk a 7-metre-deep shaft. Other examples considered in this Essay include Carrowkeel in County Sligo, the passage tombs in the Boyne Valley in eastern Ireland and the Priddy Circles in the Mendip Hills in Somerset. If prehistoric people regarded the earth as a powerful, animate being that needed to be placated and honoured, perhaps there are lessons here for our own attitudes to the world beneath our feet.

The British brass band tradition is one of the marvels of the musical world. With an unbroken history stretching back nearly 150 years, the Tredegar Band is a true virtuoso ensemble, and from its base in Blaenau Gwent it found a worldwide audience in 2014 when it appeared in the Bafta-winning film Pride. The band's second Prom this season celebrates the sheer breadth (and brilliance) of their artistry. 'We're aiming to cover the history of brass band music in about an hour!' says Music Director Ian Porthouse, and this late-night showcase includes brass classics from Richard Strauss to Phillip Wilby as well as tributes – in their anniversary years – to Vaughan Williams, Elmer Bernstein and Judy Garland.

WED 13:00 Composer of the Week (m000qmc0)

Edvard Grieg (1843-1907)

Youthful Adventures

Donald Macleod looks at the decade Grieg spent in Oslo, with music including his rarely heard overture In Autumn and his only song cycle Haugtussa.

On 9th September 1907, it's estimated that some forty to fifty thousand people turned out to pay their respects and watch Edvard Grieg's cortege pass through the streets of Bergen. It's an image that speaks of the enormous affection and esteem in which Grieg was held at the time of his death. Bergen was where Grieg was born in 1843, and in a speech he made 60 years later, he acknowledged that his music was drawn from the life of its people, the surroundings of the town and its natural beauty. His birthplace is one of several locations which provided Grieg with professional opportunity and creative nourishment. This week Donald Macleod is exploring Grieg's life through the contrasting environments he needed to find the inspiration to write music. Donald begins his survey in Bergen, before assessing the decade Grieg spent in Oslo, the solitude he found in the picturesque Hardanger region. But Grieg had another, contradictory side to his nature, he was also a restless spirit and a keen traveller.

Grieg moved to Oslo, or Christiania as it was known then, when he was in his twenties. It was where Grieg would meet three leading figures in Norwegian cultural life, the playwrights Bjørnstjerne Bjørnson and Henrik Ibsen and the conductor and composer Johan Svendsen.

Prom 33: Holst's The Planets

Live at the BBC Proms: Ryan Wigglesworth conducts the BBC Symphony Orchestra and Chorus in Strauss, Holst and Matthew Kaner's new choral work with baritone Roderick Williams.

Presented by Georgia Mann, live from the Royal Albert Hall, London

Richard Strauss: Death and Transfiguration
Matthew Kaner: Pearl [BBC commission: world premiere]

20.15 Interval:

In the interval Georgia Mann is joined by the poet Philip Gross, to hear about how poets and writers have used the imagery of the planets from the 17th century to the present day, including readings of Philip's own works Sky Space, and Moon O.

Gustav Holst: The Planets

Roderick Williams (baritone)
BBC Symphony Chorus
BBC Symphony Orchestra
Ryan Wigglesworth (conductor)

In the years around the First World War, Richard Strauss and Gustav Holst both pushed at the outer limits of what an orchestra could do – with results that still startle the ears. But there's more to Death and Transfiguration than soaring heroics, and Holst's The Planets begins with great tunes and glittering colours before wandering into other-worldly, distant regions. Ryan Wigglesworth brings a composer's ear to two works that make a perfect frame for Matthew Kaner's haunting new commission Pearl – in which an ancient lament (a medieval poem translated by Poet Laureate Simon Armitage) unlocks human emotions that cross centuries – and maybe travel even further than that. It's specially tailored to the glowing voice and peerless communicative skill of British baritone Roderick Williams with the BBC Symphony Chorus.

WED 22:15 Between the Ears (m000cp1f)

The Escape of the Zebra from the Zoo

War is often described as a dehumanising process. But what happened to Britain's non-human inhabitants in this terrible conflict?

In a painting in Manchester City Art Gallery, a zebra rears up, black and white striking against the terrible night scene. The sky reddens in the distance from a vast explosion in 1940. War artist Carel Weight painted the zebra that galloped out of the zoo in to the maddened city. The animal escaped unscathed, but thousands of animals didn't.

