Ólafur Arnalds: Series 1

Music to bring calm amidst the chaos feat. Benjamin Hardman

Join Icelandic composer and pianist Ólafur Arnalds for an hour-long musical journey into the world of calm.

In the final episode of the series, Ólafur focuses on music that seeks to bring calm amidst the chaos with a selection of songs to help you escape the hectic stresses of this time of year. He shares music from Poppy Ackroyd, Voces8 and Nils Frahm, and reflects on the importance of tuning out the noise and the pressures of the everyday in order to claim back a moment of stillness for yourself.

Plus the photographer Benjamin Hardman transports us to his Safe Haven, the place where he feels the most calm, with recordings from the eruption of Icelandic volcano Meradalir where he spends a lot of his time - demonstrating the ultimate definition of calm amidst chaos.

Schumann's Piano Quartet in E flat in Building a Library with

Marina Frolova-Walker and Andrew McGregor

Andrew McGregor with the best new recordings of classical music.

9.30 am

David Owen Norris is in the studio with a clutch of exciting new releases and shares his 'On Repeat' track – a recording which he is currently listening to again and again.

10.30 am

Building a Library: Marina Frolova-Walker chooses her favourite version of Schumann's Piano Quartet in E flat.

Robert Schumann composed his E-flat Piano Quartet in 1842 for piano, violin, viola and cello. That year is often called Schumann's "Year of Chamber Music" because, in a stretch of nearly unbroken intensity, he produced a string of chamber music masterpieces. The Piano Quartet was the last of the series, written within a few weeks. Like the Piano Quintet, the Piano Quartet was written with his wife Clara in mind. She described the quartet in her diary as a "beautiful work, so youthful and fresh, as if it were his first". The piece shows the extroverted, exuberant side of the composer's creative genius.

11.20 am

Record of the Week: Andrew's top pick.

SAT 11:45 Music Matters (m001qvth)

Ewa Pobłocka

Described as the purveyor of 'some of the greatest... Bach pianism on record', Kate Molleson speaks to the doyenne of the Polish piano world, Ewa Pobłocka, about the release of her second instalment of Bach's Well-Tempered Clavier. She tells Kate about her childhood in Gdańsk, the sonic temples she envisages building during performance, and the influence of the German Baroque master on Chopin.

Marking 60-years of the humble cassette tape, Kate explores the medium's unlikely revival as part of Radio 3's Casseptember season. She talks to the British Phonographic Industry's representative, Gennaro Castaldo, about the 443% increase in sales the cassette tape has seen over the past decade, and hears from the ethnomusicologist, DJ and filmmaker Arlen Dilsizian about the new releases he distributes on both the Hakuna Kulala and Nyege Nyege Tape label. She learns, too, how the blogger Brian Shimkovitz is using the analogue medium's creative potential to build audiences for the artists he works with at his Awesome Tapes from Africa label.

The music critic Jeremy Eichler joins Kate to discuss his new book 'Time's Echo: The Second World War, the Holocaust, and the Music of Remembrance'. He argues against the passive consumption of music 'for relaxation', tells Kate why certain areas of the repertoire require active engagement, and examines music's ability to transcend physical monuments and act instead as one of the most profound forms of memorial.

And as Hollywood writers vote on an agreement the Writers Guild of America have reached with studios to end their five-month strike, we hear from the General Secretary of the Musicians' Union, Naomi Pohl, and Interim Chief Executive of UK Music, Tom Kiehl, about what the deal means for music professionals on this side of the Atlantic.

SAT 13:00 Inside Music (m001qvtk)

Composer Christopher Willis with a playlist that mixes the cosmic and the visceral

Christopher Willis is an Emmy Award-winning composer, arranger, songwriter and pianist who created the soundtracks for The Death of Stalin, Lanya's Poem and The Personal History of David Copperfield, besides writing music for films including Winnie the Pooh, Shrek and the TV series Veep.

Christopher's choices on Inside Music range far and wide. There's William Walton's stunning score for the film Battle of Britain, whose influence he says you can hear all over the Star Wars movies. There's a song by Irving Berlin that Ella Fitzgerald uses as a vehicle for having fun with other tunes. And an earthy, satisfying piece by JS Bach which Christopher says brings out the engineer in him.

Plus Haydn depicts the vast reaches of space.

A series in which each week a musician explores a selection of music - from the inside.

