

SATURDAY 18 FEBRUARY 2023*SAT 01:00 Composed with Emeli Sandé (m0017dtm)

Feel the emotion with broken-hearted tunes

Emeli Sandé explores the music that brings her strength and inspiration, from classical, to pop, and beyond.

This week's selection invites you to really feel the emotion, with music to soundtrack sadness and heartbreak, from FKA Twigs, Vangelis, Wolf Alice and more.

And in this, and every episode, Emeli invites listeners to join her in Composure Moment. This week, put everything on pause, for Samuel Barber's Adagio For Strings.

10.30am Building a Library: Laura Tunbridge on Mozart's String Quartet No 19 in C major, K. 465 ('Dissonance')

Mozart's 'Dissonance' Quartet is the last of a set of six famously dedicated by Mozart to his 'very dear friend' Joseph Haydn. Soon after he arrived in Vienna in 1781, Mozart came to know Haydn's recently published Op. 33 set of innovative string quartets which, said Haydn, had been composed in 'a new and special way'. It was no idle boast. Not only more concentrated and sophisticated than any previous string quartet, the Op. 33s also employed all four instruments in a more equal, conversational style than ever before.

For Mozart, responding to the Op. 33s with his own set of quartets became a longer and more arduous compositional challenge than any other he ever undertook. The 'Dissonance' got its nickname in the 19th-century, well after Mozart's death, on account of its mysterious slow introduction, with its complex and unsettling harmonies. It caps the set of six which impressed its dedicatee so much that, shortly after the 1785 premiere, Haydn declared to Leopold Mozart that 'Before God and as an honest man, I tell you that your son is the greatest composer known to me either in person or by name.'

SAT 11:45 Music Matters (m001j4r2)

Evelyn Glennie

Tom Service visits Evelyn Glennie to discuss her life and career. As a soloist and improviser, the profoundly deaf musician created a role that had never existed in the classical world before, that of a solo percussionist. Growing up on a farm in Aberdeenshire, Evelyn Glennie's journey to musical stardom took her through the Royal Academy of Music to playing at the Proms in 1992; she was a household name on TV throughout the late 80s and 90s, and led hundreds of musicians at the Olympic Opening Ceremony in 2012. She's commissioned an entire repertoire of concertos, has a vast archive of percussion instruments and has a determination to make the most of every moment. With Tom, as she shows him around her many instruments, she explores the essential principle that's been the cornerstone of her life - listening.

SAT 13:00 Inside Music (m001j4r4)

Cellist Matthew Barley on textures, togetherness and taking your time

Today on Inside Music, cellist Matthew Barley reveals moments of fresh insight into music making: from his cello teacher Natalia Shakhovskaya in Moscow, to the perfectly in sync ensemble playing of the Calefax Reed Quintet.

Matthew also plays a track by Anna Meredith from his upcoming album, and finds adventurous and shocking harmony in the choral writing of 16th-century composer Carlo Gesualdo and also Morten Lauridsen, four hundred years later.

Plus, a difficult situation leads Matthew to a new opportunity...

A series in which each week a musician explores a selection of music - from the inside.

SAT 15:00 Sound of Cinema (m001j4r6)

Volker Bertelmann

With the Baftas this weekend and the Oscars imminent, Matthew Sweet meets the German composer/pianist Volker Bertelmann (aka "Hauschka"), the nominated composer in the Best Score category for both the Baftas and the Oscars this year, for the remake of the classic First World War inspired 'All Quiet On The Western Front'. Matthew talks to Volker about his fascination with the prepared piano and about working with "found sound" in his scores. He discusses his long-time collaboration with composer Dustin O'Halloran and his scores for 'Lion', 'Adrift', 'The Old Guard', 'Summerland', 'Ammonite', 'Against The Ice', 'Stowaway', 'War Sailor' and 'All Quiet On The Western Front'.

