10.30am Building a Library: Jeremy Sams on Poulenc's Piano Concerto in C-sharp minor

The tuneful, energetic Piano Concerto in C sharp minor is the last of Poulenc's five concertos. It was commissioned in 1949 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to restore relations between Poulenc's native Paris and America after World War II. After the Boston premiere the composer attributed the lack of enthusiasm to the idea that the audience had listened to too much Sibelius. He was clearly experiencing a culture clash because he also wrote: "I lead an austere existence in this very Puritan town." But it is classic Poulenc, with quirky tunes including a cheeky quote from "Way down upon the Swanee River" in the finale.

SAT 11:45 Music Matters (m001n26z) Classical Manchester

As the Royal Northern College of Music celebrates its 50th anniversary, Tom Service talks to current students at the college and former alumni - including the pianist Alexandra Dariescu and conductor Alpesh Chauhan. He meets the RNCM's Principal, Linda Merrick, as well as the college's archivist, Geoff Thomason, to learn more about the college's past, the role it currently plays in the city's musical life, and its aspirations for the future.

Formed of present and former students of the college, Tom catches-up with three members of an all-female genre-defying string quartet, Vulva Voce, to hear how their approach to repertoire and performance is winning over audiences.

With Manchester's leading classical ensembles descending on Bridgewater Hall for a weekend-long festival celebrating the city's rich musical heritage, Tom Service meets the Director of the BBC Philharmonic, Beth Wells; Chief Executive of the Hallé Orchestra, David Butcher; Creative Director of the Manchester Camerata, Samantha McShane; and Artistic Director & Chief Executive of the Manchester Collective, Adam Szabo.

And, Music Matters hears from the composer John Luther Adams, whose new work 'Prophecies of Stone' is set to premiere next month at the Manchester International Festival. We chat too to the biennial festival's Head of Music, Jane Beese, about the ambitions for Manchester's new cultural venue - Aviva Studios.

SAT 13:00 Inside Music (m001n273)

Composer Joby Talbot with thrilling and beautiful sounds

Joby Talbot is in demand all over the world as a composer for ballet, film and the concert platform. He takes two hours off from his hectic schedule to guide us through a playlist of musical delights, giving insights on instruments like the glass gamelan and the challenges of playing the oboe, how to get an accordion to sigh, and why Stravinsky's Rite of Spring works so well as a four-hand piano piece.

From Purcell to Pärt, klezmer to the King's Singers, join Joby on a stimulating tour of music old and new.

A series in which each week a musician explores a selection of music - from the inside.

Meridian Brothers in concert

Lopa Kothari presents a recording of Colombia's Meridian Brothers, live at Kings Place in London as part of the Songlines Encounters festival.

Hailing from Bogota the Meridian Brother's music is an uncategorizable mix of Latin rhythms and genres, taking in Cumbia, Salsa and Currulao and spinning it all through a psychedelic prism. Lopa heads backstage and talks to Eblis Álvarez, the man behind the music, to find out more about the roots of the Meridian Brother's unique sound.

SAT 17:00 J to Z (m001fwy0)

Gretchen Parlato's inspirations

Kevin Le Gendre hears from internationally renowned jazz vocalist Gretchen Parlato. Over the past decade, Gretchen has worked with the likes of Wayne Shorter, Herbie Hancock, Kenny Barron, Esperanza Spalding, Terence Blanchard, and is also a formidable bandleader in her own right. Here she shares some of the music that has inspired her, drawing from contemporary singers and vocal legends, including the great Nancy Wilson.

Also in the programme, live music from saxophonist and bandleader Jasmine Myra. Recorded at J to Z's spiritual jazz showcase at the London Jazz Festival, Jasmine's set features compositions from her beautiful debut album Horizons and some brand new music.

SAT 18:30 Opera on 3 (m001n27b)
Berg's Wozzeck

From the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, Antonio Pappano conducts a new production of Berg's disturbing masterpiece in which a victimised and downtrodden soldier is driven to madness and murder. Christian Gerhaher stars as the tortured anti-hero Wozzeck and Anja Kampe his doomed wife Marie. Martin Handley presents, and is joined in the box by writer and broadcaster Gillian Moore to discuss Berg's score, and whether it still has the power to shock now like it did at its premiere in 1925.

