

SATURDAY 30 DECEMBER 2023

SAT 01:00 Composed (m001kacz)
Composed with Devonté Hynes

INFLUENCES II: More of the music that inspires me

Devonté Hynes explores the powerful, evolving sounds of classical music, with playlists drawn from across the musical spectrum.

In this second selection of influences, Devonté shares more of the music that's helped make him the artist and composer he is today, scoring film and television, and recording as Blood Orange.

The playlist includes Philip Glass, Dmitri Shostakovich, Angel Bat Dawid and Anne Anne Müller. Not to mention one of his favourite songs of all time, Malcolm McLaren's Madame Butterfly, which spurs him on creatively.

SAT 09:00 Record Review (m001tqw1)

Schubert's Winterreise in Building a Library with Allyson Devenish and Kate Molleson

Kate Molleson with the best new recordings of classical music

9.30 am

Yshani Perinpanayagam talks to Kate about some of her favourite new releases this week.

10.30 am

Building a Library

Pianist Allyson Devenish chooses the ultimate recording of Schubert's song cycle Winterreise to buy, download or stream.

Schubert's "Winter's Journey" is a cycle of 24 songs across which the composer evokes a love-lorn wanderer's trek across a desolate landscape. It is as much a psychological journey as much as a musical one, which perhaps accounts for the extremely wide range of approaches and interpretations.

11.20 am

Record of the Week

Kate's pick of the best of the best from the last seven days.

SAT 11:45 Music Matters (m001j4r2)

Evelyn Glennie

Tom Service visits Evelyn Glennie to discuss her life and career. As a soloist and improviser, the profoundly deaf musician created a role that had never existed in the classical world before, that of a solo percussionist. Growing up on a farm in Aberdeenshire, Evelyn Glennie's journey to musical stardom took her through the Royal Academy of Music to playing at the Proms in 1992; she was a household name on TV throughout the late 80s and 90s, and led hundreds of musicians at the Olympic Opening Ceremony in 2012. She's commissioned an entire repertoire of concertos, has a vast archive of percussion instruments and has a determination to make the most of every moment. With Tom, as she shows him around her many instruments, she explores the essential principle that's been the cornerstone of her life - listening.

SAT 12:30 This Classical Life (m001tqwt)

Jess Gillam with... Laura Cannell

Jess Gillam shares music with composer Laura Cannell, including a sublime Biber Requiem, new music by Kenya Grace, traditional Norwegian fiddle music and a Memphis Soul Stew!

Heinrich Ignaz Franz von Biber - Requiem in F minor - Dies Irae [Gabrieli Consort, Paul McCreech]

SAT 13:00 Inside Music (m001tqx8)

Soprano Elizabeth Watts with a musical mix of blend and bite

Elizabeth Watts is firmly established as one Britain's leading sopranos and in this edition of Inside Music she brings some of her favourite vocal works to the studio. There's choral beauty from Tenebrae, Trinity College Choir and The Hilliard Ensemble, as well as solo artists ranging from Gundula Janowitz all the way to Harry Connick Jr.

Elizabeth is also dazzled by the verve and vibrancy of Nigel Kennedy playing Bach, enjoys listening to the beauty of nature expressed in music by Finnish composer Einojuhani Rautavaara and wonders how anyone can fail to be wowed by virtuosic tuba playing.

A series in which each week a musician explores a selection of music - from the inside.

SAT 15:00 Sound of Cinema (m001tqxw)

Spielberg and Williams

Matthew Sweet celebrates 50 years of one of cinema's greatest collaborations - that of director Steven Spielberg and his composer of choice, John Williams.

With music from E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial, Indiana Jones, Jaws, Schindler's List and Jurassic Park. Matthew gives us a close encounter with the music for Close Encounters Of The Third Kind as he analyses the scene of humanity's first contact with the alien mothership.

SAT 16:00 Music Planet (m001lkgg)

Angélique Kidjo

Lopa Kothari meets Angélique Kidjo, who has been a star singer in African music for more than four decades. In this reflection on her life and music, Angélique recalls early influences such as Miriam Makeba and the Togo singer Bella Bellow, and introduces tracks from her early albums from the nineteen-eighties and nineties. She remembers leaving Benin to escape the political restrictions there, then returning later for inspiration for her album Djin Djin. She is a beacon for younger African musicians, and she talks about her recent collaboration with Nigerian artist Burna Boy. A five-time Grammy winner, earlier this year she received the prestigious Polar Music Prize as 'one of the greatest singer-songwriters in international music.'