SAT 18:30 Opera on 3 (m001qvtt)

Massenet's Manon

Jules Massenet's Manon from the Gran Teatre del Liceu, Barcelona, starring Amina Edris in the title role and conducted by Marc Minkowski.

The beautiful Manon is supposed to be in a convent, but instead elopes with the Chevalier des Grieux, much to the annoyance of Manon's brother, Lescaut, and De Bretigny who is in love with her. She's soon tempted away by the rich De Bretigny, but leaves her heart with Des Grieux. Massenet's ever-popular opera in a performance from the Gran Teatre del Liceu in Barcelona stars Amina Edris as the doomed Manon, with Pene Pati and Tomeu Biblión as the two men vying for her attention.

Presented by Martin Handley with guest Sarah Hibberd.

Weaving Worlds

Corey Mwamba presents new music weaving imaginative worlds and scenes.

On their fourth album, However, Forward!, the UK duo of Colin Webster and Daniel Thompson continue their collaborative musical adventures. Through a beguiling dance between the playful canter of Thompson's acoustic guitar and the billowing flight of Webster's alto saxophone, the duet craft cinematic scenes with seasonal shifts. Elsewhere, LA-based artists Tomoki Sanders and Kyoko Takenaka launch listeners into the punk-alien world of the far-flung Planet Q, where nebulous clouds of hedonistic sound carry the freak and funk of extraterrestrial whispers. Plus, Fay Victor holds a layered vocal wake for the ongoing pandemic, opening a portal for mourning that imagines collective care and disability justice.

Olivia Harrison

Olivia Harrison is a prizewinning film producer and charity director. Last year she published Came the Lightening, a poignant collection of twenty poems dedicated to her late husband George Harrison of the Beatles. George died in November 2001, at the age of just 58, and Olivia describes her poems as 'thoughts, feelings and words about life and death, but mostly love and our journey to the end'.

Olivia grew up in Los Angeles, and in her early 20s she joined A&M Records. She first met George in 1974 through her work, and went on to help run his Dark Horse record label. They married four years later. Olivia has protected George's musical legacy since his death and continued the work of the Material World Foundation, the charity he founded 50 years ago. She also worked with Martin Scorsese to create an acclaimed, Emmy-winning documentary about George.

Olivia's musical choices include Bach, Mozart and Ravi Shankar, as well as recordings from Mexico and Bulgaria.

SUN 17:00 The Listening Service (m001qvsd)

Strange Tuning

Mozart's famous Sinfonia Concertante for violin and viola makes its effect not least through the unusual tuning of the strings of one of the solo instruments. Mozart asks the viola player to retune the strings half a tone higher than is usual. A process known by musicians a "scordatura". But what is the reason and what is the story behind this method of tuning instruments? Tom Service explains why "scordatura" is so significant and so effective.

Writers and the BBC

From wax discs to colour TV and Marshall McLuhan's "global village", a comedian's audition for the "Deputy Head of Variety" to advice on how to read a poem on radio: to go alongside the celebration of the anniversary of BBC drama marked at this year's Contains Strong Language Festival, today's programme takes its cue from fictional depictions of the corporation and references to specific programmes. Actors Henry Goodman and Grace Cookey-Gam read texts by authors who worked at the BBC including George Orwell who between 1941-1943 was a Talks Producer on what was then the 'Eastern Service' and gives us here his views about poetry on the radio; PH Newby, the first winner of the Booker Prize and a former controller of the Third programme and Penelope Fitzgerald, who worked at the BBC during the Blitz when she was in her twenties. Other extracts from novels include Sue Townsend's Adrian Mole, Gordon Burns's The North of England Home Service, Jonathan Coe's new book Bournville and an imagined Queen's Speech from Alan Bennett. There are archive extracts featuring John Gielgud and an unusual voice for the shipping forecast, poems written by Roger McGough, Wendy Cope and Elizabeth Burns and music commissioned by the BBC, plus pieces by Britten, Debussy, Fauré, Chopin, Bach, Bart Howard, Django Reinhardt and American rock from the 1960s.

SUN 18:45 Between the Ears (m001qvsj)
I Remember Joe Brainard

In 1969 when the artist Joe Brainard stumbled upon a simple writing device, he had sleepless nights of frantic writing, charting out his memory in hundreds of fragments – all beginning with the words I Remember – from coldcream on his mother's face to the experience of falling in love.