SAT 22:00 New Music Show (m001n27d)
Inspirations with violinist and composer Rakhi Singh

Kate Molleson explores some of the latest sounds in New Music including Rufus Isabel Elliot's the stones in the river by our camp in the forest, the space on the ground where we sit. After its premiere at Tectonics in May, one critic said that this was a work 'whose seasick sliding sounds and unwaveringly slow pace spoke deeply of trauma and hope.' Also in the programme, Kalie Malone's 'Does Spring Hide its Joy,' for sine wave oscillators which, she says, "is an attempt to digest the countless life transitions and hold time together. And beginning this week, a new series in which artists share some of their musical inspirations." This week, it's Manchester-based violinist, composer and music director Rakhi Singh.

Imaginary zones

Corey Mwamba shares improvised music and free jazz that opens up the rooms of our imaginations, from impromptu sessions recorded in dilapidated buildings to reverberating, drone textures.

Guitarist Chris Sharkey is joined by Matthew Bourne (synthesiser) and Luke Reddin-Williams (drums) for a rock-inspired sonic adventure captured guerrilla-style in abandoned spaces and secret locations across the North of England.

On the other side of the Atlantic Ocean, Italian-born drummer and percussionist Carlo Costa improvises with contrabass clarinetist John McCowen - the result is a hypnotising and ever-changing soundscape that invites us to lose track of time.

Plus a track from the new album Trim from the quartet comprising Dominic Lash (electric guitar), Rachel Musson (tenor saxophone), Phil Durrant (modular synth) and Steve Noble (drums, cymbals and percussion).

SUN 12:00 Private Passions (m001n25r)

Raynor Winn

Raynor Winn is a writer whose first book, The Salt Path, followed the remarkable 630-mile journey she and her husband Moth made around the South West Coastal Path.

It was a story of endurance as they had lost their home, had little money and Moth had been diagnosed with a terminal illness. But they found solace in nature and kept putting one foot in front of the other, living for the now: a message that obviously chimed with readers, as the book became a bestseller and is currently being made into a film.

Raynor has since written a sequel called The Wild Silence, about readjusting to four walls and normal life after that seminal walk, and Landlines where she and Moth again embark on a thousand-mile journey from Scotland back to the familiar shores of the South West Coast Path.

Raynor's musical choices include works by Britten, Schubert and Vaughan Williams.

SUN 14:00 The Early Music Show (m001mtt7)

Alessandro Stradella: Music, mayhem and murder

Alessandro Stradella's star burned brightly but briefly. His music was glorious; his lifestyle was dissolute: embezzlement, sexual imprudence and political intrigue - Stradella fell foul of his misdemeanours in 1682 when he was murdered by a hitman at the age of just 38.

Hannah French is joined in the studio by the University of Birmingham's Professor Andrew Kirkman, who conducted a recent performance of Stradella's opera "La forza dell'amor paterno" with Barber Opera. Together they'll explore Stradella's colourful life and wonderful music, including extracts from the Birmingham performance, alongside recordings of Stradella's other operas, oratorios and orchestral works.

Programme also includes your weekly bulletin of Early Music News, with Mark Seow.

Remembering bebop pioneer Elmo Hope

Alyn Shipton presents jazz records of all styles as requested by you, with a special focus on American pianist and composer Elmo Hope, a sometimes overlooked pioneer of bebop whose distinctive style can be heard on recordings by Sonny Rollins and Harold Land as well as many sessions under his own name. Get in touch: jrr@bbc.co.uk or use #jazzrecordrequests on social.

SUN 17:00 The Listening Service (m001n25z)

All American Ives?

What links baseball, life insurance and American art music? Charles Ives does! Unknown during his lifetime in Connecticut and New York the experimental composer and church organist created his unique style entirely on his own terms away from the contemporary music world, whilst running his insurance company Ives & Myrick. One day in his early fifties in 1927 he came downstairs with tears in his eyes and told his wife he couldn't compose anymore - nothing sounded right. He spent the rest of his life revising and promoting his pieces. He was eventually admired and championed by Bernard Herrmann, Leonard Bernstein and Arnold Schoenberg.

His music incorporates everything from hymn tunes to brass band marches but foreshadowed many ideas and innovations that were later used widely in 20th-century classical music. As the conductor Leonard Slatkin puts it, 'knowing one Ives piece may not prepare you for another!'

Tom Service looks beyond the quirks of Ives's unusual life as a composer and explores how his incredible music actually works.

