Cello &amp; Double Bass: Deep tones and soaring strings

Devonté Hynes explores the powerful, evolving sounds of classical music, with playlists drawn from across the musical spectrum.

This episode shines a spotlight on another instrument that Devonté plays and loves - the cello. It also highlights the deep tones of the double bass, another instrument, Dev likes to bring to the fore in his own compositions.

The selection includes big cello pieces from Bach and Elgar, some jazz double bass from Abdul Wadud, the experimental pop of Lucinda Chua, and more from one of his biggest influences, Arthur Russell.

Celebrated Scottish tenor Nicky Spence brings his selection of exciting new releases to the studio and shares his On Repeat track: music he has been listening to again and again.

10.30 am

Building a Library

Laura Tunbridge chooses her favourite recording of Schumann's Cello Concerto in A minor, Op. 129.

Schumann wrote his Cello Concerto in 1850 in just two weeks, shortly after moving from Dresden to Düsseldorf with his wife Clara and their six children to be music director of the local music society. Unsited to the role, within a few years Schumann was asked to resign and in 1854, ever more mentally unstable, he attempted to kill himself by throwing himself into the Rhine. He died in an asylum two and a half years later.

Schumann struggled to find a performer and a publisher for the Cello Concerto and it was first played in 1860, four years after his death. With its impassioned and song-driven emotional depth, the concerto is more lyrical than virtuosic, but it nevertheless took the advocacy of some of the great cellists of the 20th Century to establish its place in the repertoire.

Tom drops in on rehearsals at Song in Sign, the latest project from FormidAbility, the opera company founded to put accessibility at the centre of creativity. Tom talks to director, Caroline Parker and to founder and soprano, Joanne Roughton-Arnold ahead of the company's forthcoming tour.

Musicians, Mary Dullea and Darragh Morgan and composer, Matthew Shlomowitz join Tom in studio to pay tribute to composer, John White who died earlier this month.

And finally, Tom talks to double-bassist, Edgar Meyer as he prepares for his visit to Glasgow to perform his Concertino with the Scottish Ensemble at this year's Celtic Connections. He talks to Tom about his collaborations, his sound and how he is influencing the next generation.

Jake Heggie's Dead Man Walking

Winning universal critical acclaim at its premiere in 2000, Dead Man Walking by the American composer Jake Heggie is the most widely performed opera of the last two decades. With a libretto by Terence McNally, it's an adaptation of the powerful memoir by Sister Helen Prejean, a Catholic nun and anti-death-penalty activist from New Orleans. The tale of rage and redemption which questions the morality of the death penalty is set to a score that has been compared to West Side Story for its immediacy and impact.

Joseph De Rocher is a convicted murderer on death row at the Louisiana State Penitentiary and Sister Helen reluctantly becomes his spiritual adviser. As their relationship develops, Sister Helen is able to bring a kind of peace to De Rocher and his family, and persuades him to acknowledge his guilt. Finally, when the time comes, she is there to support him at the hour of his death.

Yannick Nézet-Séguin, the Met's dynamic music director, conducts a starry cast and continues to make good his pledge to refresh the repertoire and bring new audiences to the august institution.

Recorded in New York in October and presented by Debra Lew Harder with commentator Ira Siff.

The opera contains subject matter and strong language which some listeners may find offensive or upsetting.

Inon Barnatan at Wigmore Hall.

From Wigmore Hall: Inon Barnatan plays Schubert and Rachmaninov.

The brilliant American-Israeli pianist plays two sets of Moments musicaux, written nearly a century apart but which encapsulate the musical styles of the two composers. Schubert's ever-popular Moments musicaux are full of happiness, tenderness, profound introspection, terror and desolation whilst Rachmaninov's more virtuosic set pushes the pianist to the very limits as he pays homage to earlier composers like Schumann, Chopin and, of course, Schubert himself. One reviewer described Inon Barnatan as a player having: "A breathtaking charisma that comes from gorgeously turned out technique, a masterly sense of colour, and an expressiveness that can question, weep, or shout joy from the rooftops," perfect qualities for both Schubert and Rachmaninov.

Presented from Wigmore Hall by Martin Handley.

Turangalila!

It made Pierre Boulez want to vomit: Francis Poulenc thought it was atrocious: and Igor Stravinsky said all you needed to write it was enough manuscript paper. But its composer wrote all 80 minutes of it as a love song, and a hymn to joy. So just what is Olivier Messiaen's epic Turangalila Symphony, premiered in 1949 by Leonard Bernstein and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, why did it divide opinion so much, and what does it mean today?

