SAT 09:00 Record Review (m001sv1w)

Béla Bartók's The Miraculous Mandarin in Building a Library with Kate Molleson and Andrew McGregor

Andrew McGregor with the best new recordings of classical music.

9.30 am

Iain Burnside is on hand to pick the plums from Warner's recordings of legendary soprano Maria Callas celebrating the 100th anniversary of her birth. And Iain shares his 'On Repeat' track - a recording which he is currently listening to again and again.

10.30 am

Building a Library

Kate Molleson chooses her favourite recording of Béla Bartók's The Miraculous Mandarin.

Three lowlifes force a beautiful woman to lure men into their seedy city den so they can rob them. The third of their victims is a Chinese Mandarin and the woman dances for him. The woman is repelled by the lust she has aroused in the Mandarin and the three thugs repeatedly attempt to kill him. But the Mandarin continues to stare longingly at the woman. Only when she has satisfied his desires does the Mandarin finally die.

With its lurid Expressionist scenario and tawdry urban setting, Bartók's 1919 ballet scandalised the audience at its 1927 premiere and it was closed by the authorities after its first performance. But now, with its dazzling orchestration and satisfying dramatic arc, the score has long been properly regarded as some of Bartók's finest music.

11.20 am

Record of the Week: Andrew's top pick.

SAT 13:00 Inside Music (m001sv30)

Composer Alex Groves finds motion in music

Alex Groves finds wide open skies in the music of John Luther Adams, a storm whipped up by Benjamin Britten, and a complex but effective representation of the chaos of the internet in choral music by Ben Nobuto.

Alex also explains how you can breathe along to a track played by Liam Byrne on the viol, and shows how Ravel writes for string quartet as if he's writing for a modern band.

Plus, Alex reveals the process of finding a sound that feels like his own as a composer...

A series in which each week a musician explores a selection of music - from the inside.

SAT 15:00 Sound of Cinema (m001sw9m)

Maria Callas Centenary

Matthew Sweet marks the centenary of the birth of soprano Maria Callas with a look back at how she and her recordings have been featured in film. The programme includes music from The First Lady, Avengers: Age of Ultron, Saint Laurent, Yves Saint Laurent, and Callas Forever. We hear Callas in arias from Tosca, Norma, Gianni Schicchi and Andrea Chenier. Matthew also offers some thoughts and extracts from the soundtrack from Callas's starring role in Pasolini's 1968 film Medea.

The programme also takes a look at the relationship between opera and the cinema in general. Music featured includes cues from Citizen Kane, The Fifth Element, Hannibal, and The Godfather.

Puccini's Tosca

On the 100th anniversary of Maria Callas' birth, a chance to hear her legendary 1953 recording of Puccini's Tosca, with Giuseppe Di Stefano as Cavaradossi, Tito Gobbi as Scarpia, and Victor de Sabata conducting.

Famous opera singer Floria Tosca's lover, the painter Cavaradossi, has been arrested by the merciless chief of police Scarpia. Tosca knows that only she can save Cavaradossi's life, but how far will she go to do so? Puccini's sweeping melodies are combined with romance, revolution and a final, devastating crisis.

Martin Handley presents and is joined by writer and broadcaster Sarah Lenton to discuss Callas' voice, life and legacy, and also celebrate some of her other signature roles.

In Flux

Corey Mwamba presents new music in states of flux.

Inspired by the Fluxus art movement, Darius Jones is joined by drummer Gerald Cleaver, violinists Jesse and Josh Zubot, cellist Peggy Lee and bassist James Mege for 'suite but sacred' experimentations. The Fluxus philosophy was one that attempted to integrate art and life, critical processes and flow - here, Jones fuses visual art with performance, blending states through hedonistic visions of sound.

Elsewhere, sound artists Tobi Adebajo and petals use sound as a scrying device, tugging on ancestral chords, breath and ephemeral whispers. Through free play and English and Yoruba vocalese, they invite listeners to tune into their 'unbodies'. Plus, violinists Sana Nagano and Leonor Falcón offer an ebullient ode to Béla Bartók, their twin string instruments slipping and sliding around one other, generating a transcendent haze.