SUN 18:45 Sunday Feature (m001n267)

Nu Yorica

Recorded on location in lower Manhattan, the Bronx and Spanish Harlem ('El Barrio'), jazz writer and broadcaster Kevin Le Gendre explores the history, art and politics of the Latin music scene in New York City from the 1950s to the present - the city that gave birth to salsa.

New York's Latino community has always been a source of artistic richness, with messages of political identity and social struggle never far from the sheer excitement of the music. To be Nu Yorican was to be born in New York City from Puerto Rican descent, drawing on the sounds and rhythms of Cuba and blending them with the sounds of jazz and soul into a unique set of musical forms and styles that took the world by storm.

The hugely vibrant music scene of 'El Barrio', which produced a wealth of amazing artists in the 1950s and '60s from Tito Puente and Ray Barreto to Eddie Palmieri and Joe Bataan, gave birth to a uniquely Nu Yorican music that became a worldwide sensation - salsa. Drawing on its limitless musical energy, the Fania Records label became the Motown of US Latin music, reaching huge listening audiences and drawing on an incredible roster of artists. On the streets of Harlem and the Bronx, in the jazz clubs and dance-halls, Latino and African American musicians played together and mixed styles - the fusion of Latin music with jazz and soul - to create thrilling hybrids such as Afro-Cuban, Latin-Jazz and Latin Soul as well as salsa itself.

The Latino community in New York drew from the African American experience politically as well as musically. Both groups were subject to racism, poor housing, high unemployment and over-policing. Both groups organised coordinated breakfast and welfare programmes, health centres, libraries and places of cultural learning. Political consciousness, through the medium of poetry and spoken word, offered a route out of the gang culture, which was rife in Spanish Harlem (as we hear from Joe Bataan, Felipe Luciano and others). This feature also tells the story of San Juan Hill, once home to a huge Latino community, demolished by Robert Moses to make way for the Lincoln Centre. The 1961 movie adaptation of West Side Story was filmed in the rubble.

Hearing from musicians living and playing in New York, some going back to the origins of salsa, this deeply musical feature showcases the energy and style of Nu Yorican music in all its forms and musical hybrids as Kevin explores the role of music in building a narrative of community.

Contributors include the founder of Latin soul Joe Bataan, former member of the Last Poets Felipe Luciano, spoken word artist and director of The Nu Yorican Poets Café Caridad de la Luz (aka 'La Bruja'), Fania Records producer and arranger Harvey Averne, historian Johanna Fernandez, veteran percussionist and Tito Puente's conga player Chembo Corniel, Latin House and Nu Yorican Soul producer 'Little' Louie Vega and British curator of Fania Records archive Dean Rudland, composer and salsa bandleader Bobby Sanabria and Latin-soul aficionado Lenny Thomas.

Toby Jones stars in Pulitzer nominee Will Eno's play. Davey Maskelyne is a key witness to a crime but suffers from memory loss. Can an experimental treatment restore his past?

When Davey Maskelyne embarks upon sonic therapy to restore his memory so he can help solve a crime the treatment leads to a reckoning with a past he never believed he could recover. The play wittily tangles with questions of loss and memory. What is a person without a past? Might we be better living in the moment? And how does sound give us a more profound experience of that past?

A binaural soundtrack gives the audience a chance to experience the sound world for themselves.

Will Eno is one of America's most exciting playwrights. Eno first burst on to the scene in Britain with his play Thom Pain (based on nothing) which was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize in Drama.

In 2014 his play The Realistic Joneses appeared on Broadway where it received a Drama Desk Special Award and was named Best Play on Broadway by USA Today and Best American Play of 2014 by The Guardian. His play The Open House was presented Off-Broadway at the Signature Theatre in 2014 and won the Obie Award for Playwriting as well as other awards, and was on both TIME Magazine and Time Out New York's Top Ten Plays of 2014.

Will wrote this play specifically for Toby Jones :

Toby Jones is one of our country's best character actors. He made his breakthrough as Truman Capote in the film 'Infamous' and has gone on to appear in numerous other films including Frost/Nixon, Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy and The Hunger Games.

He was nominated for a Golden Globe as Best Actor in a Television film for his roles as Alfred Hitchcock in The Girl and he won a BAFTA for his role in The Detectivists.