SAT 17:00 J to Z (m001j4r8)

Nina at 90

Kevin Le Gendre presents a special edition of J to Z exploring the music and legacy of Nina Simone, who would have been 90 on the 21st of February this year. Playing classic recordings and lesser-known cuts, as well as a remarkable concert from 1988, Kevin charts the breadth of Nina's output and tells the stories behind her songs, touching on her early life as an aspiring concert pianist, her involvement in the civil rights movement and her celebration of her African identity as the High Priestess of Soul. Throughout the show we hear candid interviews with Nina Simone herself and contributions from some of the many contemporary musicians she's inspired. Vocalists Nnenna Freelon and Zara McFarlane, saxophonist Cassie Kinoshi and pianist Vijay Iyer share their favourite Nina Simone tracks, reflect on her importance and offer some deep insights into her music.

Produced by Thomas Rees for Somethin' Else

SAT 18:30 Opera on 3 (m001j4rd)

Britten's The Turn of the Screw

Britten's creepy yet compelling opera, based on Henry James's sinister novella, explores the themes which preoccupied Britten: childhood, loss of innocence, night, transgression and evil.

A governess arrives at a large country house whose only occupants are the housekeeper Mrs Grose and two orphans, Miles and Flora. Charged by their absent guardian with looking after the children, the Governess becomes aware of two mysterious figures, identified by the housekeeper as the valet, Peter Quint, and the former governess Miss Jessel. Both of them, the housekeeper tells the Governess, are dead. But at night their malign, ghostly manifestations call to the children and the Governess attempts to protect them. Flora is taken to safety by Mrs Grose but as Quint speaks to Miles, he dies in the arms of the Governess.

Perhaps the opera's most famous line, quoted from WB Yeats's The Second Coming, sums up Britten's disquieting and ambiguous masterpiece: "the ceremony of innocence is drowned".

Recorded last September at the Béla Bartók National Concert Hall, Budapest and introduced by Kate Molleson.

Alexander Gadjevi plays Chopin on Chopin's own piano

Alexander Gadjevi plays Chopin's Piano Concerto No 2 on Chopin's own 1848 Pleyel piano, and Alessandro Fisher sings Britten's Winter Words.

Britten's eight settings of poems by Thomas Hardy are named after Hardy's last published collection and Britten dedicated them to John and Myfanwy Piper, the latter being the librettist of his opera, The Turn of the Screw, written at the same time. Alessandro Fisher recorded the songs recently at the BBC studios. Before them, Alexander Gadjevi evokes the world of Frédéric Chopin's salon in a performance he gave last year in the Music Room at Hatchlands Park in Surrey. He is joined by the period instruments of the Consone Quartet as he plays the Second Concerto on Chopin's own Pleyel piano of the 1840s, the period in which Henry James set his Turn of the Screw.

Nina at 90

Corey Mwamba presents new music from bass clarinetist Aviva Endean and UK ensemble Union Division, plus 90th birthday reflections on Nina Simone.

Marking her 90th birthday and twenty years since her passing, this week we celebrate Nina Simone. A trailblazing artist, composer and live improviser, she defined her artistry as black classical music, and we'll dive into some of the lesser-known recordings of Simone in full musical flight. Though her work and message continue to offer ongoing directives and reflections on creative and social freedom, honouring her memory would be incomplete without acknowledging the exploitation she was vocal about throughout her life, and Corey explores some of the questions that her words and her music bring forth today alongside a personal tribute from Philadelphia-based writer Jordannah Elizabeth.

Also on the show, the Australian bass clarinetist Aviva Endean takes her cue from nature's whispers - the beating of a moth's wing or the pulsating stillness of a night sky. Using archival recording and experiments in pitch, she crafts an intuitive world of cool reprieve and intimate listening. Elsewhere in the programme, new music from British supergroup Union Division who orchestrate an egalitarian world of synchronised signals and regenerative possibilities.

Kate Molleson with an inspiring musical mix

Kate Molleson sits in for Sarah Walker and chooses three hours of attractive and uplifting music to complement your morning.

Today, Kate plays choral music by Bartok full of chromatic harmonies that tug at the heart strings, and delights in one of the high points of Beethoven's chamber music - the opening movement of his 'Archduke' piano trio.

Plus, a mezzo-soprano whose focused voice perfectly expresses the music of Barbara Strozzi...