SUN 09:00 Sunday Morning (m001svqm)

A classical Sunday selection

Sarah Walker chooses three hours of attractive and uplifting music to complement your morning.

Today, Sarah shares a symphonic poem by Ernst Chausson that mixes high drama with lyrical calm, while pianist Andras Schiff makes Mozart dance across the keys.

There's also a haunting combination of choir and harp from Roxanna Panufnik, while the Choir of The Queen's College, Oxford, perform a glorious setting of a Basque carol.

Plus, harpist Ashley Jackson arranges Samuel Coleridge-Taylor's sweeping melodies for her own instrument.

SUN 12:00 Private Passions (m001svr2)

Walter Murch

Walter Murch is a Hollywood legend. He's won three Oscars for his sound and editing work on Apocalypse Now and The English Patient, and his credits include some of the most acclaimed and discussed films of the past half century – The Godfather trilogy, The Conversation, The Talented Mr Ripley.

He co-wrote the first movie George Lucas ever directed – the dystopian science fiction drama THX 1138. In 1985 he made his own directorial debut with Return to Oz – an unofficial sequel to The Wizard of Oz. As an editor and sound mixer – and the only person to win Academy Awards in both categories – he's thought deeply about the craft of cinema and all its possibilities, ideas which he shared in his book In the Blink of an Eye.

Walter's musical choices include Wagner, Beethoven, Pergolesi and Chopin.

SUN 13:00 Clive Myrie at Christmas (m001sw9p)

A festive classical selection

On Sunday lunchtimes throughout December, Clive Myrie presents four hour-long shows to celebrate the festive season. Clive will gradually build the seasonal atmosphere over the month, with a feast of Advent and Christmas classical music alongside some of his personal discoveries.

In today's show, on the First Sunday of Advent, Clive introduces a Christmas Overture from Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, beautiful carols sung by the Choir of St. John's College, Cambridge and Voces 8, joyful music from JS Bach, a sleigh ride by Mozart and American jazz pianist Vince Guaraldi's take on A Charlie Brown Christmas.

Plus, Clive lets us in on one of his own Christmas traditions...

Turning Picasso

'Turning Picasso' is the extraordinary story of the Cold War battle for Picasso's mind. Frances Stonor Saunders, author of Who Paid the Piper? The CIA and the Cultural Cold War, has uncovered recently declassified CIA documents which prove that America's cultural mandarins, together with the CIA, secretly planned to turn Picasso to their cause.

The plot centres around the 1957 Museum of Modern Art exhibition in New York, to celebrate Picasso's 75th birthday. The head of MoMA, tipped off by a close friend of Picasso's in France, seizes on it as an ideal opportunity to get the artist over for the exhibition, to promote the cause of Western artistic freedom and anti-Communist liberal ideals. He writes to the head of the CIA to persuade him to help get the artist over in time. The fly in the ointment is, of course, Picasso's long-term membership of the French Communist Party. This made an official invitation impossible, set against the internal cultural battle of McCarthyism and fervent anti-Communist political agenda of the time.

This very secret plot to turn Picasso is part of the wider CIA covert campaign to use contemporary artists to bolster the West's credentials as the place of creativity and freedom. They wanted to entice Picasso, the most famous artist in the world, away from Communism as a body blow to Russia. The problem was that Picasso was not for hire – and resisted becoming either a Communist apparatchik or a Western propaganda machine – valuing his freedom to live and work independently above all.

Angela

Angela is the first autobiographical play by leading dramatist Mark Ravenhill. Written during lockdown specifically for radio, the play centres on his mother, Angela, at the age of 84 and suffering with dementia, looking back across her life. This production was originally created for Sound Stage, by the Royal Lyceum Theatre Edinburgh and Pitlochry Festival Theatre, in association with Naked Productions. Sound Stage is a new audio-digital platform offering audiences the chance to have an 'at home theatre experience.

Mark Ravenhill says:

"With the death of my mum in 2019, I was drawn for the first time to write an autobiographical play. I was particularly interested to explore the way culture high and low had impacted on Mum's life and our lives as a family. The play is constructed around a series of encounters with children's literature, classical ballet, amateur theatre and popular song - encounters that shaped my mum's sense of self and her relationship with me. Both my parents are from working-class backgrounds, which gives a specific turn to their relationship to culture and to me. As I thought about a form that could move swiftly in time and location and between inner thought and outer action, I realised that this was best written as a radio play. I feel it's the most 'radio' of the radio plays that I've written..."