In a letter to his friend, the poet Anne Waldman, he reported ecstatically, "I feel very much like God writing the Bible. I mean, I feel like I'm not really writing it, but that it is because of me that it is being written".

Brainard was never driven by nostalgia, but found that the more precisely he described his memories, the deeper the reader could relate. In this process Joe discovered that I Remember was not about him, but about everybody. The book became a classic, used in writing classes across the world and loved by many.

For this montage of memories, radio producer and poet Pejk Malinovski interviewed ten of Brainard's close friends and admirers - poets and novelists like Ron Padgett, Ann Lauterbach, Edmund White and Anne Waldman, whose own lives have been shaped by Brainard's masterpiece.

Here Be Mermaids

Mermaids continue to seduce us. Disney's The Little Mermaid is about to get a live action reboot, Beyoncé dressed up as Oshun in her music video about her husband's infidelity, and Monique Roffey's The Mermaid of Black Conch won Costa Book of the Year.

New Generation Thinker Dr Hetta Howes asks what it is about these creatures that continues to beguile and inspire us and what they mean in the 21st century.

The word mermaid was used in the Renaissance as slang for prostitute, the transgender charity for young people is called Mermaids, and the phrase Hic Sunt Marinae, Here Be Mermaids, has historically been used to chart unknown waters on maps. Why are mermaids an ideal tool for describing things that our society does not understand, or even fears?

Hetta heads to the rough waters of north Cornwall and discovers the impact one mermaid had on the town of Padstow. Shot by a local fisherman, she cursed the town with the Doom Bar, a strip of sand that has wrecked hundreds of ships and continues to prove hazardous to sailors today. Wading out to the Doom Bar, Hetta hears how the Padstow Mermaid was both vulnerable, subject to the whims and desires of a spurned man, and powerful as she has the ability to change the landscape with her revenge.

Author Monique Roffey explores the inspiration power of mermaids who came to her in her dreams in Tobago, and Sacha Coward takes her on a mermaid hunt to discover startling beauty in the Royal Museums Greenwich.

The Brummie Iliad

The Brummie Iliad, by Roderick Smith.

This high-octane verse-dramatisation of Homer's epic poem tells the story of the Trojan War from the death of Patroclus to Achilles' terrible revenge and its tragic aftermath. With a cast of Brummie voices, who perfectly capture the essence of the ancient oral tradition and bring fresh life to the original. The Birmingham accent is not normally associated with the classical world's epic poetry, but its hard-edged, cynical and wistful qualities turn out to be a perfect vehicle for a story of bloodthirsty warriors, long-suffering women and meddling gods.

And with music drawn from Birmingham's own heavy metal rock gods, Black Sabbath and Judas Priest.

A Journey Through Ramallah

YA Z AN, a Palestinian Berlin-based artist, travels around his hometown of Ramallah, located in the heart of the West Bank. During his journey, YA Z AN encounters sounds that comfort and remind him of home. He uses binaural technology to collect audio pieces from the verdant Palestinian landscape and sculpts them with sounds from everyday life to create a complete surround sound experience.

Setting off with an 'oud player singing folklore music during a post-wedding ceremony and followed by a walk to home where family is gathered at a dinner table chit-chatting about food and how it is prepared, the recent events that resulted in the death of martyrs in Palestine and the earthquake that occurred in Syria/Turkey. Progressing through the day, Yazan goes down to the city centre farmers market (Al-hisbeh) where a number of street vendors are shouting out the prices of their products.

Upon joining friends to hang out, the journey travels further to a jam session when surprisingly the rhythm of the community turns into a small choir.

The journey ends with Sufi singer Shadi Al-ahmad intoning his voice in his historical Palestinian home with a cross vault ceiling that accents his baritone.

MON 12:00 Composer of the Week (m001qvv6)

José Maurício Nunes Garcia (1767-1830)

The Father of Brazilian Classical Music

Kate Molleson delves into José Garcia's early beginnings as the grandson of slaves.

Composer of the Week shines the spotlight on the Afro-Brazilian composer José Maurício Nunes Garcia. Hailed by some as the Father of Brazilian Classical Music, and compared by others to Mozart and Haydn, this series delves into the life and music of this once hugely prolific and popular composer. Born in Rio de Janeiro, both his parents were children of slaves. Thanks to his exceptional musical talents, Garcia was able to move from his poverty-stricken beginnings to the very top of his society. He became master of music at the cathedral. Later, when the Portuguese Court established themselves in the city, Garcia was appointed master of music at the Chapel Royal and court composer. Kate Molleson is joined by Professor Marcelo Hazan from the University of South Carolina and Professor Kirsten Schultz from Seton Hall University who help her explore Garcia's incredible life story and music.

