SAT 01:00 Ultimate Calm (m001f5sw)
Ólafur Arnalds: Series 1

Calming cinematic soundtracks feat. Isobel Waller-Bridge

Escape with Icelandic composer and pianist Ólafur Arnalds for another hour-long musical journey into calmness.

In this week's episode, Ólafur flicks through his film collection to share some of his favourite scores and soundtracks that totally transport their audiences, painting pictures through sound. There'll be the sounds of deep-sea diving, wanders through the wilderness and even the most peaceful-sounding alien invasion from composers like Jóhann Jóhannsson, Ryuichi Sakamoto and Galya Bisengalieva.

Plus the British composer Isobel Waller-Bridge invites us to join her in her safe haven, the place she feels most calm, listening to the birds and the wind through the trees on Hampstead Heath in London.

SAT 09:00 Record Review (m001s5gg)

Dvořák's 'New World' Symphony in Building a Library with Katy Hamilton and Andrew McGregor

Andrew McGregor with the best new recordings of classical music.

9.30 am

Gillian Moore comes into the studio with her selection of new albums and she shares her On Repeat track, music which she has been listening to again and again.

10.15 am

Katy Hamilton chooses her favourite recording of Antonín Dvořák's Symphony No 9 in E minor, Op 95, 'From the New World'.

With its beguiling blend of spontaneous-sounding and memorable American- and Bohemian-inspired folk-like melodies, nostalgia and drama, Dvořák's 'New World' Symphony is perhaps one of the best-known works in the symphonic repertoire and certainly one of the most recorded. Undaunted, Katy Hamilton has found her favourite recording...

11.20 am

Record of the Week: Andrew's top pick.

SAT 11:45 Music Matters (m001s5gt)

Bertrand Chamayou; Michael Barenboim

As his new album Letter(s) to Erik Satie is set to be released, the French pianist Bertrand Chamayou talks to presenter Tom Service about the connections he sees between the visionary composers it features, including John Cage, James Tenney and Erik Satie, and how the project took him to places he'd never been before. He tells Tom how collaborating with the soprano Barbara Hannigan opened the door for this Satie project, about the unpredictability of the recording process, and how he'd like classical music performance to become more like visual art.

Tom travels to Bristol's The Galleries shopping centre, home of Bristol's Eye Hospital Assessment centre, to visit a new installation featuring the testimony of 100 voices from across 12 NHS hospitals - including doctors, porters, nurses, consultants, and patients - which have been curated into an hour-long immersive experience. Providing a therapeutic space for contributors to express themselves, and an opportunity for audiences to contemplate the lived experience of hospital communities, Tom learns how the project's composer, Hannah Conway, and librettist, Hazel Gould, created four arias around common themes they encountered, and hears how they've become creatively projected into a bespoke structure that will tour Bristol, London, Preston and Addenbrooke over the coming weeks. With contributions, too, from Manager at NHS Lancashire Teaching Hospitals, Dipa Dave, and Head of Arts at Cambridge University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust, Natalie Ellis.

Also today, as the West-Eastern Divan Ensemble prepares to perform a concert including Mendelssohn, Beethoven and Carter at the Queen Elizabeth Hall in London this weekend, the violinist Michael Barenboim tells Music Matters how, despite the situation in the Middle-East, the collaborative principles behind his father's and Edward Said's orchestra - which seek to bring together Arab, Palestinian and Israeli musicians - are more important than ever.

And the composer Jack van Zandt - author of a new book, Alexander Goehr, Composing a Life - speaks to Tom about the ongoing teacher-pupil relationship he's developed under the tutelage of Alexander - Sandy - Goehr, and how Olivier Messiaen, Pierre Boulez, and among others, Richard Hall, have in turn provided tuition and inspiration across Sandy's musical life.

SAT 12:30 This Classical Life (m001s5h7)

Jess Gillam with... Cécile McLorin Salvant

Jess Gillam meets jazz singer Cécile McLorin Salvant to swap some of their favourite music.