Paying Attention

From Rachel Carson finding solace in noticing 'the exceeding beauty of the earth', via the deductions of Sherlock Holmes, a dog walk with poet Mark Doty to Joyce Sutphen's advice on How to Listen: today's programme celebrates paying attention to the variety of life. Walt Whitman hears the 'grand opera' of the city, Mr. Darcy can't help but notice Elizabeth Bennett, Audre Lorde speaks her truth to those who might listen, and Taylor Mali fights for his students' Undivided Attention. Our readers are Nathan Osgood and Sarah Slimani and our music ranges from Purcell and Byrd to Sondheim and Erroll Garner.

Bayard Rustin - Activism and Early Music

Dr Martin Luther King Jr's "I Have a Dream" speech was a critical moment in the Civil Rights Movement, watched by a crowd of 250,000 people and millions more on television. It happened at the 1963 March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom, a gathering of peaceful protestors who wanted to end discrimination against black people.

The person who organised this hugely significant moment in history was Bayard Rustin, a man who is largely unknown. Rustin was an activist who dedicated his life to promoting equality and was an important mentor to Dr King, teaching him about the principles of non-violent direct action.

But Rustin wasn't just an activist. He was also a talented musician and singer who regularly used music in his political speeches, events, protests and talks. Rustin sang African American spirituals but surprisingly, he also performed Early Music as part of his activism.

The researcher and harpsichordist Joseph McHardy discovers the remarkable story of how Rustin, a political radical and pioneer, used Early Music - a genre not generally associated with people of colour or politics - in this unique way. How did Rustin make Early Music speak to the modern moment of the Civil Rights struggle?

Rustin's great enthusiasm for Early Music and how he used it within his political work has been brought to life by the academic research of musicologist Loren Ludwig, who speaks to Joseph about his research on Rustin. Joseph and Loren dig deep into Rustin's 1952 album, which combined Early Music with African American Spirituals, and they explore the radical roots of the Early Music revival in the United States. Joseph travels to New York to meet Walter Naegle, Rustin's partner of ten years, and he visits the locations of the Cafe Society in Greenwich Village where Rustin sang, and the former 1963 March on Washington HQ in Harlem with author Michael Long. Joseph speaks to Margaret Chisholm to find out about Rustin's early life and time in prison as a conscientious objector of World War II, and he hears from the Chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee Legacy Project, Courtland Cox, who worked with Rustin to organise the March on Washington. Joseph meets with string player Patricia Ann Neely in New York to discuss Rustin's work and the Early Music revival, and in Washington, Joseph reflects upon his own experiences as a black musician working in Early Music with countertenor Reginald Mobley and they discuss whether Early Music can be a vehicle for activism today.

SUN 23:00 Irish Classical - Hidden in Plain Sight (m001vcr5)

3. Bringing it all back home

In the late twentieth century Ireland was catapulted out of economic malaise into the so-called "Celtic Tiger" era. That particular mania didn't last long but growing wealth and confidence is a feature of the Republic in general and the music in particular. In this programme Roisin asks if it is possible or even desirable to retain a distinctive "Irish sound" in a world where international film and gaming music hold such power?

We'll hear the music that emerged from a country at last able to fund musicians and artists to create - the music of John Kinsella, Raymond Deane and Roger Doyle who were able to confidently incorporate trends from international study and travel in their work. We'll hear how the landscape and the traditional still informs music from Ireland, whether it's the cutting edge recordings of Deirdre Gribbin or Linda Buckley or the growing phenomenon of foreign born composers settling in Ireland like Jane O'Leary or Kevin Volans. We'll hear music by Eimear Noone, the first woman to conduct at the Oscars and song from Golden-Globe nominated Brian Byrne. With Irish musicians heading up leading academic institutions around the world, is there anything intrinsically "Irish" about their work any more? What does it mean to be an Irish classical musician now?

Jacques Offenbach (1819-1880)

Prodigy and Upstart (1819-1848)

Jacques Offenbach's life throws a light on the political turbulence and identity within 19th century Europe. He struggled to break into the musical establishment of Paris, but he didn't struggle with creating a dazzling array of work for the theatre. His 98 stage works established and defined what opetta was, paving the way for modern musical theatre.

Today, Donald Macleod looks at Offenbach's early life in Cologne, before his move to Paris, where he was initially taught by the aged Luigi Cherubini.

For the 70th anniversary of the first radio broadcast of Dylan Thomas's Under Milk Wood (25th January 1954), five short dramatic portraits from different areas of Wales in 2024.