A hugely influential teacher of music from early on, Garcia established his own free music school and was invited into the homes of the elite to teach their daughters. His trajectory wasn't always plain sailing however and he frequently encountered racism. When it came to Garcia entering the Priesthood in the early 1790s, he had to undergo a number of tests to prove his worth, including providing impeccable references to offset the official concerns about his family background. Garcia was ordained, and with his musical skills finally recognised by the Church and Portuguese Court, he became the go-to composer for Saints' Days, royal occasions, and other commissions. However, many European musicians who came to Rio de Janeiro were not keen to be conducted by someone of his race. Eventually, Brazil gained independence from the Portuguese Empire and Garcia's royal employers were returned to Portugal, leaving Garcia struggling during turbulent times.

In this first programme, Kate Molleson explores the city where José Garcia was born in 1767. Rio de Janeiro had been appointed the capital of Brazil a few years earlier, and with the development of the country's economy through gold mining, and later agriculture, there was a huge reliance upon the slave trade. Both Garcia's grandmothers were slaves and from very early on he used his skills in music to help support his family. The options for Garcia's future were few, and he saw the Priesthood as a means to a better life. Sacred music would be the main area in which Garcia would compose throughout his life, and he eventually became a Priest in the early 1790s.

Mahler's Ninth Symphony from the Concertgebouw, Amsterdam

Mahler's Ninth Symphony from the Concertgebouw, Amsterdam.

Daniel Harding directed this performance in the Autumn of 2022, as the world emerged from lockdown. Mahler bade 'farewell to all those he loved and to the world. And to his art, his life, his music,' wrote Willem Mengelberg, Mahler's friend and chief conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra from 1895 to 1945. At the same time, the symphony is an ode to the beauty of life. This extremely personal work has always had great significance for the Concertgebouw Orchestra with Bernard Haitink's last Christmas Matinee performance still etched in the minds of many.

Mahler's exploration of the borders between life and death, beauty and pain, inspired the young Dutch composer Rick van Veldhuizen to compose Mais le corps taché d'ombres, a beautiful, short companion piece to Mahler's Ninth, commissioned by the Concertgebouw Orchestra and the Mahler Foundation.

Presented by Fiona Talkington.

Rainsong in Five Senses

India and the Sound of Rain

Nandini Das, Professor of Early Modern Literature and Culture at Oxford, brings us stories and personal experiences of rain and the way it informs and combines with different cultures across the globe. Each of the five essays takes a particular sense and location as focus, beginning with Nandini's native India and the sound of rainfall. She recalls the deafening, thundering rains of the monsoon season in Kolkata, and the language that captured its power. She recalls how the inherited myths and stories of India have always been informed by the uneasy balance of the country's rain and searing heat. And she recounts the musical dramas in which raags are used to call the rains and Bengali nursery rhymes carry its sound, 'brishti porey tupur tapur' (pitter-patter falls the rain).

TUE 12:00 Composer of the Week (m001qvvy)

José Maurício Nunes Garcia (1767-1830)

Preacher and Teacher

Kate Molleson explores Garcia's trajectory to the ultimate role as master of music at the cathedral in Rio de Janeiro.

Composer of the Week shines the spotlight on the Afro-Brazilian composer José Maurício Nunes Garcia. Hailed by some as the Father of Brazilian Classical Music, and compared by others to Mozart and Haydn, this series delves into the life and music of this once hugely prolific and popular composer. Born in Rio de Janeiro, both his parents were children of slaves. Thanks to his exceptional musical talents, Garcia was able to move from his poverty-stricken beginnings to the very top of his society. He became master of music at the cathedral. Later, when the Portuguese Court established themselves in the city, Garcia was appointed master of music at the Chapel Royal and court composer. Kate Molleson is joined by Professor Marcelo Hazan from the University of South Carolina and Professor Kirsten Schultz from Seton Hall University who help her explore Garcia's incredible life story and music.