Cécile is a 3 time Grammy Award-winning jazz singer and her music shows off her passion for storytelling and finding the connections between vaudeville, blues, jazz, baroque and folkloric music. She spoke to Jess ahead of her show at London Jazz Festival 2023 and picked some of her favourite voices from Maria Callas singing Puccini to flamenco star Camarón de la Isla and an air de cour by Gabriel Bataille.

Jess brought along a string quartet by Caroline Shaw, a Hollywood inflected Concerto by Korngold and the most beautiful of songs by Aretha Franklin

PLAYLIST:

GABRIEL BATAILLE: Sortés soupirs témoins de mon martyr

CAMARON DE LA ISLA: Yo vivo enamorado (Tangos)

[Cameron De La Isla (singer), Paco De Lucía (guitar)]

SAT 13:00 Inside Music (m001jibr)

Pianist and composer Bill Laurance with inspiring

improvisation and amazing arrangements

Bill Laurance is a pianist, composer and original member of the fusion band Snarky Puppy. His choices in this programme draw on his classical and jazz roots, including a Duke Ellington arrangement that Bill believes is an excellent blend of those two genres.

Bill shares a song whose harmony prevents it from sounding too sweet, a piece by Ravel that elegantly captures the fluidity of water, and a choir who are rhythmically free yet perfectly together.

Plus, he goes back to his university days to revisit his experiences conducting Ernest Moeran's Sinfonietta...

A series in which each week a musician explores a selection of music - from the inside.

SAT 18:30 Opera on 3 (m001s5jy)
Mozart's The Marriage of Figaro

A philandering count, determined to exercise his droit de seigneur with his wily valet's bride-to-be on her wedding day.... a humiliated countess bent on revenge... and a sex-obsessed cross-dressed, cross-dressing teenager...

Subversive and funny, poignant and thought-provoking. Mozart's comedy is one of the greatest operas of all time, packed full of unforgettable tunes, telling characterisation, and trenchant observation both of society's iniquities and the human condition.

Kate Molleson introduces an acclaimed performance recorded at this year's Salzburg Festival, and she talks to Martin Nedbal from the University of Kansas about Figaro's origins and the ever-changing reactions to the opera in different countries at different times.

SUN 00:00 Freeness (m001s5kn)
London improvises

Corey Mwamba shares music from artists playing at the EFG London Jazz Festival, plus free jazz from Chicago and a new track from a quintet helmed by AMM's Eddie Prevost with Binker Golding (saxophones), Henry Kaiser and N. O. Moore (guitars) and Olie Brice (double bass).

Now in its thirty-first edition, the EFG London Jazz Festival will take place at over seventy venues from the 10th to the 19th of November, bringing to the stage a wide variety of music from across the jazz spectrum. Broadcast during the first weekend of the festival, this episode of Freeness shines a light on the more experimental talents featured in the line-up, including Irreversible Entanglements, Juno 3 (Han-earl Park, Lara Jones, Pat Thomas) and Adjunct Ensemble.

Elsewhere in the show, we hear a track from the reissue of 2001's Masses, a collaborative album made by East London duo Spring Heel Jack together with a group of improvisers drawn from the contemporary UK and New York scenes. Plus we've an extract from a recent live performance by Kemeti Tapestries, the supergroup of David Boykin and Eliel Sherman Storey (saxophones), Nicole Mitchell (flutes), Zahra Baker (vocals), Jeff Parker (guitar), Josh Abrams and Darius Savage (basses), Avreeayl Ra (drums) and Lawrence Jones (percussion).

Mali Morris

The abstract painter Mali Morris is fascinated by colour and light, and has been exploring their possibilities in her work for more than 50 years.

She was born in Wales and studied at the University of Newcastle, where the Pop Art pioneer Richard Hamilton was one of her teachers. He brought her and fellow students news of New York which she says "seemed as far away to me as the moon".

Mali herself taught at a number of art schools including Chelsea, the Slade School and the Royal College of Art. She was elected a Royal Academician in 2010, and last year, flags made from her work hung above Bond Street, not far from the Academy, in a riot of joyous colour.

She currently has a major exhibition at the Ikon Gallery in Birmingham.