SAT 17:00 J to Z (m001Inrt)

Simon Moullier in session

Kevin Le Gendre presents a second chance to hear French born, New York based vibraphonist Simon Moullier, live in session for J to Z. After studying under Wayne Shorter and Jimmy Heath, Simon has been hailed as one of the most exciting vibraphonists of his generation. He has received accolades from Herbie Hancock and Quincy Jones for his unique and innovative approach to the instrument and has worked with Kendrick Scott, Buster Williams and Mark Turner.

Also in the programme, we hear from award winning Birmingham-based saxophonist and MC Soweto Kinch. A pioneering force in the British jazz world and internationally, Soweto offers work that is both musically and conceptually explorative. He embraces the joint lineages of jazz and hip hop, blending them into his own unique sound as he reflects on the music and culture of the African Diaspora, the histories of black Britons (both told and widely untold), Britain's colonial legacy and the extent to which it is confronted in the present. Most recently, he has been working with the London Philharmonic Orchestra on his latest album, 'White Juju'. Here he shares some of the music that has inspired his journey so far.

SAT 18:30 Opera on 3 (m001tqzn)

Bellini's I Capuleti e i Montecchi

With I Capuleti e i Montecchi, Bellini found his unique gift for haunting, liquid melodies that seem to go on for ever. After the first performances he himself said "My style is now heard in the most important theatres in the world...and with the greatest enthusiasm." In this adaption of the tale of the star-crossed lovers, Bellini gives both the leading roles to female voices, which adds a special eroticism to the love music.

Andrew McGregor presents a concert performance recorded at this year's Salzburg Festival in conversation with opera expert Roger Parker. The cast is led by soprano Elsa Dreisig as Giulietta, mezzo Aigul Akhmetshina as Romeo and the Mozarteum Orchestra Salzburg is conducted by Marco Armiliato.

SAT 22:00 New Music Show (m001tr04)

Oh Bobby! - an experimental Christmas pantomime

Tom Service presents Oh Bobby! - a brand new, experimental Christmas pantomime composed by Adam de la Cour, performed by a crack troupe of new music practitioners, including Neil Luck, Lori Lixenberg, Alwynne Pritchard and more. This is an unashamedly absurd take on a traditional panto, it will appeal to fans of the experimental and those who revel in the ridiculous. Taking the form of a radio play, and recorded live before a studio audience, the show is interactive, with the audience performing their part by responding to the live action (you know, just like a panto).

The plot revolves around the misadventures of such characters as Tobbin, a Virtual Reality obsessed Cockney urchin; Windows Twanky (an AI Dame); and Blotto the sock puppet, as they traverse the pitfalls and pumice stones of the year 2035!

Adam de la Cour is a London-based composer, performer and film-maker, well-known on the experimental scene. His music sometimes resembles genres such as contemporary classical, experimental, free improvisation, heavy metal and other 'popular' styles. He has made short films for Cartoon Network's late night cable broadcasting block, Adult Swim, and has appeared on Radio 3 and BBC Radio 6 Music performing live carpentry with Neil Luck. He is part of ARCO Collective and a co-founder of squib-box.

Henry Threadgill

For almost six decades, Henry Threadgill has been an illustrious figure in post jazz. He is a core member of Chicago's Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (AACM), a pioneering body both for forward-thinking music and a radical approach to education. Collaboration has been key to Threadgill's output, as evidenced by his work playing in and leading a raft of seminal bands including the trio Air, the nonet X-75, his own eponymous sextet and the adventurous Zoid. A Pulitzer Prize-winning composer, Threadgill takes an incisive approach to creating musical systems in sound that allow for rich improvising and creative expression, and he makes work across a range of mediums, from painting and poetry to theatre.

Threadgill's new book, Easily Slip Into Another World, is a vivid memoir from a true polymath, and to mark its recent release he joins Corey Mwamba for reflections on improvising, composing, collectivity through sound, and nurturing creativity.

SUN 09:00 Sunday Morning (m001trbh)

A classical selection for the morning of New Year's Eve

Sarah Walker chooses three hours of attractive and uplifting music to complement your morning.

From a comforting orchestration of a Vaughan Williams Welsh hymn setting, to a harmonically intriguing New Year Hymn from J.S. Bach, Sarah welcomes the final day of 2023 with a seasonal selection of musical offerings.

