SOUNDTRACKS: Much-loved scores from film, TV and games

Devonté Hynes explores the powerful, evolving sounds of classical music, with playlists from across the musical spectrum.

In the third episode of the series, Devonté shares some of his favourite scores for film, television and video games.

The selection includes Björk, Mica Levi, Trent Reznor and Duke Ellington.

SAT 02:00 The Music & Meditation Podcast (p0f69zx6) Series 2

Calm the chaos with Izzy Judd

Nao chats to Izzy Judd about the chaos of everyday life, the need to juggle various demands and how meditation can help you navigate it more calmly. Izzy Judd - author, violinist, mindfulness expert and mum of three - explains some techniques from her book Mindfulness for Mums to help you find a few moments for yourself.

The music that soundtracks Izzy's guided meditation was composed by Segun Akinola and recorded by the BBC Concert Orchestra exclusively for this episode.

Whether you're brand new to meditation or you've tried it before, this series is the perfect place to pick it up from.

Music you'll hear in this episode includes:

SAT 02:30 The Music & Meditation Podcast (p0f6bn2y) Series 2

Let it go with Maude Hirst

In this episode Nao talks to Maude Hirst about how to let it go - anything from arguments to negative criticism that's holding you back in life. Former actor turned meditation coach, writer, and founder of the EnergyRise app Maude Hirst shares her top tips on how meditation can help you release things you're holding on to and move forward more freely.

The music that soundtracks Maude's guided meditation was composed by Eleanor Haward and recorded by the BBC Singers and members of the BBC Concert Orchestra exclusively for this episode.

Whether you're just starting to meditate or you're a seasoned meditator, this is the perfect podcast for you.

Music you'll hear in this episode includes:

10.30am Building a Library: Marina Frolova-Walker on Rachmaninov's Symphonic Dances

Rachmaninov had always struggled to balance the competing demands of his three careers as composer, conductor and pianist. But after the mid-1930s, following the disappointing reception of some of his recent music, he had all but stopped composing, spending most of his professional life on the arduous, if lucrative international concert circuit, widely acknowledged as the greatest pianist of his day. Taking a house on Long Island for the summer in 1940, Rachmaninov suddenly began composing again and the result was the Symphonic Dances. It was natural that the 1941 premiere was with the Philadelphia Orchestra under their music director, Eugene Ormandy: Rachmaninov had made his debut as a conductor there in 1909, returning often as soloist and conductor for concerts and recordings.

Rachmaninov's final completed music, the Symphonic Dances initially had a lukewarm critical reception and were slow to gain popularity. But the dazzlingly orchestrated triptych, with its satisfying arc, full of intriguing musical cyphers, self-quotation and allusion is now a long-established and well-loved repertory staple, characterised by that typical Rachmaninov combination of nostalgic melancholy and tumultuous excitement.

SAT 11:45 Music Matters (m001kgw6)
Rachmaninov on Lake Lucerne

Kate Molleson marks the 150 anniversary of Sergei Rachmaninov's birth. She visits his home in Switzerland - after years of renovation, the beautiful Villa Senar, on the banks of Lake Lucerne, is reopening to the public. This is the peaceful summer residence where Rachmaninov lived in in the 1930s and where he composed the Rhapsody on a theme by Paganini and the Third symphony.

Kate is shown around the Villa by its director Andrea Loetscher. They are joined by pianist Boris Giltburg, who is about to release his new Rachmaninov piano concertos disc, and who performs specially for Music Matters on Rachmaninov's original Steinway grand piano in the Villa's studio. Also joining Kate at the Villa is Fiona Maddocks: music critic and author of the upcoming book 'Goodbye Russia: Rachmaninoff in Exile'. Together they discuss Rachmaninov's life, work and his time spent at Villa Senar.