A hugely influential teacher of music from early on, Garcia established his own free music school and was invited into the homes of the elite to teach their daughters. His trajectory wasn't always plain sailing however and he frequently encountered racism. When it came to Garcia entering the Priesthood in the early 1790s, he had to undergo a number of tests to prove his worth, including providing impeccable references to offset the official concerns about his family background. Garcia was ordained, and with his musical skills finally recognised by the Church and Portuguese Court, he became the go-to composer for Saints' Days, royal occasions, and other commissions. However, many European musicians who came to Rio de Janeiro were not keen to be conducted by someone of his race. Eventually, Brazil gained independence from the Portuguese Empire and Garcia's royal employers were returned to Portugal, leaving Garcia struggling during turbulent times.

José Garcia had to undertake a number of tests in order to enter the priesthood. His standing in Rio de Janeiro was such that he received excellent references from some of the most elite families. A few years later, around 1794, he established a free music school in the city. Soon, all the future musical talent of Rio de Janeiro would be trained in music by Garcia, for free. Garcia did recoup some form of reward in other ways. When the city or the cathedral wished to commission a new work for an event, Garcia was able to undercut his rival composers bidding for the same work, by employing his own students as musicians and pocketing their fees for himself. By the late 1790s the master of music at the cathedral was ill, and Garcia succeeded him in 1798. Garcia now held the top music job in the city.

West Cork Chamber Music Festival 2023 (1/4)

John Toal presents the first in our series of Lunchtime Concerts from this year's West Cork Chamber Music Festival, recorded in Bantry, West Cork.

Today's recital opens with Fauré's Violin Sonata No.1 in A major performed by Irish violinist Mairéad Hickey and pianist Jérémie Moreau. Written early in the composer's career over a couple of years from 1875-1876, the work was dedicated to his friend-the French violinist and composer Paul Viardot. To follow, the French pianist Cédric Tiberghien performs Schumann's- Geister Variations or "Ghost Variations" written in 1854, the final work Schumann wrote before entering the asylum at Enderich. Finally today the Ensemble Diderot perform JS Bach's Harpsichord concerto in D major.

Tchaikovsky: Symphony No.6 'Pathétique'

The BBC Philharmonic and their chief conductor, John Storgards, open their 2023-2024 season with the iconic and arresting Sinfonietta by Janacek. Originally conceived as brass and percussion fanfares for a gymnastics festival, Janacek melds his own blazing orchestral sound-world with the rhythm and melody of his native Moravia to create a work in which he celebrates a new-found optimism in national and individual freedom.

Whilst Janacek's Sinfonietta celebrates the energy of life, the programme ends with music of more personal expression, Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, the 'Pathétique'. Premiered a few days before he died, Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony explores his own relationship with the nature of life and death.

Dame Sarah Connolly joins the orchestra for six of Alma Mahler-Werfel's songs; written with piano accompaniment, they are heard tonight in orchestrations by David and Colin Matthews.

Rainsong in Five Senses

Japan and the Taste of Rain

When the rains of the fifth month, samidare, arrive in Japan it seems they'll never stop. In the second of Nandini Das's curated series of essays on rain and the way it's experienced across the globe, she invites art historian Timon Screech to introduce us to the rains of Japan where he now lives.

The rains that flood country and city alike are also known as the plum rains, plumping up the fruit in time for the later ripening and harvest. He talks about rain depicted in Japanese literature, particularly the Haiku, in which the sound of rain is experienced in terms of taste - the bitterness of the plum rains. And we discover the significance and symbolism of the umbrella in Japanese culture and art, including their place in nightmare imagery.

WED 12:00 Composer of the Week (m001qvxp)

José Maurício Nunes Garcia (1767-1830)

Arrival of the Portuguese Court

Kate Molleson delves into Garcia's personal life when he broke his priestly vows of celibacy.

Composer of the Week shines the spotlight on the Afro-Brazilian composer José Maurício Nunes Garcia. Hailed by some as the Father of Brazilian Classical Music, and compared by others to Mozart and Haydn, this series delves into the life and music of this once hugely prolific and popular composer. Born in Rio de Janeiro, both his parents were children of slaves. Thanks to his exceptional musical talents, Garcia was able to move from his poverty-stricken beginnings to the very top of his society. He became master of music at the cathedral. Later, when the Portuguese Court established themselves in the city, Garcia was appointed Master of Music at the Chapel Royal and court composer. Kate Molleson is joined by Professor Marcelo Hazan from the University of South Carolina and Professor Kirsten Schultz from Seton Hall University who help her explore Garcia's incredible life story and music.