Susie Boyt

The novelist and journalist Susie Boyt tells Michael Berkeley about her lifelong passions for music, theatre and dancing.

Whether she's writing black comedies about dysfunctional families or about her intense love of Judy Garland, Susie Boyt is unafraid to address the big questions in all our lives. Her seven novels explore how we can best take care of people, how we can survive life's inevitable traumas and how we might live alongside the loss of people we love.

Susie chooses pieces by Mozart, Beethoven and Britten as well as music from the ballet Giselle that conjures up the fragility and vulnerability of childhood. Susie's father was the painter Lucian Freud and we hear a song by the music hall star Gus Elen which recalls the many hours she sat for him in his studio sharing their love of song lyrics.

The Emperor's New Clothes

Jane Austen's Catherine in Northanger Abbey wonders what she should wear to the ball, while Dickens's Miss Havisham still wears her wedding clothes years after she was ditched. Aldous Huxley considers the folds in his trousers, and Diogenes folds his cloak in two for summer. Jenny Joseph threatens to wear purple when she is old, and the Emperor parades without any clothes at all. And in London Fashion Week we celebrate the wild and wonderful life and work of the late Vivienne Westwood. There's music from Prokofiev's Cinderella, Richard Strauss's Salome, Anoushka Shankar, PJ Harvey and JS Bach. Our readers are Julia Winwood and Jonathan Keeble.

Imagining the Permafrost

The permafrost is a thriving ecosystem, teaming with life, mythology, histories and futures, hidden just below the surface. Yet unlike tropical rainforests or the deep oceans, this frozen expanse rarely appears in the cultural imagination. Curator Sophie J Williamson ventures on a journey to discover the life of the permafrost.

In -40° winter of the Canadian Yukon Valley, ancient forests, perfectly preserved by the permafrost, are uncovered by miners and 10,000-year-old grass seeds sprout into life. In the blustery remote Arctic town of Ny-Ålesund, Svalbard (the world's northernmost settlement) cryomicrobiologists drill boreholes hundreds of meters deep to explore the deepest and oldest of earthly ecologies, bringing to the surface living microbes that are hundreds of thousands of years old. And in unceded Sápmi lands of northern Finland, permafrost mounds decompose into marshy peatlands, while biologists trace the shifting bio- and geoaoustics of a changing ecology.

From the piercing-white tundra and the hundreds of thousands of lakes across the vast expanse of Siberia, indigenous folklore emerges from the unknowns of the icy underlands. And scientists in Yakutsk (the world's coldest city), travel the icy landscapes to discover the stories secreted within the still fleshy, visceral carcasses of mammoths and ancient creatures that are exposed as the millennia-year-old ice thaws.

With contributions by Hannu Autto, Jonathan Carruthers-Jones, Tori Herridge, Karen Lloyd, Sanna Piilo, Svetlana Romanova, Nikita Tananaev, Peter von Tiesenhausen, and other members of Sámi, Sakha and Yukagir communities of unceded Sápmi territory and Northern Siberia who prefer not to be named.

Specially commissioned spoken word piece by Sata Taas (written and spoken by Al-Yene and Jaangy, with sound design by Karina Kazaryan aka KP Transmission)

With excerpts of Jana Winderen's 'Energy Field', 'Listening Through the Dead Zones' and 'Pasvikdalen'. Published by Touch Music.

A Jig into History

There's no fly on the wall account to tell us exactly why Will Kemp left Shakespeare's acting Company The Lord Chamberlain's men at the turn of the 16th and 17th century. The persuasive theory is that the playwright had had enough of Kemp's larger than life clowning and extemporising. Whatever the case, we know that his personality and fame were enough to attract large crowds as he set out in 1599 on a wagered Morris dance, or jig, to Norwich.

With a copy of Kemp's recollection of his feat 'Kemps Nine Daies Wonder' under her arm, Professor Nandini Das takes to the streets of London to examine the impact of Kemp's endeavour and explain why it had as much to do with merchant venturing as it did street and theatrical entertainment.