SAT 13:00 Inside Music (m001kgwr)
Viola player Paul Cassidy with musical dreams and legends

Paul Cassidy has been playing viola in the Brodsky Quartet his entire working life. It's a truly 'inside' position which gives him special insight into his musical choices today. He explores the crossover between fugues and riffs with tracks by Nina Simone and the Arctic Monkeys; he delves into the traditional energy of dances by Taraf de Haïdouks and Stravinsky, and he's blown away by the skill and virtuosity of accordionist Alexander Hrustevish playing Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto - both the orchestral and solo parts!

Plus, Elvis Costello's take on A Midsummer Night's Dream and Paganini played by (according to Paul) the greatest viola player of all time.

A series in which each week a musician explores a selection of music - from the inside.

Lisa Streich's Ofelia

Kate Molleson explores some of the latest sounds in new music from around the UK and beyond.

Ailbhe Nic Oireachtaigh and the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra explore the spatial potential of Glasgow's Old Fruitmarket in New Mountain, Reaching Plane. And, in her Ofelia, the Swedish composer Lisa Streich finds romance by artificially placing the listener inside a closed piano. As she says: "This forced entrance into the body of the instrument makes it fragile... I often thought of Ophelia from Shakespeare's Hamlet when composing this piece." There'll also be a taster, fresh from Bergen's 2023 Borealis experimental music festival as Swedish-Ethiopian vocalist Sofia Jernberg performs ሳታላቲ - Amharic for Veil. .

SUN 00:00 Freeness (m001kgyw)

Body Music

The Alaska-based interdisciplinary artist S Hollis Mickey offers an invitation for us to tune into the rhythms of our bodies. Reflecting on the impact their complex chronic illness has on their ability to play music, they work with their body, rather than against it, to produce meditative pieces that give human bones new life through gritty, metallic improvisations.

Tap dancer Petra Haller and pianist Meg Morley continue their longstanding creative partnership, one that eschews any sense of hierarchy between their mediums, and instead invites a rich interplay and an embodied approach to freeness. Quicksilver keys waltz with even quicker footwork. Elsewhere, we hear the soundtrack to a live movement performance from Brazilian artists Gabriel de Oliveira and Lara Santass, in dedication to the late Milford Graves: the duo give their bodies permission to say, "ah...hmmm".

Sarah Walker chooses one and a half hours of attractive and uplifting music to complement your morning.

Today, in this shorter edition of Sunday Morning, Sarah packs in music from across the globe: there's a lush French gavotte from Mexican composer Manuel Ponce, music brimming with personality from German composer Wilhelm Friedemann Bach, and Swedish composer Jan Sandström's piece Sång till Lotta allows the bass trombone to show off its colourful sonorities.

There's also spine-tingling choral music by Felice Anerio, and a song with words attributed to Anne Boleyn foreshadows her fate with a repeated falling melody.

Plus, music by Holst transports us to the Cotswolds...

Hypnotising Rachmaninov

"No sooner had the last chords died away than I fled, horrified, into the street... All my hopes, all my belief in myself, had been destroyed."

Sergei Rachmaninov described the disastrous premiere of his First Symphony which plunged him into a three-year creative crisis, unable to compose.

And yet three years later the piece that finally emerged was his masterpiece - his Second Piano Concerto - one of the best loved pieces of music ever written, immortalised in the public consciousness by Eric Carmen. Brief Encounter and any number of romantic music playlists.

Rachmaninov dedicated it to a Dr Nikolai Dahl - and Dahl practised hypnosis. Rachmaninov put his revival down to a series of hypnosis sessions with Dahl who repeated the same hypnotic formula day after day, "You WILL write a Concerto...it WILL be excellent...."

Now Georgia Mann has heard this story before and even told it on the radio, but has always been a bit sceptical. Can hypnosis really cure an artist to such a degree that they can go from despair to writing a masterpiece? Isn't it just for stage magicians and Disney villains?

The roots of modern hypnosis are often thought to lie with the Viennese Doctor, Franz Anton Mesmer in the 18th century, so Georgia visits Vienna and eminent hypnotherapist Dr Stella Nkenke to learn about mesmerism, what exactly happens when we're under hypnosis, and how it can be used to help musicians today. She talks to guitarist Craig Ogden about how he, like Rachmaninov, turned to the therapy to help cure a musical problem. And Georgia's scepticism is put to the test with a session in the hypnotic chair...