Transmitter

Across Britain, 352 BBC transmitters stand, mostly on the tops of hills broadcasting sound, music and voices invisibly across the country. In this slow radio episode, Matthew Herbert and a group of recording engineers visited some of these transmitters in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and England to listen to what the transmitters were hearing at exactly 11.30 at night - the time of this broadcast. Starting at the transmitter atop Crystal Palace and then moving through the country to finish in snowy Aberdeen, hear how the sonic landscape changes the further north travelled.

Transmitter is a production from Munck Studios with Matthew Herbert for BBC Radio 3, recorded by Pete Stollery, Hugh Jones, Dan Pollard, Ella Kay, Robbie McCammon, Pieter Dewulf and Cameron Naylor.

MON 12:00 Composer of the Week (m001n28m)

George Gershwin (1898-1937)

Melting Pot

Donald Macleod explores the early life of George Gershwin, the composer of the American 'melting pot'.

Gershwin started working as a musician and songwriter in his teenage years and became one of the defining voices of a new America in the swinging 20s and the glory days of Hollywood in the 1930s.

This was a period when American writers, artists, advertisers, architects and film-makers were inviting audiences to see, hear and think about the world in ways that they never had before – in ways that made sense of, or at least gave them a way of looking at, the modern world.

Gershwin was one of these trailblazing modernists in part because of his effort to make music commensurate with the idea of American as a 'melting pot' – and his bridging the outmoded gulf between high and low culture.

MON 22:45 The Essay (m001n297)

Controversies: American Writing of the 1960s

William Styron

The 1960s are celebrated for the paradigm shift in American society. This shift was reflected in art and culture as well as politics. But these great changes were not accomplished without controversy. Even in the most slow-flowing art form, literature, great controversies burst out that are now forgotten, but they anticipate what is going on with today's cancel culture. They occurred without the multiplier effect of social media but dominated not just book pages but the society at large.

Michael Goldfarb looks at five authors and their books on the receiving end of this cancel culture in liberal America of the 1960s. Each author and the work being discussed was the subject of a controversy that altered their lives and deeply affected their careers.

In this essay, he focuses on William Styron and his book 'The Confessions of Nat Turner' and asks can a white man write about a black revolutionary hero? Is this taking cultural appropriation too far? Styron was a southerner writing about an important event in his local history. The story was part of his culture, as well. But as a white man does he have the right to imagine the thoughts of an enslaved black man?

George Gershwin (1898-1937)

He Rhapsodises Blues

Donald Macleod explores the years after George Gershwin's huge success with Rhapsody in Blue.

The cover of Time Magazine for the 20th of July 1925 consists of a photograph of George Gershwin. It's a head and shoulders shot of the suave young composer, a few weeks short of his 27th birthday. It's a testament to Gershwin's status and popularity: the first American-born musician ever to be accorded that honour. The caption beneath Gershwin's photo on the cover of Time is: "He Rhapsodises Blues". Today, Donald takes us through the years after his huge success with Rhapsody in Blue.

TUE 22:45 The Essay (m001n2cs)
Controversies: American Writing of the 1960s

Amiri Baraka

Michael Goldfarb looks at five authors and their books on the receiving end of cancel culture in liberal America of the 1960s. Each author and the work being discussed was the subject of a controversy that altered their lives and deeply affected their careers.

This essay looks at Amiri Baraka previously known as LeRoi Jones. He was seen as a genuine heir to James Baldwin. A decade younger than Baldwin, Jones/Baraka arrived in Greenwich Village just as the Beat scene was reaching its zenith. He wrote poetry and award-winning off-Broadway plays that dealt with race with the greater fire and frankness the 60s demanded. Then in one public appearance, he cancelled himself with comments about the Jewish young men Andrew Goodman and Michael Schwerner, who were murdered with James Chaney in Mississippi. The story of a career ruined and a notorious evening that split the liberal coalition in New York, a fracture that continues to this day.

George Gershwin (1898-1937)

An American in Paris

Donald Macleod explores George Gershwin's orchestral work An American in Paris, inspired by the time he spent in the French capital on a visit in the spring of 1928.

After an earlier visit to Paris, in 1926, Gershwin sent a thank-you note embellished with two musical quotations: one was a short section from Rhapsody in Blue; the other was labelled 'An American Paris'. A couple of years later, when he began to work on what was to be an "orchestral ballet" with that title, he returned to that little fragment and the challenge of evoking the experience of an American visitor in the French capital.