We'll hear a sparkling sinfonia pastorale by Giovanni Battista Ferrandini, gentle impressionism from Guy Ropartz, and a throwback to the 2013 Vienna New Year's Day Concert.

Plus, dulcimer player Maggie Sansone shares a beguiling arrangement of a festive Finnish song...

Johnny Flynn

Johnny Flynn is a polymath – as comfortable as an actor on stage and screen as he is writing and performing songs. You have perhaps seen him as Mr Knightley in the film Emma or as Ian Fleming in Operation Mincemeat. In his latest film, One Life, he stars alongside Anthony Hopkins, as the young Nicholas Winton, who helped Jewish children flee from the Nazis in what became known as the Kindertransport.

He's currently starring as Richard Burton in the play The Motive and the Cue, the story of how Burton and Sir John Gielgud clashed as they staged Hamlet on Broadway in 1964.

Johnny has also released four albums with his band Johnny Flynn & The Sussex Wit. He composed the theme song for the acclaimed TV series Detectorists, and more recently he's collaborated with the nature writer Robert MacFarlane on two folk albums: Lost in the Cedarwood and The Moon Also Rises. His musical choices include Paul Robeson, Sondheim and Bizet.

SUN 13:00 Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert (m001slzj)

Daniel Hope at Wigmore Hall

From the Wigmore Hall: Daniel Hope and Simon Crawford-Phillips play music for violin and piano by Enescu, Jake Heggie and Dvořák.

Presented by Martin Handley

Enescu: Impromptu concertant in G flat
Jake Heggie: Fantasy Suite 1803 (UK première)
Dvořák: Sonatina in G Op. 100

Daniel Hope, violin
Simon Crawford-Phillips, piano

Two exceptional soloists come together for a programme of duo works that introduces an important recent piece to the UK. Best known for his burgeoning and widely successful operas, Jake Heggie's Fantasy Suite was inspired by Beethoven's residency at the Theater an der Wien in 1803.

Lassus and Wine - Part 1

Orlando Lassus wrote a staggering number of pieces about wine, covering all genres from sacred to secular and everything in between. They tell us much about life, trade, and feasting in Munich in the second half of the 16th century, but also show that Lassus was quite the wine connoisseur: not only in drinking the best wines across Europe, but even his knowledge of wine production.

For this first of two programmes, Hannah French is joined down the line from New York by wine historian Ron Merlino to explore the music of Lassus while tasting some of the types of wine he encountered at the Court of Duke Albrecht V in Munich.

Today, the two wines featured in the programme are both white wines known to have been available in Bavaria in the 16th century:

Trimbach Muscat from Alsace

and

Rueda Verdejo from Spain

Resolutions

The word 'resolution' has several meanings. It can refer to something that has been settled or resolved. It can infer a desire to do something differently or to behave in a changed way - as in a New Year resolution. It can also mark the final unravelling of some great complication or drama. In music, it means something more specific: the progression from discord to consonance. With New Year in mind, Tom Service considers the idea of resolution in music in the widest sense of the word; including a look at how composers set about creating a resolve to their musical ideas. Tom's guest expert is the composer Dobrinka Tabakova.

Feast!

Does a feast always conjure images of rich food and eating too much? The actors Tony Gardner and Janie Dee read from a selection of literary feasts including F Scott Fitzgerald's account of an opulent garden party thrown by Jay Gatsby to the small scale "This Is Just To Say" by William Carlos Williams (a cheeky note left on a fridge admitting having eaten someone else's plums) and Chinua Achebe's Yam Feast from Things Fall Apart. Plus poems including Flowers in the Interval by Louis MacNeice and All Souls by Kit Wright. Music by Copland, Charpentier, Beyoncé, John Barry, Charles Aznavour and Schubert.

The Divine Ms Bernhardt

When they buried Sarah Bernhardt at Pere Lachaise cemetery in 1923, all of Paris turned out to mourn her and the newsreel cameras rolled. She died as she had lived in a blaze of publicity and public adoration. Rising from utterly humble origins, she became the pre-eminent tragedienne of her time but so much more. Actor, manager, entrepreneur, cultural ambassador, Mother of France.