The drama intercuts between Angela in her old age, her memories and mind failing her, and her youth; growing up, falling in love with Ted, moving away from her roots as the world of amateur dramatics welcomed her, her struggle with postnatal depression, the challenges of her own aspirations, and the roller coaster that is motherhood. The play is poignantly set against Mark's experience of beginning to learn his lifelong passion of ballet, in his fifties.

Exquisitely observed and full of compassion, Angela is an emotive exploration of working-class motherhood in the 1960s, told by one of Britain's leading dramatists, as we've never heard him before.

SUN 23:00 Round the Horn with Felix Klieser (m001svt7)

1. The Evolution of the Horn

As part of the International Day of People with Disabilities, the German French horn player Felix Klieser introduces the first of three programmes all about his instrument. He looks at how it works, how to play it, and how it has changed over the years, as well as how it has shaped his own life. Felix was born without arms, and has become one of the world's most in-demand French horn soloists, wowing BBC Proms audiences earlier this year. He's also a prolific recording artist.

In this first episode he talks about some of the French horn players who have influenced him, celebrating their unique and different sounds. He also demonstrates how to play French horn without an instrument, and delves into the horn's early history as a device for relaying 'signals' over long distances, before being incorporated into the orchestra by baroque composers such as Handel, back when the instrument was still known as the 'Corno da caccia', or 'hunting horn'.

Felix also introduces chamber music by Schubert, a showpiece by Weber, and French horn blockbusters by Mozart and Richard Strauss, alongside lesser-known gems by Bach, Telemann and Beethoven.

A Medieval Christmas

Blowe, Northerne Wynd

Medieval carols and the story of St Nicholas, with Donald Macleod.

This week, Donald Macleod marks the beginning of the season of Advent by exploring Christmas music and stories from the Middle Ages. Christmas celebrations encompassed a great variety of colourful traditions and musical occasions during medieval times. Peasants and nobles alike could look forward to many weeks of festivities, from Advent at the start of December, right through to Candlemas on 2nd February. Some of those customs we still recognise and celebrate today. Many are now lost or significantly altered. Donald is joined by early music expert, William Lyons, to examine how Christmas might have felt and sounded to our medieval ancestors

Today, Donald and William introduce carols from Finland and Winter songs in Old English. Plus we discover the original story of St Nicholas, before he became the Santa Claus figure we know today.

MON 19:30 Radio 3 in Concert (m001svtf)

Debussy, Richard Strauss and Chausson

Debussy's famous and famously erotic 1894 Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune begins this concert from Denmark.

Very little in Richard Strauss's early Violin Concerto anticipates his better-known music and the piece needs the help of a persuasive advocate, which it gets here with Renaud Capuçon as the soloist.

To end, music by a friend of Debussy. Ernest Chausson, like so many French composers of the late 19th century, became obsessed with Wagner but later tried to find a new, more French path. But with its irresistible swagger and full-blooded romantic melodies underpinned by lush harmony, Chausson's Symphony in B flat still has a whiff of the Teutonic. It's the only symphony he wrote before his life came to an abrupt end in 1899 at the age of 44 when he and his bicycle hit a wall.

Recorded in September at the DR Concert House, Copenhagen, and introduced by Fiona Talkington.

The Enormous Condescension of Posterity

On reading The Making of the English Working Class

Sixty years after it was first published, five essayists reflect on the legacy, ideas and personal inspiration of The Making of the English Working Class – and plot its place in the present day.

EP Thompson's landmark social history, The Making of the English Working Class, is a book that changed lives. In an academic world where history was primarily concerned with power and political reform, EP Thompson sought to rescue working people from, as he put it, "the enormous condescension of posterity".

It's a book that lies at the root of contemporary social history, of cultural studies, sociology and anthropology, where, in the years after its publication, the idea of agency – the 'making' of the title – came to be a defining touchstone in thinking about culture and society. And it was popular too, even if its easily recognisable blue Pelican covers – and almost 1,000 pages – were possibly more dipped into than read cover to cover.