A hugely influential teacher of music from early on, Garcia established his own free music school and was invited into the homes of the elite to teach their daughters. His trajectory wasn't always plain sailing however and he frequently encountered racism. When it came to Garcia entering the Priesthood in the early 1790s, he had to undergo a number of tests to prove his worth, including providing impeccable references to offset the official concerns about his family background. Garcia was ordained, and with his musical skills finally recognised by the Church and Portuguese Court, he became the go-to composer for Saints' Days, royal occasions, and other commissions. However, many European musicians who came to Rio de Janeiro were not keen to be conducted by someone of his race. Eventually, Brazil gained independence from the Portuguese Empire and Garcia's royal employers were returned to Portugal, leaving Garcia struggling during turbulent times.

Today, Kate Molleson explores a pivotal moment: the Portuguese Court arrives in Rio de Janeiro under British naval escort, fleeing Napoleon. The city would now change dramatically, as thousands began to arrive from Europe. The prince regent quickly established a police system, which would take an active role in redefining the city, requisitioning houses for arriving courtiers, expanding and developing the city, and also carrying out a policy of Europeanisation too. Many musicians from Europe started to arrive, and this had an influence upon the music of José Garcia, who had now been appointed master of the music to the royal chapel. This elevation in Garcia's career came at a time of changes in his personal life too. Garcia had begun a relationship with Severiana Rosa de Castro, with whom he'd have six children. A serious risk for Garcia, considering his vows of celibacy as a priest.

Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony

Edward Gardner conducts the London Philharmonic Orchestra in Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony.

Presented by Martin Handley, from the Royal Festival Hall, London.

Beethoven: Overture, Egmont
Bartók: Violin Concerto No. 2

Interval

Tchaikovsky: Symphony No. 4

Christian Tetzlaff, violin

London Philharmonic Orchestra
Edward Gardner, conductor

For Tchaikovsky, the fanfare that opens the Fourth Symphony symbolised "Fate", this being "the fatal power which prevents one from attaining the goal of happiness. There is nothing to be done but to submit to it and lament in vain". As he further explained, the first movement suggests that "all life is an unbroken alternation of hard reality with swiftly passing dreams and visions of happiness".

Beethoven's Egmont Overture tells a tale of oppression and liberation, in which the hero's craving for justice is confronted by a despot's inflexibility. He too accepts the fate that awaits him with courage and honesty.

Between these fate-laden romantic works, Christian Tetzlaff joins the orchestra for Bartók's Second Violin Concerto, evoking the folk music of Transylvania, which the composer heard in the Carpathian Mountains in the early years of the 20th century.

WED 22:00 Free Thinking (m001qvj)

Refuge and National Poetry Day

Loss and belonging are explored in an installation at the Barbican Centre in London from Sierra Leonean poet and artist/filmmaker Julianknxx which hears choirs and musicians from cities across the world voice a single refrain: 'We are what's left of us'. Momtaza Mehri has been Young People's Poet Laureate for London. A poem from her collection Bad Diaspora Poems is picked out in a selection for this year's National Poetry Day on October 5th, which has the theme of refuge. So Matthew Sweet explores with them where we find refuge and hears from the academic Dr Jesús Sanjurjo about refugees from Spain who arrived in Somers Town in Camden in 1823.

Producer: Julian Siddle

Chorus in Rememory of Flight by Julianknxx runs until 11 Feb 2024 at The Curve in the Barbican Centre, London.

He also has a film exploring Sierra Leone in the exhibition A World in Common: Contemporary African Photography on at Tate Modern until Jan 14 2024 and an artwork on show in an exhibition about Sankofa curated by Ekow Eshun on in Accra, Ghana.

On the National Poetry Day website <https://nationalpoetryday.co.uk/> you can find the text and teaching resources relating to the poem by Momtaza Mehri Brief Dialogue Between the Self-declared East African Micronations of Regent Park Estate (Toronto) & Regent's Park Estate (London).

Dr Jesús Sanjurjo is an Early Career Fellow of the Leverhulme and Isaac Newton Trusts at the University of Cambridge.