For six decades, across two centuries, Bernhardt died on stage twice a day in innumerable tragedies, loved and beloved by men and women. She defied critics over and over again and took to male roles like Hamlet when she was in her 50s. She made and lost fortunes, carried on performing after her leg was amputated and achieved ultimate immortality by starring in films as motion pictures were being birthed. Writer and broadcaster Muriel Zagha celebrates her life, tracks down the totem of her handkerchief passed among New York stage actresses ever since her death and hears from those still in awe of this defiant spirit of the stage and screen.

BBC Proms 2023: Sir Simon Rattle's final UK performance as Music Director of the London Symphony Orchestra: Mahler's Ninth Symphony

Presented by Kate Molleson, from the Royal Albert Hall, London.

Mahler: Symphony No. 9

BBC Singers

London Symphony Orchestra

Sir Simon Rattle, conductor

In Mahler's Ninth Symphony the composer – who would not live to hear its premiere – bid 'farewell to all whom he loved'. The words 'Leb' woh!!' ('farewell') are written onto the score itself, transformed into a theme that becomes the heartbeat of the whole work. It's a poignant choice for Sir Simon Rattle's final UK performance as Music Director of the London Symphony Orchestra. Death and life collide in a symphony haunted by loss but urgently clinging to dance and song. The finale, however, looks beyond, closing with a vision of distant hills where the sun is shining.

The Clock

Time unravels in this hypnotic audio journey...

In this edition of Slow Radio, we tumble inside the delicate mechanism of the clock - our attempt to contain and mark the steady rush of time itself. Musical and rhythmic, this surreal audio composition moves between the meditative beat of a single timepiece through to a cacophonous eruption of melodious chimes and cuckoos. The Clock will air just after Big Ben's midnight chimes play out on the BBC, 100 years after London's most famous clock was first broadcast on New Year's Eve 1923.

Featuring audio first recorded for the documentary Time Flies on BBC Radio 4, as well as new recordings and compositions built from the sounds of Big Ben's internal mechanism and ringing bells.

Kate Molleson chats with Caroline Shaw about her musical heritage and music making in the community.

At the age of just 30, in 2013 American composer Caroline Shaw made the headlines when she became the youngest person to win a Pulitzer Prize for her vocal work "Partita for Eight Voices". It's a mind-blowing, joyous celebration of every sound and technique the human voice can achieve. The unexpectedly gained Pulitzer could have pigeonholed Shaw's future career, as a "composer", but central to her identity as a creator is the fact that Shaw regards herself as musician. She's a violinist, a vocalist, producer and a composer, and it's the sum of all these parts that make up the creative impetus for her music. Blending performance with composition, blurring the lines between different musical genres, Shaw has avoided categorisation in the multiplicity of her enthusiasms. She's worked with rappers Kanye West and Nas, and soprano Renée Fleming, and mezzo-soprano Anne Sofie von Otter. Her more than one hundred works encompass classical works, film scores, vocal music, and performing and working collaboratively she continues to engage in a diverse range of multimedia projects.

Shaw's passion for music formed early. Born in North Carolina in 1982, Shaw was taught the Suzuki method of violin by her mother from the age of two. Her father, a specialist in respiratory disease, was a keen amateur pianist. Shaw grew up in a culture of community music-making, singing in the church choir and summer camp. Formal studies followed at Rice in performance and Yale in composition, after which she undertook a doctoral programme in composition at Princeton.

Today we hear about Caroline's childhood musical memories and about the connections she makes in her own compositions with historic figures like Beethoven, Chopin and Haydn.

Strauss's Rosenkavalier Suite

Ian Skelly presents great concert performances from across Europe, today including music from a concert with the conductor of today's Vienna New Year Concert, Christian Thielemann, this time with the Dresden Staatskapelle in September - Weber's Jubilee overture, Wagner's Tannhauser
Prelude, and, today's 3pm highlight, a suite of orchestral music from Richard Strauss's opera Der Rosenkavalier. Plus, another treat to bring in the New Year - Simon Rattle conducts his Bavarian Radio forces in Haydn's joyous oratorio The Creation.
We'll hear Part 1 today, with Parts 2 and 3 following tomorrow and Wednesday.

And, as part of Radio 3's New Year New Music season, across the week Ian will select some of his personal favourite pieces of new music he's encountered over the last few years. Today's choices are a carol by Sally Beamish and orchestral music by

Light in the Darkness

From Philip Pullman's fictional north to an account of seeing the aurora borealis, the candlelight in a Hanukkah poem and John Donne's Nocturne to St Lucy to a midwinter visit to Maeshowe by poet Kathleen Jamie - we look at ideas about light and darkness at this time of year in nature, art, belief and traditional storytelling. With music from composers including Mahler, Ligeti, Nielsen, Hildur Gudnadóttir, Arvo Part, Johann Johannsson and Brian Eno.