She enlists broadcaster Matthew Sweet to help understand how film and literature have shaped our understanding of hypnotism today, and she sits down with pianists Nikolai Lugansky and Katya Apekisheva and musicologist Marina Frolova-Walker to understand more about Rachmaninov's story via his glorious piano music. Can we learn anything of his struggles and personality in the heart-wrenching melodies of the Second Piano Concerto?

SUN 20:30 Drama on 3 (m001kgxp)

Kafka's Dick

Kafka's Dick was first performed in 1986, at the Royal Court. It is unusually successful at offering great entertainment with depth - Bennett's brilliant, laugh out loud comedy also grapples with issues of fame and artistic integrity.

The central premise is simple: Franz Kafka and his friend Max Brod, returned from the dead (Kafka metamorphosing from a pet tortoise), find themselves in the suburban home of Sydney, a Kafka fanatic and his less literary minded wife, Linda. Brod spends the entire drama trying to hide the fact that he did not burn Kafka's papers, as promised, but had them all published, thus making his friend one of the world's best-known writers. Along the way paternal relationships are examined. Kafka and his father Herman K's relative penis size become crucial to the plot whilst Sydney's Father, who pops in and out of the action, is increasingly convinced that these strange visitors are assessing him for a place in a care home.

Bennett's brilliant irreverence cuts through the often torturous academic interpretations of real lives and a talented writer. A laugh out loud comedy threaded through with literary references and quips.

The writer

Alan Bennett is a much loved author, playwright and screenwriter. He has won numerous awards and honours including two BAFTA Awards, four Laurence Olivier Awards, two Tony Awards and an Academy Award nomination for his film The Madness of King George (1994). Bennett is also the only remaining member of the legendary Beyond the Fringe satirical revue.

The sounds of the BBC's Wild Isles

This Slow Radio experience features sounds from the BBC television programme Wild Isles: a chance to revel in the extraordinary sounds recorded and created for the series, without voice-over or music.

Using an aural collage of clips, the half hour soundscape takes a journey from mountain stream to the sea, around Great Britain and Ireland. It utilises sounds from the Freshwater and Oceans episodes and begins with a specially recorded introduction by Sir David Attenborough.

From there the sounds of cascading streams and waterfalls give way to the call and shuffle of a common toad. Around the caves of County Cavan bats use sonar to navigate. Their ultrasonic clicks can be heard, slowed down. A cuckoo sings beside a chalk stream while a spider catches a pond skater in its web.

The distinctive low call of the bittern introduces the Suffolk reed beds, where great crested grebes perform a mating dance, beaks clashing. Further towards the sea, a colony of knot are scattered by a peregrine falcon, and in the Shetland Isles, a sea otter grunts and snorts around the rocks.

A thunderstorm at sea heralds a seal colony at Blakeney Point, Norfolk, where two males fight. Then the eerie calls of Manx shearwater, who visit each year from South America, are followed by the chatter of many gannets, in and out of water.

The Corryvreckan Whirlpool in Scotland pulls us under for an array of fantastical subaquatic sounds : cuttlefish, sea gooseberries, melon comb jelly; the squelch of a royal flush sea slug, spider crabs leaving their shells, and the scream of a scallop, devoured by a starfish. Dolphins break the surface, and a bluefin tuna skims across the waves before we sail out into Cardigan Bay.

Ellie Ajao

Uncovering the quirky, peculiar and personal connections that link music through history. Each piece of this half-hour eclectic music sequence is linked to the previous one, through all manner of connections, some tangential, some personal, often surprising.

This new series of three episodes introduces presenter Ellie Ajao, a recent graduate of Royal Holloway, University of London, and a former BBC Open Music trainee. Ellie loves nothing more than talking about music and culture. Keen to make classical music accessible to people from all backgrounds. Ellie's work is centred around uncovering the wonderful music of underrepresented composers.