Her musical choices include Bach, Beethoven, Vivaldi and some blues singing and whistling by Professor Longhair.

Esther Yoo plays violin sonatas by Debussy and Grieg

From Wigmore Hall: the violinist Esther Yoo is joined by the pianist Jae Hong Park for sonatas by Debussy and Grieg.

The youngest ever winner of the Sibelius International Violin Competition, the American violinist Esther Yoo was described by The Strad magazine as "the model of a violin soloist in the modern age." A former Radio 3 New Generation Artist, she now enjoys solo engagements with some of the world's leading orchestras and conductors. But chamber music remains an important part of her artistic make-up. Esther Yoo is partnered at London's Wigmore Hall today by the South Korean pianist Jae Hong Park, winner of the 2021 Ferruccio Busoni International Piano Competition.

Presented by Hannah French.

Debussy: Violin Sonata in G minor
Grieg: Violin Sonata No. 3 in C minor Op. 45
Rachmaninov: Vocalise Op. 34 No. 14
Vieuxtemps: Souvenir d'Amérique on 'Yankee Doodle' Op. 17

Recorders

For many years, the humble, plastic and mass-produced recorder has been a mainstay of music education. The first instrument put into the hands of thousands of 20th-century primary school children across the world, creating lifelong musical memories, some good, some bad. That's all now under threat from a small, stringed impostor: the ukulele. A recent survey of children who play a musical instrument found that the proportion playing the recorder has collapsed from 52% in 1997 to just 15% in 2020. Ukelele playing since 2014 is up by 15%.

Recorders appear in paintings as early as the 15th century and have long been associated with angels and amateurs as well as children. Henry VIII was a big fan – 'exercising himselfe daillie in ... plaieing at the recorders'; and on hearing one in 1668 Samuel Pepys said it was 'so sweet that it ravished me'; and indeed, in a word, did wrap up my soul so that it made me really sick, just as I have formerly been when in love with my wife'. He bought himself one six weeks later. An understated presence in the history of classical music nevertheless, the recorder has been utilised by composers from Henry Purcell and Handel, to Paul Hindemith and Luciano Berio.

So, what next for the recorder, and can it survive all those ukuleles? Tom Service investigates...

SUN 17:30 Words and Music (m00013y6)

Women Writing War

From WWI to Afghanistan, testimony from wives, mothers and women journalists read by Carolyn Pickles and Lara Rossi is set alongside music by Martinů, Messiaen, Max Richter, Clare Connors and Miles Davis.

We begin with Joan Tower's Fanfare for the Uncommon Woman before our collaboration with the Big Ideas Project, Motherhood Loss and the First World War, brings letters from the mothers of soldiers in the First World War. Their words are heard with commissioned music by Clare Connors. Helen Thomas, the young wife of the poet Edward Thomas remembers their last night together before he returned to the Front, heard with George Butterworth's The Bank of Green Willow: both Thomas and Butterworth did not return from the war. The great American journalist Martha Gellhorn's report on the devastation in Madrid is set alongside Samuel Barber's A Stopwatch and an Ordnance Map, inspired by the death of a soldier in the Spanish Civil War. Much closer in time is the war in Afghanistan. The music of Miles Davis is heard as the American Iraq veteran and poet Chantelle Bateman remembers her post-traumatic stress on returning from the conflict. And the poets Bryony Doran and Isabel Palmer tell of their experiences of being the mothers of young soldiers in Afghanistan. Women Writing War ends with May Wedderburn Cannan's July 1919 and her final lines, 'Never for us is folded War away, Dawn or sun setting, Now in our hearts abides always our war' are heard with Elgar's Carissima.

Producer: Fiona McLean

The annual episode made in partnership with the Imperial War Museum of Radio 3's Arts & Ideas programme Free Thinking is available now on BBC Sounds. It looks at the gallery's art collection. And on the Free Thinking programme website you can find a series of episodes exploring different aspects of war.

Afterwords - Richard Hoggart

The life and ideas of literary critic and cultural theorist Richard Hoggart, in his own words from the archive and in the words of those knew, loved and were inspired by him.