WED 22:45 The Essay (m000srj3)

Rainsong in Five Senses

Australia and the Smell of Rain

In the third of her curated series of essays about the way rain is experienced across the globe, Nandini Das introduces the Australian poet and environmentalist Mark O'Connor. Mark explores the uniquely Australian experiences of rain, which include the vivid smell of it. The word petrichor was coined by Australian scientists to try and capture the odour of rain on arid lands, but there's more than just petrichor in the air, and there's also great variety in the ways in which different parts of Australia experience rain, from the flash downpours and run-offs in the so-called 'Top End', to the agonising expectation of the farms in the south and the exultant rain chorus of Queensland frogs.

This newcomer began to take over Garcia's duties at the court. This was a difficult period for Garcia, and he had to take out a loan to ensure he could continue to support his growing family, including his mother, his partner, and six children.

Fairy Tale and Folklore

Live from the Royal Concert Hall, Nottingham
 Presented by Tom McKinney

The BBC Philharmonic are joined by conductor Ben Gernon and Jess Gillam for a UK premiere of their newly announced Composer in Association, Anna Clyne; her saxophone concerto, Glasslands; the banshee of Irish folklore making her presence felt in this music written for tonight's soloist. "London Town" is the back-drop for Elgar's Cockaigne Overture, a brilliant portrait of life and all its vigour in the bustling streets of the English capital at the end of the Victorian era. After the interval the orchestra bring Ravel's magical pictures of an imaginary fairy-tale world to life with music from his ballet 'Mother Goose', and Beethoven's powerful Fifth Symphony ends the programme.

THU 22:00 Free Thinking (m001qvy5)

Faith, consciousness and creating meaning in life

I've Been Thinking is the title of a memoir from philosopher and cognitive scientist Daniell Dennett. Philip Goff is an Associate Professor at Durham University who's written Why? The Purpose of the Universe. The Bishop Auckland Project is opening a new museum exploring faith and their curator Amina Wright joins them and podcaster and former director of Theos Liz Oldfield for a discussion about finding meaning. The presenter is Chris Harding.

Producer: Luke Mulhall

Rainsong in Five Senses

Paris and the Look of Rain

Writer and scholar Lauren Elkin describes the very particular grey of a rainy Paris in the time of year that the French revolutionary government called Pluviôse, the month of rain. She talks about the way a particular quality of grey sheen was captured by the French Impressionists, and with it a sense of melancholy. It's a vision that recurs in art and film, from Gustave Caillebotte's 1877 Paris Street, Rainy Day, to the recent Christophe Honoré film, Les Chansons d'Amour. Elkin describes the latter as appearing to have been shot through a very realistic grey-green "Paris in the rain" filter, which gives it a power and mood rooted in its setting.

Hawthorn Trees and Metal Birds

Elizabeth Alker shares sounds inspired by birds and hawthorn trees in a mix of ambient and experimental music selections. Expect gentle bursts of sounds from the Welsh countryside, the echoes of the curlew bird emerging from guitar duo Jim Ghedi and Toby Hay, as well as the sounds of a woodland in Scotland by a second pairing of guitarists in the show: Morgan Szymanski and Tommy Perman.

Elsewhere, the magic of choral music inspired by an enchanting hawthorn tree from American musician and composer Peter Broderick and East Forest, the artist name of the composer Trevor Oswalt; plus underwater aquatic colours and bubbly textures courtesy of musician, composer and lifeguard Roméo Poirier.

FRI 12:00 Composer of the Week (m001qvwN)

José Maurício Nunes Garcia (1767-1830)

Decline into Poverty

Kate Molleson sees Garcia struggle after the Portuguese Court abandons Brazil.

Composer of the Week shines the spotlight on the Afro-Brazilian composer José Maurício Nunes Garcia. Hailed by some as the Father of Brazilian Classical Music, and compared by others to Mozart and Haydn, this series delves into the life and music of this once hugely prolific and popular composer. Born in Rio de Janeiro, both his parents were children of slaves. Thanks to his exceptional musical talents, Garcia was able to move from his poverty-stricken beginnings to the very top of his society. He became master of music at the cathedral. Later, when the Portuguese Court established themselves in the city, Garcia was appointed master of music at the Chapel Royal and court composer. Kate Molleson is joined by Professor Marcelo Hazan from the University of South Carolina and Professor Kirsten Schultz from Seton Hall University who help her explore Garcia's incredible life story and music.