Ellie's music choices in this first episode include pieces by Elizabeth Maconchy, Ravel, Stravinsky and Samuel Coleridge-Taylor.

Hildegard of Bingen and Isabella Leonarda

Visionary

Hildegard's life is changed for ever after she reveals a long-held secret. With Donald Macleod.

As Christians around the world prepare for Easter, Donald Macleod explores the life and music of two nuns who were also composers. Though Hildegard of Bingen and Isabella Leonarda lived five centuries apart, their stories and music are connected by their shared faith and their shared vocations. Both lived cloistered lives, shut away in convents and cut off from the everyday concerns of the societies in which they lived. Yet, they also enjoyed a profoundly rich and human connection with the world and with their God, revealed in the music and poetry they created and sent into the world.

Today, Donald Macleod focuses on Hildegard of Bingen's story with Hildegard's biographer, Fiona Maddocks. They examine how her seemingly unremarkable existence, within a provincial German monastery, was rapidly transformed after she confessed to receiving visions from God.

The Czech Philharmonic Orchestra

The Czech Philharmonic Orchestra are joined by the violinist Johan Dalene in Sibelius's Violin Concerto and the orchestra gives the long-awaited Czech premiere of Detlev Glanert's Prague Symphony.

The supremely musical Swedish violinist, Johan Dalene, a recent Radio 3 New Generation Artist, makes his debut with the venerable Czech orchestra. And, after the interval, the orchestra premieres Detlev Glanert's Prague Symphony', Lyric Fragments after Franz Kafka. For this major new work, Glanert chose twelve of Franz Kafka's lyrical descriptions of Prague. As Kafka wrote to a schoolmate: "Prague never lets go. Neither of you, nor of me. This little mother has claws." And in writing the work Glanert realised he says that: "the poems could tell a story about two people, by using two singers and allocating the texts as Mahler had done.....the mezzo and the bass voices are two sides of a personality, as if expressing an interior dialogue between opposing halves of a single character... They start in isolation but progressively grow together through the cycle...and the orchestra is the fluid medium between the two parts....in one sense, inevitably, the orchestra is me, the composer, so you could say there is an active triangular relationship in operation. This is my personal connection with Kafka."

New Generation Thinkers 2022

The South African Bloomsberries

Race relations aren't always thought of as being linked with the experimental writing and art promoted by the Bloomsbury set in 1920s Britain but New Generation Thinker Jade Munslow Ong, from the University of Salford, argues that without a group of South African authors who came to Britain we might not have Virginia Woolf's Orlando. But Roy Campbell, William Plomer and Laurens Van der Post weren't the only writers from that country with a Bloomsbury connection. A founder of the Native National Congress - later the ANC - was also hard at work on a novel which depicted an interracial friendship.

Producer: Ruth Thomson

New Generation Thinkers is a scheme run by BBC Radio 3 and the Arts and Humanities Research Council to select ten academics each year to turn their research into essays, features and discussions. You can find a collection featuring their insights on the Free Thinking programme page, available on BBC Sounds and to download as the Arts and Ideas podcast. You can hear more from Jade in discussions called Modernism around the World and South African writing.

Hildegard of Bingen and Isabella Leonarda

The Muse of Novara

Leonarda's talent flourishes within the confines of her convent. With Donald Macleod.

As Christians around the world prepare for Easter, Donald Macleod explores the life and music of two nuns who were also composers. Though Hildegard of Bingen and Isabella Leonarda lived five centuries apart, their stories and music are connected by their shared faith and their shared vocations. Both lived cloistered lives, shut away in convents and cut off from the everyday concerns of the societies in which they lived. Yet, they also enjoyed a profoundly rich and human connection with the world and with their God, revealed in the music and poetry they created and sent into the world.

Today, Donald Macleod shifts his focus to Isabella Leonarda, with singer and Leonarda champion, Candace Smith. They discuss how Leonarda's destiny was chosen for her, by her eminent Italian family, who committed their daughter to a life of contemplation and isolation while still a teenager. And we see how music thrived alongside the strict observances within the convent in Novara.