She's joined by scholars Tracey Hill, Daisy Black and the former Olympian Peter Radford, all of whom believe that while Shakespeare's legacy endures through a clear line of English Theatrical tradition, Kemp's journey should also be seen as an early example of the enduring tradition of ordinary folk making sporting endeavour and entertainment pay.

Peter ..... Dominic Coleman
Nina ..... Erin Doherty
Boris ..... Joel MacCormack
Eugene ..... Danny Sapani
Paulie ..... Nina Wadia
Ian ..... Paul Rider
Martha ..... Chloë Sommer
Simon/Jacob ..... Tom Kiteley

Sound Design by Peter Ringrose
Directed by Toby Swift

The Seagull is the latest collaboration between actor/writer Katherine Tozer and composer John Chambers, whose version of Chekhov's The Cherry Orchard premiered on BBC Radio 3 in 2018. They also work together for PALIMPSEST, the innovative multimedia theatre company.

Chekhov's theatre play was written in 1895, and is regarded as one of his four major works for the stage, despite a famously disastrous first production in St Petersburg. Two years later it was revived by the groundbreaking Moscow Art Theatre, where it was greeted with unanimous acclaim.

3. Death and Transfiguration

In this third and final episode, Richard Egarr takes us from the near complete disappearance of the harpsichord in the 19th century to a remarkable revival: celebrating the important and under-told story of the women who secured that revival - Violet Gordon Woodhouse, Sylvia Marlowe, Isolde Ahlgrimm and Wanda Landowska and Richard shares what he learned from his time with Gustav Leonhardt. From Ligeti to The Beatles, the 'machine that goes ping' continues to surprise as it inspires a new generation of Juilliard harpsichord students in their fresh compositions for the instrument.

Richard Wagner (1813-1883)

Total Artwork

Wagner dreams of creating a new kind of music theatre, but can he muster the extravagant resources he will need to see his grand visions made real? Presented by Donald Macleod.

This week, Donald Macleod follows Wagner on his decades-long journey to realise his dream of building his own music theatre, and establishing a festival there dedicated to his music. We see how Wagner's revolutionary ideas and vaulting ambition struggled against the reality of securing supporters, raising finances, and inspiring audiences.

Today, Wagner sets out his vision of a new kind of artwork that will unite all the arts and address the great philosophical questions of the age. These 'music dramas' would be staged in a specially constructed theatre of his own design. It would be a hugely expensive enterprise and surely far beyond the reach of the poverty-stricken composer.

Power through with classical music

After Leroy Anderson's 'Syncopated Clock' (1945) opening your Classical Mixtape, Antonio Vivaldi brings you back to

'Summer' with his iconic 'Four Seasons' concertos. Then time for 'The Hours', with Philip Glass's soundtrack composed for the eponymous 2003 film inspired by Virginia Woolf, before a jazz version of 'Some Day My Prince Will Come' from Disney's

'Snow White'. As snow season is still upon us, Elizabeth Poston's arrangement of the traditional carol 'Jesus Christ the Apple Tree' is next. The clock is ticking with Haydn's Symphony No. 101, before time slows down for Eric Satie's peaceful and melancholic Gnossienne No. 1. But a festive brindisi to conclude, with the iconic duet 'Libiamo ne' lieti calici' from Giuseppe Verdi's 1853 opera 'La traviata'.

Strauss and Schumann from Copenhagen

Fiona Talkington presents one of the highlights of the concert season in Europe: Fabio Luisi conducts the Danish National Symphony Orchestra in Richard Strauss's gripping portrait of the seducer Don Juan, while Schumann celebrates the joy of life in his Symphony no. 2.

Along with these familiar works is Hans Abrahamsen's Horn Concerto, a new masterpiece by the famous Danish composer, described by one critic after its Berlin premiere in the following terms: "a panorama of vastness and tranquillity opens up at the beginning, the strings and flageolet hint at dawning distances, plucks of the harp light up like the first stars in the evening, and the block of wood that a percussionist beats meaningfully cracks. And the horn? It sings above it as longingly and brightly as only a horn can: softly muted, with a vision of great adventures, perhaps also with the memory of them."

Walking the Causeways

Patrick Gale

There are 43 tidal islands around the UK, accessible just briefly each day, along beguiling and perilous paths.