Four panels show the journey of the terrified zebra and close on his hooves as sketchy figures, trying to capture the fleeing animal. One of them may have been a keeper at London Zoo at the time, called Shelley. In this feature, it's an imaginary Shelley who tells us what happened, recalling the night the Zebra House was bombed, along with the goings-on at city zoos during World War Two. Between archive footage, the rumble and shock of explosions, the voices of non-human creatures and of human historians, we hear how animals in zoos fared, along with the terrible fate of 400,000 cats and dogs, killed in September 1939, on the orders of their anxious owners who feared the onslaught of war.

It was at London Zoo that Julian Huxley, then Secretary of the Zoological Society, would try and spare the animals the sounds of bombing and sirens drowning out the destruction with gramophones playing the music of Sibelius.

Animals were central to the way Churchill imagined the conflict. Visiting London Zoo in 1939, as war loomed ever closer, Churchill learned that the zookeepers were primed to shoot top predators: the lions and tigers if they escaped. As recorded by Huxley in his memoirs, Churchill replied 'What a pity!' before staring into the middle distance and conjuring for him an extraordinary and disturbing apocalyptic fantasy. Churchill's vision was a London of fire, burning wreckage, the noises of war, and big cats roaming the bombed out streets in search of dead bodies.

Peter Markinker is the voice of Shelley.

Contributors include the historians Marianne Sommer, Richard Sam Deese, Hilda Keane and Andy Flack; Archivist Sarah Broadhurst and Curator Hannah Williamson.

New Generation Thinkers 2020

Coming out Crip and Acts of Care

This Essay tells a story of political marches and everyday acts of radical care: of sledgehammers and bags of rice; of the struggles for justice waged by migrant domestic workers but it also charts the realisation of Ella Parry-Davies, that acknowledging publicly for the first time her own condition of epilepsy – or "coming out crip" – is part of the story of our blindness to inequalities in healthcare and living conditions faced by many migrant workers.

Ella Parry-Davies is a British Academy Postdoctoral Fellow at The Royal Central School of Speech and Drama, University of London working on an oral history project creating sound walks by interviewing migrant domestic workers in the UK and Lebanon. You can hear her discussing her research in a Free Thinking episode called Stanley Spencer, Domestic Servants, Surrogacy <https://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/m000573q>

New Generation Thinkers is a scheme run by BBC Radio 3 and the Arts and Humanities Research Council to select ten early career academics each year who can turn their research into radio.

Prom 34: Thorvaldsdottir, Elgar and Sibelius

Live at the BBC Proms: BBC Philharmonic conducted by Eva Ollikainen in music by Anna Thorvaldsdottir and Jean Sibelius. They are joined by Kian Soltani for Elgar's Cello Concerto.

Presented by Tom McKinney live from the Royal Albert Hall, London.

Eva Ollikainen

Three composers, three landscapes. Elgar wrote his Cello Concerto in the woodlands of Sussex; for many listeners, its autumnal colours evoke emotions too deep for words. From his home in Finland, Sibelius created a symphony that has the grandeur and inevitability of a great river – though some have heard it as a stirring song of national awakening. And elemental forces are the very bedrock of Anna Thorvaldsdottir's inspiration. The BBC Philharmonic, under Eva Ollikainen – a Finnish conductor with close links to Iceland – teams up with charismatic soloist Kian Soltani in Elgar's hugely popular concerto, and gives the world premiere of a newly forged orchestral work by Iceland-born Anna Thorvaldsdottir, for whom composition is 'a natural part of my life'.

Curves and Concrete

How did a maverick Scottish architect revolutionise the design of UK skateparks?

Forty years ago, Iain Urquhart had a vision: to create Britain's first full-scale, architecturally planned, outdoor concrete skatepark – in Livingston, West Lothian.

Iain visited emerging parks across California, taking specialist advice from skateboarders and designers. When his masterpiece opened in 1981 he persuaded some of the biggest international stars of skateboarding to come to Scotland to "skate Livi".

Iain died two years later, aged just 44 – yet Livingston Skatepark continues to thrive. Tony Hawk, perhaps the world's best-known skateboarder, describes Livi as "super-challenging... such a legendary spot".

How did Iain Urquhart convince funders to support his ambitious cultural venture? How did local people react to a vast, Noguchi-esque concrete "moonscape" being constructed for the sole purpose of a niche recreational activity, on what had been a lush green valley? How has the town of Livingston itself been shaped by its pioneering skatepark?

As skateboarding becomes an Olympic sport (in Summer 2021), the documentary maker and sound artist Steve Urquhart presents an audio memorial to his uncle Iain, blending exclusive and personal access to the late architect's archive with the sounds, music and voices of skateboard culture and counter-culture. In doing so, he reveals a bigger story of artistic ambition and cultural aspiration in Britain's vibrant 20th-century "new towns"... and a surprising connection with a swimming pool, created by the Finnish architect Alvar Aalto...