BBC NOW perform Maconchy, Britten and Elgar

The BBC National Orchestra of Wales welcomes back its conductor laureate, Tadaaki Otaka, to conduct a resplendent programme of British music. The concert opens with Elizabeth Maconchy's Nocturne, a work which depicts a dream-like night scene full of surprise, romance, menace, and beauty. Violinist Simone Lamsma then joins the Orchestra for Britten's Violin Concerto, a work written in the dark days before the outbreak of the Second World War, which Britten filled with emotion and intensity. That intensity continues when the evening culminates in Elgar's Second Symphony, a work of staggering achievement that the composer filled with his soul. It is full of vibrant colour, beguiling tonality, and a palpable sense of struggle toward the serene ending.

Recorded 25th of March in St. David's Hall, Cardiff. Presented by Verity Sharp.

New Generation Thinkers 2022

Charles Babbage and broadcasting the sea

The noisy Victorian world annoyed the mathematician, philosopher and inventor Charles Babbage, who came up with the idea of a programmable computer. He wrote letters complaining about it and a pamphlet which explored ideas about whether the sea could record its own sound, had a memory and could broadcast sound. New Generation Thinker Joan Passey, from the University of Bristol, sets these ideas alongside the work done by engineers cabling the sea-bed to allow communication via telegraph and Rudyard Kipling's images of these "sea monsters."

Producer: Torquil MacLeod

New Generation Thinkers is a scheme run by the Arts and Humanities Research Council in partnership with BBC Radio 3. Ten early career academics are chosen each year to share their research on radio. You can find a collection of discussions, features and essays on the Free Thinking programme page.

Joan Passey can be heard in Free Thinking episodes discussing Cornwall and Coastal Gothic, Oceans and the Sea at the Hay Festival 2022, Vampires and the Penny Dreadful.

Hildegard of Bingen and Isabella Leonarda

New rules

Hildegard becomes a leader and strikes out on her own. With Donald Macleod.

As Christians around the world prepare for Easter, Donald Macleod explores the life and music of two nuns who were also composers. Though Hildegard of Bingen and Isabella Leonarda lived five centuries apart, their stories and music are connected by their shared faith and their shared vocations. Both lived cloistered lives, shut away in convents and cut off from the everyday concerns of the societies in which they lived. Yet, they also enjoyed a profoundly rich and human connection with the world and with their God, revealed in the music and poetry they created and sent into the world.

Today, Donald Macleod returns to the story of Hildegard of Bingen with Hildegard's biographer, Fiona Maddocks. We see Hildegard begin to use her new-found renown to push against some of the strictest rules of her order, eventually resolving to set up her own community of nuns and follow her religious vocation as she sees fit.

Hildegard of Bingen and Isabella Leonarda

Beyond the Cloister

Donald Macleod examines how Leonarda's music gained a wider audience, beyond the walls of her convent.

As Christians around the world prepare for Easter, Donald Macleod explores the life and music of two nuns who were also composers. Though Hildegard of Bingen and Isabella Leonarda lived five centuries apart, their stories and music are connected by their shared faith and their shared vocations. Both lived cloistered lives, shut away in convents and cut off from the everyday concerns of the societies in which they lived. Yet, they also enjoyed a profoundly rich and human connection with the world and with their God, revealed in the music and poetry they created and sent into the world.

Today, Donald Macleod is joined by early music expert, Candace Smith. They investigate how Leonarda's music reached beyond the walls of her convent, where she remained 'enclosed' for the whole of her life, to play a significant role in the cultural life of her home city, Novara.

Nelson Mass

Baroque specialist Christian Curnyn joins the BBC National Orchestra of Wales to conduct three works that all take a degree of inspiration from battles. We begin with arguably the first ever battle, the chaos that reined before the creation of the world, as depicted by pioneering French composer, Jean-Féry Rebel. His Chaos became the opening movement to his work Les Éléments, which goes on to portray the creation of the universe from out of his pandemonic dissonance.