As the tide retreats, five writers walk their favourite causeway to islands of refuge, pilgrimage, magic and glamour.

Patrick Gale joins those seemingly walking on water as they cross to St Michael's Mount in this first episode. Between kite surfers and dog walkers, he is suspended between two worlds as he follows the S shaped causeway, shaped by relentless tides and currents. He is joined by Lord St Leven who tells him about the near impossible task of maintaining the route to the Mount, his family's home since the 17th century. And from the tidal walk emerge the stories and myths that have built up around Karrek Loos yn Koos, first visited by Archangel Michael, and now by hundreds of thousands of tourists.

Across the series:

Evie Wyld retraces a childhood walk across the Freshwater Causeway on the Isle of Wight, finding graveyards and ghost benches.

Claire McGowan sees time change as she enters the freezing waters off Burgh Island and sips cocktails in the art deco hotel bar.

Ben Cottam almost gets stuck in the mud as he searches for the grave of a black slave and questions his family's past at Sunderland Point.

And W H Herbert follows in the footsteps of pilgrims to Lindisfarne.

As sea levels rise and the sands shift, causeways are in flux. The Essayists draw us down onto the sands, revealing what these liminal routes mean to both them and the cultural history of the UK.

Richard Wagner (1813-1883)

Deceit and Disillusion

King Ludwig seem only too eager to bankroll Wagner's grand ambitions, but how long can he turn a blind eye to his hero's flaws? Presented by Donald Macleod.

This week, Donald Macleod follows Wagner on his decades-long journey to realise his dream of building his own music theatre, and establishing a festival there dedicated to his music. We see how Wagner's revolutionary ideas and vaulting ambition struggled against the reality of securing supporters, raising finances, and inspiring audiences.

Today: it appears that Wagner has found the ideal patron in King Ludwig II of Bavaria. The young monarch is a passionate admirer of Wagner's music and has the resources to realise all of Wagner's grand plans. However, Ludwig's ministers are suspicious about Wagner's motives and, soon, rumours of a scandalous affair threaten to derail everything.

Dance transformed

From the Bridgewater Hall, Manchester
Presented by Ian Skelly

"Music somehow not of this world, but from somewhere else above" - Diaghilev's words on hearing Stravinsky's music for the 1928 ballet Apollo, hinting at the unearthly nature of his first collaboration with choreographer George Balanchine in which the god Apollo shares the stage with three muses. Classical clarity, shape and form characterise this music's spirit. By way of contrast, Angela Hewitt joins the BBC Philharmonic and Sir Andrew Davis as soloist in Mozart's A major Piano Concerto (K 488), true classicism but enjoying an exploration of colour, harmony and melody. We hear music by Stravinsky of a different, more vivacious style, in his orchestrations of piano duets composed for children, his First Suite, first performed only three years before Apollo. Three of its numbers are inspired by national folk dances, a Napolitana, an Española and a Balalaika. The dance-infused keyboard music of eighteenth century France, provided the inspiration for Ravel's "Le tombeau de Couperin" though while writing it, Ravel turned the work into a homage for friends killed in the First World War. Clarity of texture and expression shine through his tributes to friends lost and to music of an earlier age. The "apotheosis of the Viennese Waltz" ends the evening - that was Ravel's own description of "La Valse" - music during which the accepted cultured vision of this highly civilised dance is exploded in an obscene orgy reflecting the fall of the Hapsburg Empire.

Walking the Causeways

Evie Wyld

There are 43 tidal islands around the UK, accessible just briefly each day, along beguiling and perilous paths.

As the tide retreats, five writers walk their favourite causeway to islands of refuge, pilgrimage, magic and glamour.

Today, Evie Wyld boards the ferry at Lymington pier and retraces a path well-travelled with her family during school holidays - across the Freshwater Causeway on the Isle of Wight. Her route takes her past ghost benches, a graveyard, World War Two pill boxes on a journey through grief, memory and what survives the tide.

Across the series:

Claire McGowan sees time change as she enters the freezing waters off Burgh Island and sips cocktails in the art deco hotel bar.