Julian the Apostate

Ibsen referred to Emperor and Galilean as his "major work". The play describes the life of Julian, who ruled the Roman Empire from AD361-363. Julian attempted to abolish the recently established state religion of Christianity and replace it with the worship of the ancient, pagan gods. The play is brimming with action and ideas, but is rarely performed. Rana Mitter discusses Ibsen's play and the history and religious ideas behind it with theatre critic and writer, Mark Lawson; historian and author of Pax, Tom Holland; Nicholas Baker-Brian, a theologian; and, Catherine Nixey, a journalist at the Economist and author of The Darkening Age: The Christian Destruction of the Classical World.

Producer: Ruth Watts

Controversies: American Writing of the 1960s

Norman Mailer

Michael Goldfarb looks at five authors and their books on the receiving end of cancel culture in liberal America of the 1960s. Each author and the work being discussed was the subject of a controversy that altered their lives and deeply affected their careers.

In this essay, he focuses on Norman Mailer. His reputation as a novelist had gone down the toilet before he reinvented himself with the non-fiction novel. But there was a cost. Writers should be read and not heard was the ethos of the profession. But mass media provided authors with many different platforms to reach the public. Mailer was on all of them, courting controversy - too successfully. Mailer was a monstrous misogynist before Harvey Weinstein and #metoo. For a while his talent gave him a pass, and then it didn't.

George Gershwin (1898-1937)

Gershwin in Hollywood

Donald Macleod tells the story of George Gershwin's first experience of working in Hollywood.

In the spring of 1930, it was announced that Fox Studios had signed George Gershwin for a large sum of money for to provide the music for a film called Delicious.

Sound in films was still relatively new and Gershwin was sceptical. At first he enjoyed the Californian sunshine, but he quickly tired of the endless "picture talk" and all the distraction while trying to work in his bungalow at Fox's Movietone City. He gave it up and worked from his home in Beverly Hills, relaxing by swimming, hiking and playing tennis and golf.

It was a lucrative exercise for Gershwin, but not a good time to experience Hollywood. But he did use his time fruitfully. As he told a friend: "nearly everybody comes back from California with a western tan and a pocketful of motion picture money. I decided to come back with both these things and a serious composition."

Dvorak's Cello Concerto

Penny Gore introduces recordings from around Europe and from the BBC's performing groups

Today Penny has a recording of Argentine cellist Sol Gabetta playing Dvorak's Cello concerto, written while the composer was living in New York, and considered one of the all-time great cello concertos. Sol is joined by one of Europe's great orchestras: The Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra, with conductor Andris Nelsons. Also on the programme, an all-star line-up plays Robert Schumann's Concertstuck for 4 horns with the BBC Philharmonic, and the Orchestre de Paris, with Klaus Mäkelä, performs the music of the late Finnish composer Kaija Saariaho. And there's a rare chance to hear music by the Dutch composer Leo Smit, who was killed at the Sobibor concentration camp in World War 2.

Including:

Robert Schumann: Concertstuck for 4 horns in F major, Op 86
Martin Owen, Chris Parks, Alec Frank-Gemmill, Sarah Willis,

THU 22:00 Free Thinking (m001n284)

Dystopian thinking

Dystopias are a longstanding staple of film and literature, particularly science fiction, but what can we learn from them? Do they simply entrench despair or act as a prompt to improve the world? And what do The Two Ronnies have to do with all this? As a stage adaptation of Kay Dick's 1977 novel 'They: A Sequence of Unease' opens at the Manchester International Festival - a work that imagines a Britain that has been purged of culture - Matthew Sweet is joined by writer Una McCormack and New Generation Thinkers Sarah Dillon and SJ Beard to trace the history of dystopias and what they tell us about the fears and preoccupations of successive generations.

Producer: Torquil MacLeod

Maxine Peake, Sarah Frankcom and Imogen Knight's adaptation of 'They: A Sequence of Unease' by Kay Dick is at John Rylands Library, Manchester 5th-9th July 2023.

THU 22:45 The Essay (m001n286)

Controversies: American Writing of the 1960s

Philip Roth

Michael Goldfarb looks at five authors and their books on the receiving end of cancel culture in liberal America of the 1960s. Each author and the work being discussed was the subject of a controversy that altered their lives and deeply affected their careers.