Best known for his ground-breaking study of working class culture, The Uses of Literacy, published in 1957, Richard Hoggart was a 'scholarship boy' from the back streets of Leeds who became a prime mover in the foundation of cultural studies, a public intellectual and Reith lecturer, Assistant Director-General of UNESCO and a key witness in the Lady Chatterley trial of 1960.

With archive from his many television and radio appearances, Hoggart's prophetic thinking and pertinence today are reflected upon by the author and cultural critic Nathalie Olah, novelist and biographer DJ Taylor, sociologist and writer Dan Evans, the writer Lynsey Hanley and his son, the journalist Paul Hoggart. (Including an extract from an early episode of Granada Television's Coronation Street.)

For many years the Ukrainian-born chief conductor of the Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra, Kirill Karabits, has championed the musical heritage of his homeland, introducing it on stage to his concert audiences so that "...music lovers in Dorset may now be the most knowledgeable in the western world about the symphonic pieces of eastern Europe and central Asia".

In this series, Kirill takes us on a journey which starts in Ukraine and heads eastwards, exploring traditions, influences and connections to reveal the musical heart of this region. This first episode includes music by Sergey Prokofiev, whose pieces are infused with Ukrainian folk songs; Borys Lyatoshynsky, a member of the Ukrainian cultural renaissance in the 20th century; Ivan Karabits (Kirill's father); living composers Valentyn Silvestrov and Anna Korsun; the Monks of Kyiv Pechersk Monastery; and traditional music from the Ukrainian National Choir.

John and Alice Coltrane

Stepping Up

Kate Molleson and Kevin Le Gendre discuss the turning points in John Coltrane's early career.

Coltrane is a name you're likely to have heard, even if you know little to nothing about jazz. More than half a century after his death, saxophonist and composer John Coltrane is hailed as a giant of American cultural history, and one of 20th-century music's greatest visionaries. But he's not the only Coltrane. His wife, Alice, was an accomplished keyboardist and harpist who made revolutionary music in her own right, and whose contribution to John's late output has not always been fully recognised. As soulmates and fellow seekers in sound, John and Alice both transcended cultural and genre boundaries, helping to pioneer avant-garde and spiritual jazz. But following John's premature death in 1967, Alice began her solo career and would take forward their journey of creative and religious expansion. All this week, Kate Molleson is joined by journalist and broadcaster Kevin Le Gendre to dive into the lives and music of these monumental figures, and explore their contributions to the jazz world and beyond.

Today, Kate and Kevin explore the first stages in John's career - and the little steps that lead him towards his early triumph, Giant Steps. Along the way, he's offered a golden opportunity, to play with Miles Davis. But will he make the most of it?

Julia Fischer Quartet

The distinguished violinist Julia Fischer founded a quartet with three other leading string players in 2011. This recital consists of two staples of the repertoire: Mozart's String Quartet in C Major, K 465, known as the 'Dissonance Quartet' due to its strange and unusually dissonant opening; and the second of Janáček's two quartets, 'Intimate Letters', referring to a correspondence between the composer and his unattainable beloved Kamila Stösslová.

Live from Wigmore Hall, London
Presented by Hannah French

Brahms's Symphony No 3

Ian Skelly presents an afternoon of concert and studio recordings from around Europe, and from the BBC's performing groups.

Today, Brahms's Third Symphony is in the 3pm spotlight, performed by the Hong Kong Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Jaap van Zweden. The RIAS Chamber Choir performs Haydn sacred works at the Berlin Music Festival, and there are new recordings from the Ulster Orchestra and BBC Philharmonic, including Bernstein's ever popular Dance Episodes from On the Town.

John and Alice Coltrane

Trial and Error

Kate Molleson and Kevin Le Gendre follow John Coltrane's continuing quest for the perfect sound.