Ben Cottam almost gets stuck in the mud as he searches for the grave of a black slave and questions his family's past at Sunderland Point.

Ghosts of Caribbean history

Hungry Ghosts is the new novel set in colonial Trinidad by Kevin Jared Hosein. Colin Grant has written a memoir about his Jamaican family. A new art project, Windrush Portraits, is a collaboration between Mary Evans and Michael Elliott with communities in both Kingston, Jamaica, and Southampton, UK. Shahidha Bari looks at the way ghosts of history haunt these artworks.

Producer: Robyn Read

Hungry Ghosts by Kevin Jared Hosein is out now. Colin Grant's memoir I'm Black So You Don't Have to Be is out now and you can find out more about his work at <https://colingrant.info/>

Colin is also Director of the Royal Literary Fund website Writers Mosaic <https://writersmosaic.org.uk/> This is an online magazine and developmental resource focused on UK writers of the global majority.

Windrush Projects will see special billboards on display across Jamaica throughout February 2023 and the artists Mary Evans and Michael Elliott will make new artworks, created in collaboration with communities that will be presented during October 2023 (Black History Month in the UK) in both Southampton, UK and Kingston, Jamaica.

You can find a collection of conversations exploring different aspects of Black History on the Free Thinking programme website. Walking the Causeways

Claire McGowan

Claire McGowan enters the freezing waters off Burgh Island, connected at low tide to the mainland by a short sandy causeway.

There are 43 tidal islands around the UK, accessible just briefly each day along beguiling and perilous paths. Across the series, five writers walk their favourite causeway to islands of refuge, pilgrimage, magic and glamour.

Claire grew up with the mythology of the giant Finn McCool flinging rocks at a rival in Scotland and building the Giant's Causeway. Arriving at Burgh Island, she steps into tranquil 1920s glamour, to sip Agatha Christie inspired cocktails in the Art Deco hotel bar. In this time capsule, Claire explores our relationship with Golden Age Crime and her own past; as the tide retreats, past relationships disappear with the waves and time simultaneously changes and stays still.

Richard Wagner (1813-1883)

Opening Night

The opening night of the very first Bayreuth Festival approaches, and with it, yet more troubles for Wagner. Presented by Donald Macleod.

This week, Donald Macleod follows Wagner on his decades-long journey to realise his dream of building his own music theatre, and establishing a festival there dedicated to his music. We see how Wagner's revolutionary ideas and vaulting ambition struggled against the reality of securing supporters, raising finances, and inspiring audiences.

Today: Wagner's Festival Theatre at Bayreuth is finally complete, after many years of struggle. Now all he has to do is put together an orchestra, a company of singers, an entire production team, and mount the most ambitious opera cycle ever conceived. If that wasn't enough pressure, the whole world is watching to see how he does.

Walking the Causeways

W N Herbert

There are 43 tidal islands around the UK, accessible just briefly each day, along beguiling and perilous paths.

As the tide retreats, five writers walk their favourite causeway to islands of refuge, pilgrimage, magic and glamour.

Today, W N Herbert follows in the footsteps of pilgrims to Lindisfarne and reflects on the causeway connecting to a meditative space and how we are all now connected by various versions of a tidal causeway, advancing and retreating through social media.

Across the series:

Claire McGowan sees time change as she enters the freezing waters off Burgh Island and sips cocktails in the art deco hotel bar.

Ben Cottam almost gets stuck in the mud as he searches for the grave of a black slave and questions his family's past at Sunderland Point.

And between kite surfers and dog walkers, Patrick Gale is suspended between two worlds as he follows the S-shaped causeway, shaped by relentless tides and currents to St Michael's Mount.

Evie Wyld boards the ferry at Lymington pier and retraces a path well-travelled in her childhood -the Western Yar on the Isle of Wight.

Ambient Scotland

Elizabeth Alker presents a mix of music from some of the established artists and emerging musicians that make up Scotland's prolific ambient and experimental music scenes. In a programme first broadcast around the annual St Andrew's Day celebrations of Scottish culture, expect music from Edinburgh's legendary electronic duo Boards of Canada, plus new sounds from Dundee-based composer Andrew Wasyluk's latest release, inspired by time spent on Inchcolm Island in the Firth of Forth; and the pioneering work of composer Janet Beat.