Another chance to hear Rachmaninov's final symphony, a work tinged with yearning. 'Only one place is closed to me,' the composer wrote after his exile in the USA, 'and that is my own country, Russia.' Following in the virtuoso tradition of Rachmaninov is Thomas Adès's Piano Concerto, performed here by Kirill Gerstein, who gave the 2019 premiere. The work's sardonic brilliance finds an echo in the suite from Kurt Weill's Die Dreigroschenoper ('The Threepenny Opera'), with its famous 'Ballad of Mack the Knife'.

Pianist Steven Osborne joins the Heath Quartet at Perth Concert Hall for a chamber concert of Classical traditions and reinventions in music by Haydn, Tippett and Shostakovich. Haydn's first mature set of quartets was written for the brilliant young leader of the Esterházy orchestra, Luigi Tomasini and showcases his virtuosic panache in these concerto-style first violin parts. Steven Osborne, a leading champion of the music of Michael Tippett performs his short second piano sonata which quotes from his opera King Priam and whose abrupt contrasts and biting harmonies reflect on the harsh realities of war. Steven Osborne and the Heath Quartet come together in Shostakovich's Piano Quintet in G minor, premiered in 1940 by the composer himself and the Beethoven Quartet. It harks back to classical forms and heralds the dark clouds of war which loomed large at the time.

TUE 17:00 Words and Music (m000x6kh)

Building and Sound

According to Goethe, "Architecture is frozen music". If that's the case, then today's programme will be putting some heat under that architecture and seeing what emerges. This exploration of buildings and sound features music written for specific places and music that incorporates the sounds of buildings - Hildegard of Bingen's plainsong exploits the natural reverb of churches and cathedrals, an Iain Chambers composition uses the sounds of Brutalist architecture in Paris, while Valerie Coleman's Clarinet Quintet evokes the shotgun house where she grew up in West Louisville, Kentucky. The readings by Marilyn Nnadebe and Henry Goodman take us to the soured utopia of a Peckham estate in the poetry of Caleb Femi; through a vast maze-like fantasy of a house in Susanna Clark's novel Piranesi; and to architect Marwa al-Sabouni's reflections on the Great Umayyad mosque in Damascus.

Readings:

Thomas Hardy - Architectural Masks
Emily Dickinson - The props assist the house
Susanna Clarke - Piranesi
William Golding - The Spire
Caleb Femi - Because of the Times
Mark Danielewski - House of Leaves
China Mieville - The Scar
Simon Armitage - Still For Sale
Elizabeth Bishop - Jeronimo's House
Andrew Marvell - Upon Appleton House
Marwa al-Sabouni - Building for Hope

Proms at Christmas 2023

Prom 65: Bruckner's Eighth Symphony

BBC Proms 2023 with the BBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Semyon Bychkov - performed in the Royal Albert Hall where the composer once improvised on the organ.

Presented by Sara Mohr-Pietsch from the Royal Albert Hall, London

Anton Bruckner: Symphony No. 8 in C minor (1890 version, ed. Nowak)

BBC Symphony Orchestra
Semyon Bychkov (conductor)

Semyon Bychkov conducts the BBC Symphony Orchestra in Bruckner's Eighth Symphony. The composer described the finale of his symphony – the last he would ever complete – as 'the most significant movement of my life'. It's the culmination of a career, perhaps even of an era: music of 'blazing calm' and impossible grandeur in which the shattering terror of the opening finally finds not just resolution but transcendence.

TUE 19:45 New Generation Artists (m001ts36)

Meet the rising stars of classical music

Georgia Mann introduces recordings made in the BBC studios featuring the current Radio 3 New Generation Artists. Today, the multi-award-winning Leonkoro Quartet venture into English music with Benjamin Britten's Second Quartet. Written in 1945, soon after his opera Peter Grimes had catapulted him into the limelight, the quartet's last movement Chacony paid homage to Henry Purcell on the 450th anniversary of his death. Also today, Shostakovich's cello sonata of 1934, a work which the cellist Santiago Cañón-Valencia says requires the player 'to delve deep and to play with complete abandon.' And to bookend the programme, the glorious voice of Irish mezzo Niamh O'Sullivan.