The writer and historian Sheila Rowbotham first met Edward and Dorothy Thompson in 1962, a year before the publication of The Making of the English Working Class. In this essay, she remembers their catalytic influence on her own life and work – and the continuing relevance of the book she first read in proof form as a student.

Sheila Rowbotham is a historian of feminism and radical social movements. Her latest book is Daring to Hope: My Life in the 1970s.

A Medieval Christmas

Daniel and the Feast of Fools

Donald Macleod investigates some unusual festive celebrations, popular in the Middle Ages.

This week, Donald Macleod marks the beginning of the season of Advent by exploring Christmas music and stories from the Middle Ages. Christmas celebrations encompassed a great variety of colourful traditions and musical occasions during medieval times. Peasants and nobles alike could look forward to many weeks of festivities, from Advent at the start of December, right through to Candlemas on 2nd February. Some of those customs we still recognise and celebrate today. Many are now lost or significantly altered. Donald is joined by early music expert, William Lyons, to examine how Christmas might have felt and sounded to our medieval ancestors.

Today, Donald and William look at how churches in the Middle Ages used theatre to press home their Christmas messages, plus they focus their attention on the much misunderstood church festival of the 'Feast of Fools'.

Beethoven's Second Symphony and Rossini's Stabat Mater

Rossini's late Stabat Mater is a choral masterwork which he completed well over a decade after the end of his operatic career. In setting the medieval Latin text recounting the sorrows of the Virgin Mary at the crucifixion, Rossini responded with music that exudes qualities of granite and grandeur. Such was the success of its premiere that within the following year it had been performed all over Europe 29 times!

Beethoven's Second Symphony, full of the wit and high spirits we also associate with Rossini, make it the perfect companion to the Stabat Mater, and a great opener to the concert.

Recorded at Bridgewater Hall in Manchester last month.

TUE 22:45 The Essay (m001svy9)

The Enormous Condescension of Posterity

The Making of EP Thompson

Sixty years after it was first published, five essayists reflect on the legacy, ideas and personal inspiration of The Making of the English Working Class – and plot its place in the present day.

EP Thompson's landmark social history, The Making of the English Working Class, is a book that changed lives. In an academic world where history was primarily concerned with power and political reform, EP Thompson sought to rescue working people from, as he put it, "the enormous condescension of posterity".

It's a book that lies at the root of contemporary social history, of cultural studies, sociology and anthropology, where, in the years after its publication, the idea of agency – the 'making' of the title – came to be a defining touchstone in thinking about culture and society. And it was popular too, even if its easily recognisable blue Pelican covers – and almost 1,000 pages – were possibly more dipped into than read cover to cover.

EP Thompson spent many years as an adult education tutor among industrial communities in the West Riding of Yorkshire. When The Making of the English Working Class was published in 1963 he dedicated it to his students. In this essay, the historian and biographer Geoff Andrews recalls his own experiences of adult education in the 1980s and explores the ways in which these democratic classroom encounters might have provided an opportunity for EP Thompson to learn as well as teach.

Geoff Andrews is a historian and biographer, currently writing a new history of the labour movement.

The gothic architectural wonder that is Notre-Dame Cathedral first rose above the streets of Paris during the 12th and 13th centuries. The composers employed there, to write music for this brand new building, were working at the cutting edge of medieval musical thought. Today, Donald and William introduce sacred Christmas music from medieval Notre-Dame and discuss what makes it so extraordinary.

This week, Donald Macleod marks the beginning of the season of Advent by exploring Christmas music and stories from the Middle Ages. Christmas celebrations encompassed a great variety of colourful traditions and musical occasions during medieval times. Peasants and nobles alike could look forward to many weeks of festivities, from Advent at the start of December, right through to Candlemas on 2nd February. Some of those customs we still recognise and celebrate today. Many are now lost or significantly altered. Donald is joined by early music expert, William Lyons, to examine how Christmas might have felt and sounded to our medieval ancestors

Mary, mother of Jesus, became a huge figure of veneration during the Middle Ages, particularly during the Christmas period. In today's programme, Donald and William explore the wealth of medieval music written in Mary's honour, and the emerging tradition of lullabies to the infant Jesus.