Richard Wagner (1813-1883)

Journey's End

Wagner's inaugural Bayreuth Festival has left him once again with crippling debts. Is this how his dream will end? Presented by Donald Macleod.

This week, Donald Macleod follows Wagner on his decades-long journey to realise his dream of building his own music theatre, and establishing a festival there dedicated to his music.
We see how Wagner's revolutionary ideas and vaulting ambition struggled against the reality of securing supporters, raising finances, and inspiring audiences.

Today: Wagner's inaugural Bayreuth Festival had been a great critical success but had left him, once again with seemingly insurmountable debts. The planned second festival now seems like an impossible dream. The constant struggle has taken its toll, and Wagner's friends wonder if he has the strength to continue.

LSO St Luke's: Basically Beethoven (4/4)

Hannah French concludes the week of concerts in the Basically Beethoven series, recorded last month at LSO St Luke's in London.

The Paris-based Quatuor Modigliani are recognised as one of today's most sought-after quartets, and today they combine the challenge of Beethoven's first 'Razumovsky' quartet with Spanish passion from Joaquin Turina in his hot-blooded String Quartet, 'The Bullfighter's Prayer.'

Turina:

String Quartet Op 34, 'The Bullfighter's Prayer'

Beethoven:

American dreams and sonic fireworks

The BBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Gemma New in John Adams, Valerie Coleman, Samuel Barber and, with pianist Lise de la Salle, Gershwin's ebullient piano concerto.

President Nixon goes to China – and diplomacy becomes a foxtrot. George Gershwin scales the pinnacles of jazz-age Manhattan, in the ultimate skyscraper concerto. Valerie Coleman finds that unity has African roots, and Samuel Barber grapples with European tradition, in a symphony written at storm force.

America has many musical voices, and in her debut concert with the BBC SO, Gemma New has conceived a concert that's as diverse and as generous as the American dream itself - ranging from the UK premiere of Valerie Coleman's exuberant "Anthem of Unity" to 20th century classics by Adams and Barber. And to top it all, there's another BBC SO debut, as the "stunning" (Washington Classical Review) Lise de la Salle plays Gershwin's gloriously tuneful concerto: expect fireworks worthy of the Fourth of July.

Live from the Barbican, London.

Presented by Hannah French

Walking the Causeways

Ben Cottam

Ben Cottam puts on full waterproofs to cross the causeway to Sunderland Point, in search of the grave of a black slave.

There are 43 tidal islands around the UK, accessible just briefly each day along beguiling paths. Across the series, five writers journey across a favourite causeway to islands of refuge, pilgrimage, magic and glamour.

Wheels spin wildly and Ben peers anxiously through mud-sprayed windscreen as he tries to drive to Sunderland. There is no real boundary between land and sea, the coastline as fluid as the tide. The danger signs escalate and he remembers tales of insidious rising waters, drilled into him as a child by coastguards from Morecambe Bay.

He treks to what is uncomfortably called Sambo's grave, the resting place of young black slave. Abandoned there by a sea captain in the 18th century, Ben wonders how his own family might have treated him and is heartened to find fresh tributes marking a lost life.

Producer: Sarah Bowen

FRI 23:00 Late Junction (m001j4nn)

Lucy Liyou's mixtape

Verity Sharp shares our latest Late Junction mixtape, which this time comes courtesy of Philadelphia-based musician and sound collagist Lucy Liyou. Bringing together field recordings, audio samples from memes, text-to-speech generated audio, synthesizers and acoustic piano, Lucy Liyou's work captures snapshots in time, channelling their Korean-American lineage and personal experiences of familial relationships into distinctly-original musical offerings. The results are often disorienting and surreal sonic patchworks, taking inspiration from a range of sources such as Korean TV dramas, audiobooks and Pansori, a minimalist style of Korean folk opera.

Elsewhere in the show, we hear a recording of bells that chime in accordance with the rise and fall of the tides, and a previously unreleased track from a new posthumous album by Malian musical pioneer Ali Farka Touré.