Includes music featured in acclaimed skate films and video games – from John Coltrane, Herbie Hancock and Roy Ayers, to Dinosaur Jr, Pixies, Gang Starr, and Lupe Fiasco.

New Generation Thinkers 2020

Tudor Virtual Reality

Advances in robotics and virtual reality are giving us ever more 'realistic' ways of representing the world, but the quest for vivid visualisation is thousands of years old. This essay takes the guide to oratory and getting your message across written by the ancient Roman Quintilian and focuses in on a wall painting of The Judgment of Solomon in an Elizabethan house in the village of Much Hadham in Hertfordshire. Often written off as stiff, formal and artificial with arguments that the Reformation fear of idolatry stifled Elizabethan art, New Generation Thinker Christina Faraday argues that story telling and conveying vivid detail was an important part of painting in this period as art was used to communicate messages to serve social, political and religious ends.

Christina Faraday is a New Generation Thinker who lectures in the History of Art at the University of Cambridge. You can hear her discussing the history of fairgrounds at the end of a Free Thinking episode called Kindness <https://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/m000j9cd> and her work on an exhibition at the National Portrait Gallery of the painting of Nicholas Hilliard in a Free Thinking episode about the joy of miniatures <https://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/m0002mk2>

A Restless Spirit

Donald Macleod considers the reasons behind Edvard Grieg's wanderlust, with music from his famous piano concerto and the second of his Peer Gynt suites.

On 9th September 1907, it's estimated that some forty to fifty thousand people turned out to pay their respects and watch Edvard Grieg's cortège pass through the streets of Bergen. It's an image that speaks of the enormous affection and esteem in which Grieg was held at the time of his death. Bergen was where Grieg was born in 1843, and in a speech he made 60 years later, he acknowledged that his music was drawn from the life of its people, the surroundings of the town and its natural beauty. His birthplace is one of several locations which provided Grieg with professional opportunity and creative nourishment. This week Donald Macleod is exploring Grieg's life through the contrasting environments he needed to find the inspiration to write music. Donald begins his survey in Bergen, before assessing the decade Grieg spent in Oslo, the solitude he found in the picturesque Hardanger region. But Grieg had another, contradictory side to his nature, he was also a restless spirit and a keen traveller.

Grieg's passionate love of Norway didn't prevent him from undertaking lengthy conducting tours of the major European cities. It's a routine he established in his forties and which he continued right up to the end of his life.

Klaus Mäkelä (conductor)

No prizes for identifying the real hero of Richard Strauss's Ein Heldenleben. With its swashbuckling self-confidence and self-mocking humour, this 'Hero's Life' is very much the world according to Richard Strauss – an exuberant, off-the-scale showpiece for the Oslo Philharmonic, making its first Proms appearance under its recently appointed and widely acclaimed Chief Conductor Klaus Mäkelä. Joining them, in Liszt's First Piano Concerto, is the phenomenal Yuja Wang, who's said that she 'feels like a rock star' when playing at the Proms. Sibelius's awe-inspiring panorama of the Finnish forests opens a high-octane evening with one of Europe's great orchestras, and two of the most talked-about classical musicians in the world today.

Regarding the Pain of Others

How do we communicate the horrors of war to a public saturated with bad news and gruesome digital images? For almost two centuries, photographers have attempted to capture the experience of conflict in stark pictures, scenes that aim to move us to action, to engage.

In her 2003 essay Regarding the Pain of Others, Susan Sontag grappled with this question. War photographs, Sontag believed, confront us with our simultaneous need to look and to turn away. Yet for Sontag, most people could never understand what war is like. 'We don't get it', she wrote.

Allan Little knew Sontag and here takes up the mantle. He has spent decades reporting in conflict zones from Bosnia to Sierra Leone. As a young reporter he believed, in his own words, in 'the power of witness'. Now he's not so sure. What purpose do war reports or images serve? Why do they seem to make little or no difference?

Allan talks to reporters and journalists who he's met during conflicts, especially in Bosnia. Janine di Giovanni, who has spent a lifetime committed to exposing the cruelties of war along with photographer Paul Lowe, now resident in Sarajevo. We also hear from Alixandra Fazzina about the care to make meaningful visual stories, avoiding stereotypes. Zaina Erhaim, a Syrian journalist, tells us what it feels like when the world doesn't listen. And we consider the contemporary power of Goya's early-19th-century series The Disasters of War with historian Juliet Wilson-Bureau.