JG Ballard's Crash

The controversial 1973 novel by JG Ballard about car crash fetishists was, according to its author, "a total metaphor for man's life in today's society". Matthew Sweet is joined by the author and Ballard fan Iain Sinclair, by the film critic Muriel Zagha, by Mark Blacklock editor of Ballard's Selected Nonfiction, 1962-2007 and by Jo Stanley, who took part in an exhibition Ballard staged when he was developing the ideas that led to Crash.

Producer: Luke Mulhall

The Enormous Condescension of Posterity

The Rescuer

Sixty years after it was first published, five essayists reflect on the legacy, ideas and personal inspiration of The Making of the English Working Class – and plot its place in the present day.

EP Thompson's landmark social history, The Making of the English Working Class, is a book that changed lives. In an academic world where history was primarily concerned with power and political reform, EP Thompson sought to rescue working people from, as he put it, "the enormous condescension of posterity".

It's a book that lies at the root of contemporary social history, of cultural studies, sociology and anthropology, where, in the years after its publication, the idea of agency – the 'making' of the title – came to be a defining touchstone in thinking about culture and society. And it was popular too, even if its easily recognisable blue Pelican covers – and almost 1000 pages – were possibly more dipped into than read cover to cover.

The Making of the English Working Class was written in the years after EP Thompson left the Communist Party of Great Britain in 1956. In this essay, David Aaronovitch explores how, as well as his experience of leaving the Party, EP Thompson's communism was essential to the writing of his great book.

Think of The Nutcracker as a super-saccharine classic for the feel-good season? Think again. Is everything really all sweetness and light in the world of sugar-plum fairy? No! But don't let the tale's dark undertones spoil your enjoyment of the wonderful music.

Tom Service tears the gaudy wrapping paper from Tchaikovsky's balletic masterpiece to remind us you don't always get what you want. Behind the tinsel and fluffy snowflakes lies a story imbued with darkness and death. But maybe that is the secret of its unfading allure and beauty.

Tom is joined by Marina Frolova-Walker and Peggy Reynolds to crack the most popular nut in the repertoire.

Oramo conducts Sibelius

Sakari Oramo conducts the BBC Symphony Orchestra in Nielsen, Sibelius's Symphonies No 6 and No 7 and, with Johan Dalene, the UK premiere of Tebogo Monnagotla's Violin Concerto.

Prepare to be transported. High above the Indian Ocean, a dragonfly catches the monsoon breeze, and soars between continents. Carl Nielsen boards ship for a windswept journey to the Faroes, all without leaving his Copenhagen home. And Jean Sibelius writes music "with the scent of the first snow" in a pair of monumental late symphonies.

That dragonfly is called a "globe skimmer" and in Tebogo Monnagotla's fabulous new violin concerto it's played by former BBC New Generation Artist Johan Dalene. "I was amazed by this young player who radiated musical curiosity, approaching the most experimental music with the same curiosity as with Nielsen or Sibelius" she says. For Sakari Oramo, meanwhile, Sibelius and Nielsen are the passions of a lifetime: music in which he always has something distinctive and fresh to say.

Winter Is Icumen In

"Welcome, fool. You have come of your own free will to the appointed place. The game is over."

Take a spin around the musical maypole with Verity Sharp as Late Junction marks the 50th anniversary of cult classic The Wicker Man. With a soundtrack that weaves together traditional song, nursery rhymes, psychedelic folk, Robert Burns's ballads and medieval polyphony, the film has set the tone and the bar for folk horror since its release in December 1973. Over the past 50 years, it has inspired countless artists, filmmakers and musicians, and become synonymous with a certain kind of sound and aesthetic.

As the seasons change and we approach the end of the wheel of the year's current cycle, Verity reaches for some dark eerie folk, sonic rituals and pagan techno as well as ballads of seduction and fertility. Plus an exclusive mixtape from the composer Gary Carpenter, who worked as the associate music director on the film and assembled Magnet, the band that performed most of the soundtrack. Gary's mixtape gives us an insight into the musical world that informed the soundtrack, as well as some of his own inspirations and favourites.