Purcell's King Arthur follows, a work that depicts the battles between the Britons, led by King Arthur, and the invading Saxons, rather than using Arthurian legend. Tonight we'll hear selections chosen from that stage work by our conductor, Christian Curnyn.

The concert concludes with Haydn's 11th mass that he later subtitled a Mass for troubled times, but quickly became known publicly as the Nelson Mass, in relation to the military leader. It was written during the Napoleonic wars, prior to Nelson's victory, and possibly gained its popular title after Haydn performed the mass in the presence of Nelson, some 5 years before the battle of Trafalgar, and Nelson was greatly moved by the piece.

Presented live from BBC Hoddinott Hall in Cardiff by Nicola Heywood Thomas.

New Generation Thinkers 2022

Fugitive slaves, Victorian justice

The trial of sisters begging on the streets of South London led to donations sent in by Victorian newspaper readers and an investigation by the Mendicity Society. New Generation Thinker Oskar Jensen, from Newcastle University, unearthed this story of the Avery girls in the archives and his essay explores the way attitudes to former slaves and to the reform of criminals affected the sisters' sentencing.

Producer: Ruth Watts

Ten New Generation Thinkers are selected each year to share their research on radio as part of the scheme run by BBC Radio 3 and the Arts and Humanities Research Council. You can find a collection of discussions, essays and features from academics who have been part of the scheme over the past ten years on the Free Thinking programme website.

Soweto Kinch's Listening Chair

British jazz musician, MC and composer Soweto Kinch is one of the leading artists in the UK's jazz and hip-hop scenes. Hailing from Birmingham, home to his legendary jam session, The Live Box, the saxophonist and rapper has enjoyed a prolific two decades in which he's performed worldwide, written orchestral scores and founded a music and arts festival. His recorded output has fused ragtime, West Indian folk, hip-hop and jazz, often in service to conscious themes, as in 2019's The Black Peril, which explored the race riots that occurred in Britain, America and Europe in 1919. With his Listening Chair selection, he offers up a dynamic, hypnotic track that transports him to a different place and time.

Elsewhere in the show, we hear new releases from ambient giant Tim Hecker, Texan songwriter Jana Horn and composer and producer Rachika Nayar.

Hildegard of Bingen and Isabella Leonarda

Transcendent voices

Hildegard's secretaries prepare to preserve the story of her life. With Donald Macleod.

As Christians around the world prepare for Easter, Donald Macleod explores the life and music of two nuns who were also composers. Though Hildegard of Bingen and Isabella Leonarda lived five centuries apart, their stories and music are connected by their shared faith and their shared vocations. Both lived cloistered lives, shut away in convents and cut off from the everyday concerns of the societies in which they lived. Yet, they also enjoyed a profoundly rich and human connection with the world and with their God, revealed in the music and poetry they created and sent into the world.

In the final programme Donald Macleod recounts the final chapter in Hildegard's story. Buds burst, time floats

It's out with the old and in with the new, as Verity Sharp welcomes in the new season with a selection of adventurous and disruptive music. The iridescent melodies of Fennesz's new album Senzatempo, the results of a collaboration with Italian duo Ozmotik that began during the pandemic, help lighten the mind after the burdens of a long winter; and experiments on prepared turntables from the Chicago-based Pure Techno collective usher in the bursting energy of spring.

In anticipation of the forthcoming record Since Time Is Gravity, Joshua Abrams' Natural Information Society explores an expansive form of minimalism, based around repeated and overlaid rhythmic patterns and ostinatos. At its core, the sound of the guimbri, the three-stringed North African lute played by Abrams, with its healing and hypnotic powers.

Elsewhere in the show, a new track from Scottish smallpipe virtuoso Brìghde Chaimbeul, a previously unreleased dreamy piano piece by composer Emahoy Tsege Mariam Gebru and soundscapes from the remote Finnish island of Örö courtesy of British artist Rob St. John.