A hugely influential teacher of music from early on, Garcia established his own free music school and was invited into the homes of the elite to teach their daughters. His trajectory wasn't always plain sailing however and he frequently encountered racism. When it came to Garcia entering the Priesthood in the early 1790s, he had to undergo a number of tests to prove his worth, including providing impeccable references to offset the official concerns about his family background. Garcia was ordained, and with his musical skills finally recognised by the Church and Portuguese Court, he became the go-to composer for Saints' Days, royal occasions, and other commissions. However, many European musicians who came to Rio de Janeiro were not keen to be conducted by someone of his race. Eventually, Brazil gained independence from the Portuguese Empire and Garcia's royal employers were returned to Portugal, leaving Garcia struggling during turbulent times.

The last decade in José Garcia's life was difficult. In 1821 King John VI returned to Portugal with much of his court, taking most of the treasury funds with him. Financially, Brazil was in free fall, and the king's son Pedro was forced to remove benefits and stipends. Garcia found his income severely cut, and he petitioned Pedro to reinstall his income, or at least give him a salary for all the free music teaching he undertook. Pedro declined, and Garcia decided to close his music school for good. Pedro declared Brazil's independence in 1822, and with financial and social upheaval in the years to follow, Garcia faded from view in the city where he'd held the top music jobs at both court and cathedral. He died in poverty in 1830.

FRI 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (m001qvwq)

West Cork Chamber Music Festival 2023

John Toal presents the final programme in our series of Lunchtime Concerts from this year's West Cork Chamber Music Festival, recorded in Bantry, West Cork.

In this last recital from the festival, we begin with Beethoven's 24 Variations on 'Venni Amore' with French pianist Cédric Tiberghien. The work is also known as the "Righini Variations" after the composer who wrote the theme on which the work is based - the 18th century Italian composer Vincenzo Righini.

We then welcome back violinist Ariadne Daskalakis and harpsichordist Michael Borgstede for a performance of Vivaldi's Sonata in D minor, and to complete this series from the West Cork Chamber Music Festival, pianist Cédric Tiberghien returns with Schumann's Variations on a Theme by Beethoven.

Oramo conducts Mahler

From the hillsides of Transylvania, shepherds' horns echo and resound. Gustav Mahler contemplates personal tragedy, then fights his way - through waltzes, storms and a heartfelt musical love letter - to life, hope and triumph. And Dora Pejacevic dreams out loud, in a neglected, impassioned masterpiece haunted by the shadows of the Great War.

Central Europe doesn't stop at Vienna: although with Sakari Oramo conducting, Mahler's Fifth Symphony is a truly epic way to launch the new BBCSO season. But he begins with a wilder, stranger vision from a great Hungarian modernist - and joins pianist Alexandra Dariescu to champion the UK premiere of the Phantasie Concertante by Dora Pejacevic, the Croatian composer whose symphony was described as "a genuine find" when Oramo recorded it in 2022.

FRI 22:45 The Essay (m000ss0z)

Rainsong in Five Senses

England and the Touch of Rain

If there's a subject in which England has every right to claim knowledge through experience, it is the subject of rain. Poets, politicians, or labourers, we've lived a literally and metaphorically sheltered life if we haven't felt the chill of rain on our face. In her Rainsong Essay Dr Tess Somervell pulls together the many ways in which rain has been gathered and responded to in her native land, from the bedraggled and almost inevitably soon to be betrothed costume-drama heroine, to the high romance of the romantic poets and the ancient wisdom of an unknown medieval bard. While smell and taste and sound and sight might all play a part in our collective response to rain, we also feel it, not just on our skin but in our bones.

FRI 23:00 Late Junction (m001qvx9)

Dancing ghosts and remixed frogs

Final boarding call for another ear-opening musical journey into the furthest reaches of sound with your captain, Verity Sharp. Tonight's voyage will take us to a haunted sanatorium in the mountains of Switzerland, where Polish pianist and composer Hania Rani spent two months writing songs for the ghosts she imagined there. We'll traverse into the territory of North American frogs, tugboats, insects and more with electronic duo Matmos's latest release, a musique concrète collage constructed entirely from the 'non-musical' recordings released by Smithsonian Folkways Records in the mid-20th century. Plus a trip to Mali and some Musique Mandingue courtesy of Guinean singer and guitarist Leon Keïta, as well as an imaginary world of daydreams created by the Dutch duo Voice Actor.