Coltrane is a name you're likely to have heard, even if you know little to nothing about jazz. More than half a century after his death, saxophonist and composer John Coltrane is hailed as a giant of American cultural history, and one of 20th-century music's greatest visionaries. But he's not the only Coltrane. His wife, Alice, was an accomplished keyboardist and harpist who made revolutionary music in her own right, and whose contribution to John's late output has not always been fully recognised. As soulmates and fellow seekers in sound, John and Alice both transcended cultural and genre boundaries, helping to pioneer avant-garde and spiritual jazz. But following John's premature death in 1967, Alice began her solo career and would take forward their journey of creative and religious expansion. All this week, Kate Molleson is joined by journalist and broadcaster Kevin Le Gendre to dive into the lives and music of these monumental figures, and explore their contributions to the jazz world and beyond.

Today, John finds overnight success with his take on My Favorite Things. But fame and money aren't enough – they don't complete his quest for the perfect band, and the perfect sound...

Food

Lady Fanshawe's 'Receipt Book' (c.1651-1707) provides the inspiration for a public cooking event at Tamworth castle hosted by the academic Sara Read which includes preserving vegetables and a look at etiquette. Ideas about hospitality and how we behave when we eat are at the heart of a quiz organised by researchers at Edge Hill University. Both are part of the Being Human Festival and Sara Read and Zayneb Allak join Lindsay Middleton, who is researching food poverty, luxury ingredients and tin cans. Lisa Mullen is also joined at the Free Thinking table for a conversation about new research into food history by two authors: Rebecca May Johnson has written a memoir called Small Fires: an epic in the kitchen and Pen Vogler's History of Good Food and Hard Times in Britain is called Stuffed. So join them for a conversation which covers eel soup, salads, real butter and How to Cook a Wolf.

Producer: Jayne Egerton

The Being Human Festival runs from Nov 9th to 19th showcasing university research from around the UK in a series of public events <https://www.beinghumanfestival.org/>
Dr Sara Read teaches at Loughborough University and is running a workshop at Tamworth Castle on Nov 18
Rebecca May Johnson is running an experimental cooking demo in Walton-on-the-Naze, Essex on Nov 18 and her memoir is called Small Fires
Zayneb Allak at Edge Hill University is running events to do with hospitality 10-16 November
Dr Lindsay Middleton is a literary historian of nineteenth-century food writing at the University of Glasgow. Her research projects include Dishes for the Sick Room: Invalid Recipes from Glasgow's Culinary Collections
Pen Vogler is the author of Stuffed: A History of Good Food and Hard Times in Britain and Scoff: A History of Food and Class in Britain

Rhythm of the Run

Radio-maker and runner Ricardo Burt hits the London streets to explore the rise of DJ run crews across the capital. In the South East, in Peckham, he meets up with Tempo LDN. Founded by DJ Martha, the collective's running sessions are sound-tracked by a curated playlist of beats and led from the front by women; and in the north of the city, he joins Run Dem Crew, whose founder DJ Charlie Dark MBE speaks of opening up the sport to new audiences: "What do I need to swap, change, embellish...? My approach to running is through the eyes of a music producer and a remixer."

Why do we run? And what might it mean to join together to navigate the city in this way? The runners in the crews - Ricardo included - all turn up with their own motivations and meanings. This personal radio essay borrows from the sound world of DJ-ing as scenes from the warm-up routines and the words of Ricardo's interviewees are cut up and sampled, rhythm and reason become one.

With thanks to Martha and Tempo LDN, Charlie Dark MBE and Run Dem Crew.

Mozart Concertos at Wigmore Hall

Violinist Alina Ibragimova and fortepianist Kristian Bezuidenhout, musicians internationally renowned for bringing an invigorating dynamism to historically informed performance, join forces with the Basel Chamber Orchestra for two Mozart concertos.

Written when he was 21 years old the Piano Concerto No. 9 in E flat K. 271 is the earliest of Mozart's keyboard concertos to show the innovation and musical depths of expression of his later concertos. From a couple of years earlier, the Violin Concerto No. 5 in A K. 219 likewise shows originality, playfulness and innovation, as when the solo violin's very first entry seems suddenly suspended in time, or when 'Turkish' music appears out of nowhere in the midst of a graceful minuet. One of Haydn's most dramatic symphonies and a world premiere from Basel-based Jannik Giger complete the programme.