Hamilton Harty: Sea Wrack
Niamh O'Sullivan (mezzo-soprano)

Caroline Shaw

One Hundred Different Instruments

Kate Molleson and musician Caroline Shaw talk about the role the voice plays in her music.

At the age of just 30, in 2013 American composer Caroline Shaw made the headlines when she became the youngest person to win a Pulitzer Prize for her vocal work "Partita for Eight Voices". It's a mind-blowing, joyous celebration of every sound and technique the human voice can achieve. The unexpectedly gained Pulitzer could have pigeonholed Shaw's future career, as a "composer", but central to her identity as a creator is the fact that Shaw regards herself as a musician. She's a violinist, a vocalist, producer, and a composer, and it's the sum of all these parts that make up the creative impetus for her music. Blending performance with composition, blurring the lines between different musical genres, Shaw has avoided categorisation in the multiplicity of her enthusiasms. She's worked with rappers Kanye West and Nas, and soprano Renée Fleming, and mezzo-soprano Anne Sofie von Otter. Her more than one hundred works encompass classical works, film scores, vocal music, and performing and working collaboratively, she continues to engage in a diverse range of multimedia projects.

Shaw's passion for music formed early. Born in North Carolina in 1982, Shaw was taught the Suzuki method of violin by her mother from the age of two. Her father, a specialist in respiratory disease, was a keen amateur pianist. Shaw grew up in a culture of community music-making, singing in the church choir and summer camp. Formal studies followed at Rice in performance and Yale in composition, after which she undertook a doctoral programme in composition at Princeton.

Today Kate and Caroline consider Caroline's approach to writing music and why thinking in vocal terms is often the starting point for new ideas.

WED 22:00 Free Thinking (m001trlb)

Travel, pleasure and peril

Going on a trip? Get ready to get uncomfortable, pack grease to treat your sore bum, and laudanum for the inevitable travel sickness - and perhaps you might also be in need of an anti-strangulation collar to ward off those potential murderers?

We're delving into the perils of travelling in the past. Back in the 1700s there was no such thing as a relaxing weekend break, travelling could be a fraught and even deadly undertaking. Such was the danger, making a will before you set off seemed reasonable.

Emily Stevenson, Lecturer in Renaissance and Early Modern Literature at the University of York, is researching women travellers as far back as the 1550s. Some set out on religious pilgrimages, others on trade missions, smoothing the way for their husband's wheeler-dealing. It's a picture of heroines and hardship.

Alun Withey, lecturer in History at the University of Exeter is opening the suitcases of the time, what did travellers take with them and why? How have the accoutrements of travel changed or remained the same over the last 400 years?

Art Historian Rebecca Savage from the University of Birmingham, looks at the artistic legacy of travel poster designers from before the second world war. Many were artists in their own right and many were women. Their iconic images of country picnics and modernist landscapes evoke a sense of rural Britain lost in time.

And as we move from the era of the railway to the car, Social Historian Tim Cole from the University of Bristol takes us on a journey inspired by paternalistic travel guides and maps given out freely as part of the 1951 Festival of Britain. How relevant are they now, how much of what they describe is lost in the past or still with us?

Caroline Shaw

Collaboration

Kate Molleson and musician Caroline Shaw talk about the artistic possibilities of being a performer and a composer.

At the age of just 30, in 2013 American composer Caroline Shaw made the headlines when she became the youngest person to win a Pulitzer Prize for her vocal work "Partita for Eight Voices". It's a mind-blowing, joyous celebration of every sound and technique the human voice can achieve. The unexpectedly gained Pulitzer could have pigeonholed Shaw's future career, as a "composer", but central to her identity as a creator is the fact that Shaw regards herself as a musician. She's a violinist, a vocalist, producer, and a composer, and it's the sum of all these parts that make up the creative impetus for her music. Blending performance with composition, blurring the lines between different musical genres, Shaw has avoided categorisation in the multiplicity of her enthusiasms. She's worked with rappers Kanye West and Nas, and soprano Renée Fleming, and mezzo-soprano Anne Sofie von Otter. Her more than one hundred works encompass classical works, film scores, vocal music, and performing and working collaboratively, she continues to engage in a diverse range of multimedia projects.

Shaw's passion for music formed early. Born in North Carolina in 1982, Shaw was taught the Suzuki method of violin by her mother from the age of two. Her father, a specialist in respiratory disease, was a keen amateur pianist. Shaw grew up in a culture of community music-making, singing in the church choir and summer camp. Formal studies followed at Rice in performance and Yale in composition, after which she undertook a doctoral programme in composition at Princeton.