In this essay, he focuses on Philip Roth. Roth became permanently alienated from American Jews and even his own mother asked him if he was anti-Semitic. In light of his continuous production and the miraculous late flowering of his art, from The Counterlife to The Plot Against America, it's easy to forget that Portnoy's Complaint, despite its sales, nearly destroyed his career within his own community. It also coloured how he was seen until his death: as a misogynist who, depending on one's view, had to be forgiven because of his talent, or could not be forgiven, because of his talent. The irony is that while many Jews at the time would like to have had Portnoy's Complaint pulled from bookshops and libraries and pulped, his authorised biography, published in 2021, actually was pulled from sale and pulped because the author, Blake Bailey, was accused of sexual assault.

Sonic transcendence and horse bones

Elizabeth Alker shares new sounds from the ambient, experimental and orchestral music realms, including an innovative new release called The Horse, from British electronic musician Matthew Herbert, in collaboration with the London Contemporary Orchestra. The album uses instruments constructed using the skeleton of a horse - flutes made from thigh bones and bows of ribs and hair.

Ahead of British producer Jon Hopkins' debut at the BBC Proms, Elizabeth selects a track from the ten-year anniversary and re-master of his album Immunity, a transcendent electronic journey that seamlessly blends intricate rhythms, ethereal melodies and dreamy orchestral swells.

Elsewhere on the show, we hear new music by multidisciplinary artist Jack Warne aka GAUNT, with visceral and rich textures that capture the deeply personal narrative and experience of Jack's life growing up with a hereditary eye disease.

George Gershwin (1898-1937)

The First Great American Opera

Donald Macleod explores the origins and difficult evolution of George Gershwin's long-awaited opera Porgy and Bess.

In 1926 friends gave George Gershwin a copy of a novel called Porgy by DuBose Heyward. It was set among the labourers and stevedores of Charleston, South Carolina. Gershwin sat up all night reading Porgy and in the morning wrote to Heyward to suggest they develop it into an opera together.

It would be almost ten years before that work came to the stage. But when it did, in the shape of Porgy and Bess - the story of the inhabitants of Catfish Row and the love affair between the beggar, Porgy, and a young prostitute, Bess - it became Gershwin's final great work, lauded by many as the First Great American Opera.

Joy in the blood of the stars

Presented by Andrew McGregor

Sir Simon Rattle ends his final Barbican concert as LSO Music Director with Messiaen's Turangalîla-Symphonie, joined by two of his oldest musical collaborators – pianist Peter Donohoe and Ondes-Martenot player Cynthia Millar.

'Joy in the blood of the stars' – Olivier Messiaen

In Turangalîla, named from two Sanskrit words, turanga and lîla, meaning roughly 'time' and 'love', Messiaen wanted to create a "love song and hymn of joy, time, movement, rhythm, life, and death." This inventive piece is like no other – a work of huge structural scope that strives to convey, from most tender to most wild, its basic theme: love. Betsy Jolas' music is more understated – but it still packs a tremendous emotional punch.

In this essay, he focuses on Joan Williams and her novel Old Powder. After her first novel was shortlisted for the National Book Award, this one failed. Did her former lover William Faulkner have something to do with it? For much of the 60s, literary fiction remained a male preserve, Joan Williams looked like being the person to break that mould, then she disappeared. Why?

FRI 23:00 Late Junction (m001n2ch)

Them Bones

We've a bone to pick with you... Late Junction gets close to the bone in this episode, as Jennifer Lucy Allan unearths musical skeletons from the closet with a selection of tracks made from, related to or inspired by bones. Bones are said to be the second-oldest instrument in the world, after the human voice, and musical instruments made from bone have been discovered in excavations around the world.

There'll be plenty of pieces played with bones, from traditional Māori flutes and Irish rhythm bones (Ireland's oldest percussive folk instrument) to the latest album from British producer Matthew Herbert which centres around sounds extracted from the various parts of a horse skeleton. There's Soviet era sounds of bootlegged records pressed on x-rays, heavy electronics from Bristol label Skull Disco, and Trinidadian calypso about skeletons.

Plus ambient spoken word from American poet Ellen Zweig reflecting on the beauty of collarbones, polyrhythmic spine-tingling electronics from Ugandan producer Authentically Plastic, and recordings from an MRI scanner reworked for the dancefloor. T'marrow's sounds today!