Recorded on Saturday at Wigmore Hall and introduced by Ian Skelly.

Haydn: Symphony No. 52 in C minor
Mozart: Piano Concerto No. 9 in E flat K. 271
Jannik Giger: Troisième œil (world premiere)
Mozart: Violin Concerto No. 5 in A K. 219

Women, art and activism

The first women's liberation conference in the UK, Miss World protests, the formation of the Brixton Black Women's Group and the politics of who cleans the house are all explored in a new exhibition at Tate Britain. Whilst activism and art linked to ecology by 50 women and gender non-conforming artists are on display at the Barbican Centre in London and eco-feminist Monica Sjöö (1938-2005) is celebrated in a show opening at Modern Art Oxford. Naomi Paxton is joined by the academics Sophie Oliver and Ana Baeza Ruiz, and by Marlene Smith, a member of the BLK art group in Britain, who has helped pull together the Tate show.

Producer: Julian Siddle

Women in Revolt: Art, Activism and the Women's movement in the UK 1970-1990 runs at Tate Britain until 7 April 2024
Monica Sjöö: The Great Cosmic Mother runs at Modern Art Oxford from 18 November to 25 February 2024
RE/SISTERS A Lens on Gender and Ecology runs at the Barbican Centre, London until Sun 14 Jan 2024

Ana Baeza Ruiz is at Loughborough University working as the Research Associate for the project Feminist Art Making Histories - an oral history of women's art.

Sophie Oliver teaches literature at the University of Liverpool, specialising in modernist writing by women and in links between art and writing. Both are New Generation Thinkers on the scheme run by the BBC and the AHRC to put research on the radio.

Multitrack

An Turas / The Journey

Five celebrated writers from around Scotland sit at their nearest window and share, in their own language or dialect, what they can see and how it makes them feel about their homeland.

This immersive audio collage takes us on a tour of modern Scotland's plurality of languages, dialects and cultures.

Niall Campbell of Hebridean South Uist lets his eyes scan the waters of his island, and his mind wander beneath the waves. He considers, in English, the Norse influence in the naming of his surroundings.

At a window in Glasgow's southside, Rahat Zahid describes, in Urdu, the myriad people and architecture that make up the multicultural community she is so grateful for.

It's raining where Len Pennie is, in Fife. As the water trickles down her window, she considers, in Scots, the view outside and the relationship she forged with it while studying.

Peter MacKay, in his native Gaelic, looks out over an Edinburgh cityscape, and asks what changes prominent historical figures brought about, and how they've left their mark on the capital today.

In the Doric dialect of north east Scotland, Mae Diansangu shares a snapshot of life from her window overlooking Aberdeen, Scotland's 'granite city'.

John and Alice Coltrane

A New Journey

Kate Molleson and Kevin Le Gendre chart Alice Coltrane's creative response to her grief.

Coltrane is a name that you're likely to have heard, even if you know little to nothing about jazz. More than half a century after his death, saxophonist and composer John Coltrane is hailed as a giant of American cultural history, and one of 20th-century music's greatest visionaries. But he's not the only Coltrane. His wife, Alice, was an accomplished keyboardist and harpist who made revolutionary music in her own right, and whose contribution to John's late output has not always been fully recognised. As soulmates and fellow seekers in sound, John and Alice both transcended cultural and genre boundaries, helping to pioneer avant-garde and spiritual jazz. But following John's premature death in 1967, Alice began her solo career and would take forward their journey of creative and religious expansion. All this week, Kate Molleson is joined by journalist and broadcaster Kevin Le Gendre to dive into the lives and music of these monumental figures, and explore their contributions to the jazz world and beyond.

Today, Alice's world is turned upside down when John dies at the age of 40. Kate and Kevin explore how she channelled her grief into a new musical chapter, and at the same time, found her spiritual awakening.

Strauss and Mahler

Impassioned orchestral music and soul-searching voices from City Halls in Glasgow, the home of the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra.