Today Kate and Caroline consider the value of working with regular ensembles, and the creative opportunities a collective approach produces.

Tenor Nick Pritchard and pianist Ian Tindale at the Edinburgh International Festival

From the Queen's Hall, music for tenor and piano by Benjamin Britten, performed by tenor Nick Pritchard with pianist Ian Tindale.

Britten described Winter Words, his 1953 settings of Thomas Hardy poetry, as a set of 'lyrics and ballads' and they variously describe an autumnal November evening, a young boy's train journey, a creaking old table and the burial of a Choirmaster. His settings of French folksongs were arranged a decade earlier and these are performed alongside some of Britten's most well known and loved arrangements of British folksongs.

New Departures

Join Elizabeth Alker as she shares new ambient sounds for a new year, including the radical beauty of Mikado Koko's latest piano piece and the first new studio music in six years from Ben Frost. The Australian-born, Iceland-based producer has mastered the art of controlled abrasiveness in his music, folding field recordings into metallic guitar textures that build towards sometimes forbidding but always captivating. His are spectacular blocks of sonic storytelling and the new track, Turning The Prism, is no exception. Mikado Koko, by contrast, is on a search for pure beauty with his Satie-inspired piano music, in which - he enigmatically suggests - he both composes and doesn't compose, plays and doesn't play... (His hope is that the music - like the new track Lotus Eater - will return us to a state of peaceful childhood.) Elsewhere in the show, we'll hear Boston Blue Period from the forthcoming album by Strange Boy, aka Kieran Brunt and Matt Huxley - expect sweeping strings and tender vocals.

Prom 50: Handel's Samson

BBC Proms 2023: Laurence Cummings directs the Academy of Ancient Music in Handel's dramatic oratorio with Allan Clayton in the title role.

Presented by Hannah French from the Royal Albert Hall, London

Handel: Samson

Allan Clayton, Samson
Jacquelyn Stucker, Dalila
Joëlle Harvey, Israelite Woman
Jess Dandy, Micah
Brindley Sherratt, Harapha
Jonathan Lemalu, Manoa
Philharmonia Chorus
Academy of Ancient Music
Laurence Cummings, harpsichord/director

Our ongoing cycle of Handel oratorios continues with Samson, featuring tenor Allan Clayton and soprano Jacquelyn Stucker. Inspired by Milton's Samson Agonistes, Handel created a deeply moving version of the story of the mighty Israelite warrior, imprisoned and blinded by his enemies, but still determined to destroy them. The Israelites' laments are brilliantly contrasted with the jangling joy of the Philistines, Samson's lofty struggles with Dalila's brittle affections. One of today's leading Handelians, Laurence Cummings directs the Academy of Ancient Music from the harpsichord.

Last Lines

Ian McMillan enjoys last lines in poetry, song, memoir, and novels - and his guests introduce him to different varieties of endings: the trap door, the rug-pull, the fade and many more. Stuart Maconie, writer and broadcaster, is Ian's guide to the bathetic and sometimes dramatic ends to be found in popular song - and explores an ending created by the Cornish poet Charles Causley. Caroline Bird reads a sonnet from her poetry collection 'The Air Year' and reveals the draft that helped her reach the poem and its ending, and fellow poet Sinéad Morrissey shares a work-in-progress inspired by endings: 'Seeing Red', her memoir of growing up in a Communist family in Northern Ireland.

Mischief, Revelry and After-Party Music

"If music be the food of love, play on..."

William Shakespeare, Twelfth Night

Verity Sharp picks music for merrymaking, bringing the festive season to a fitting close. Expect ballads from a fictional Georgian songwriter and ecstatic Sufi dance music. Falling on Twelfth Night, we'll shrug off the shadows of the year just gone and welcome in the new with a show featuring party sounds from Algeria and mysterious songs that play tricks with the listener (including those created by the non-existent artist Nino Gvilla.)

Fomenting our desire to play will be Nuke Watch's Anti-Work piece, while Basque multi-instrumentalist and vocalist Elena Setién invites us to explore the realm of dreams in her Moonlight Reveries. And once the raving is done, a breakfast of Pancakes in Cement served up by Eloine before the cavernous dub-poetry of Iya Shillelagh regenerates our spirits.