Thoughts of death haunt all of Mahler's compositions but, inspired by a volume of ancient Chinese poetry, his symphonic song-cycle Das Lied von der Erde sets a meditation of earthly beauty and existential angst amid some of the most imaginative and emotionally powerful music ever written.

And, before it, a piece written just a few years later as Europe cracked under the violent upheavals of the First World War. Richard Strauss' twenty-minute distillation of his symbolist opera Die Frau ohne Schatten, which nevertheless bristles with exotic inventions and big-boned romanticism.

Ways of Being

Kate Davis on Thomas Hardy

The poet Kate Davis explores the way Thomas Hardy's poem 'Afterwards' has influenced her way of being.

In this series, artists, writers and thinkers tell us about the ways they have been shaped by their 'ways of being', their individual bodies – what freedoms they allow, and their sensitivities or limits. They also explore how their work has been shaped and informed by the body, its freedoms and limits. And as many creative people have discovered – limits can lead to originality, and freedoms can offer 'more of the same'.

Kate is the first of our essayists, who each let us into their particular 'way of being' via their relationship with a cultural touchstone (whether it's a poem, a singer, a television series, or a story from the Bible). Each tells us about something that has enriched their own creativity, and brought them closer appreciating their own way of being. Kate contracted polio as a child and it has informed her relationship with the ground and with poetry.

Kate Davis

Kate's first poetry collection is 'The Girl Who Forgets How to Walk' - she has always lived in the Furness peninsula of south Cumbria.

the life she created for herself at Sai Anantam Ashram in recordings of original devotional music, which were almost lost to time. But now, a new generation of listeners are discovering

Stravinsky's The Rite of Spring

Ryan Wigglesworth conducts the BBC Symphony Orchestra in a concert ending with one of Igor Stravinsky's most celebrated pieces. The Rite of Spring surely deserves that overused epithet of 'iconic' and over a century after its infamous Paris premiere, it still thrills audiences with the visceral power of its explosive rhythms and spectacular orchestral sonorities.

To begin, it's back to the future with the elemental sound world of wind and percussion in Ștefan Niculescu's 1975 Ison II.

In between, work by one of the most refreshing and boldest composers working in Britain today, and a Grand Old Man of New Music. Recorder virtuoso Erik Bosgraaf is the soloist Anna Meredith's Origami Songs, a collection of miniatures which, like Japanese paper-folding, evokes the real world with sophisticated simplicity. Arvo Pärt is now famous for his particular brand of minimalism. But 60 years ago in music like his Perpetuum mobile, the 28-year-old composer was finding his voice via the serialist camp of the avant-garde.

Recorded last month at the Barbican Hall, London, and introduced by Martin Handley.

Ways of Being

Tom Shakespeare on J.R.R. Tolkien

Tom Shakespeare explores the influence of J.R.R. Tolkien's characters on his way of being.

In this series, artists, writers and thinkers tell us about the ways they have been shaped by their 'ways of being', their individual bodies – what freedoms they allow, and their sensitivities or limits. They also explore how their work has been shaped and informed by the body, its freedoms and limits. As many creative people have discovered - limits can lead to originality, and freedoms can offer 'more of the same'.

Tom is the fifth essayist to let us into their particular 'way of being' and into their relationship with a cultural touchstone. In this essay Tom considers the character of J.R.R. Tolkien's hobbits, and his experience of reading about them as a child with restricted growth - a child who adored books

Tom Shakespeare
Tom Shakespeare is a writer, social scientist, bioethicist, and a regular broadcaster for BBC Radio. He has also performed as a stand-up comedian and compère in the disability arts world.

Chance and Choice

Jennifer Lucy Allan explores the work of musicians who opt to let go of their creative control. What new sounds and freedoms can ceding the artistic reins bring? The playlist includes an iteration of John Cage's famous chance operations, the sound of wind-strummed Aeolian harps and the algorithmic computer music of UK artist Mark Fell. Plus we hear from Mat Schulz, co-founder of Unsound in Krakow, about how it was to share curatorial duties with an Artificially Intelligent Artistic Director (AIAD) at this year's festival.