Dylan Thomas's Under Milk Wood was first broadcast on the BBC's Third Programme, the predecessor to Radio 3. To this day, it remains one of the most famous radio dramas of all time. To mark the anniversary, Radio 3 has commissioned a new series of five short dramatic portraits from different areas of Wales in 2024, inspired by Thomas' original idea of an omniscient narrator, who invites the audience to listen to the dreams and innermost thoughts of the inhabitants of a fictional small Welsh fishing town. In this new series of dramatic portraits, Ruth Jones (Gavin & Stacey, Stella) is the First Voice, linking all the "Under Milk Woods" together. An omnibus version will be broadcast on Sunday 28th January in Drama on 3.

Stravinsky's Violin Concerto with Vilde Frang

The BBC Symphony Orchestra is conducted by Sakari Oramo in Andrew Norman's blistering opener Unstuck, Stravinsky's neoclassical showcase, and Sibelius's Symphony No.1.

The words of Kurt Vonnegut blasted American composer Andrew Norman out of his creative block: an explosive opening to a concert that celebrates Stravinsky at his most witty. The superb Norwegian violinist Vilde Frang makes a very welcome return as soloist in a concerto that Stravinsky designed to be unplayable!

And there's Sakari Oramo's very personal angle on the woodland magic and Arctic gales of Sibelius's youthful First Symphony. It's high-octane stuff; but Oramo has been exploring Sibelius for his whole life, and he knows that the First Symphony – with its raging storms and shimmering, aurora borealis colours – is about as Romantic as this great Finnish symphonist gets.

Heidegger and Anti-Semitism

Martin Heidegger is widely viewed as one of the most significant philosophers of the 20th century. His 1927 book Being & Time took issue with the entire Western intellectual tradition since Aristotle and suggested a new beginning for philosophy, which has been widely influential in philosophy and beyond. But Heidegger was a card-carrying member of the Nazi party, and there is considerable evidence that he held anti-Semitic views. What is the relationship between the Epochal work, and the opinions and actions of the man? Matthew Sweet discusses, with Maximilian de Gaynesford, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Reading, Peter Osborne, Professor of Philosophy at Kingston University, Daniel Herskowitz, British Academy Postdoctoral Fellow in Theology at the University of Oxford, and Donatella Di Cesare, Professor of Philosophy at Sapienza Università di Roma.

Richard Strauss's Don Juan and Death and Transfiguration

The London Philharmonic and their Principal Guest Conductor Karina Canellakis perform a colourful and exciting programme, recorded at the Royal Festival hall last October.

Two of Richard Strauss's most celebrated symphonic poems bookend the concert. Tod und Verklärung - Death and Transfiguration - begins with the stuttering heartbeat of an old man and, after a lifetime's recollections, ends in a blaze of glory as his soul ascends to the beyond. Don Juan launches with an explosion of huge energy and brazen swagger. But after a series of amorous exploits, famously depicted in a tender oboe solo and thrusting horn fanfares, his soul descends, rather than going in the other direction.

Ravel's D major Piano Concerto was originally written for Paul Wittgenstein who lost his right arm in World War I. It's a virtuosic tour de force for the soloist who must only use their left hand. Even more impressive, perhaps, is Ravel's genius which makes listeners forget completely that only five fingers are at work in this dazzling jazz- and blues-inflected score.

Pulitzer prize-winning Cuban-American Tania León is the LPO's new Composer-in-Residence and here her 1999 'Horizons' receives its UK premiere.

The Kyoto School

In the first decades of the 20th century the Japanese philosopher Kitaro Nishida sent students to Europe and America to see what they could discover about Western philosophy. Keiji Nishitani went to Freiburg to study under Martin Heidegger, and became one of the leading figures in the Kyoto School, a project of synthesis that tried to read the Japanese intellectual tradition through the lens of European philosophy and vice versa. These thinkers took ideas from Christian mysticism, German idealism and Phenomenology, and combined them with an interest in direct experience shaped by Japanese Zen and other forms of Buddhism. But it was work carried out in Japan in the 1930s, in a society becoming increasingly militaristic and tending towards fascism. Chris Harding discusses the Kyoto School and its legacy with James Heisig, Professor Emeritus at Nanzan University, Graham Parkes, Professorial Research Fellow in Philosophy at the University of Vienna, Raquel Bouso, Senior Lecturer in Philosophy at Universitat Pompeu Fabra, Barcelona, and Takeshi Morisato, Lecturer in Non-Western Philosophy at the University of Edinburgh.

 Jacques Offenbach (1819-1880)

Identity Crisis (1864-1875)

Jacques Offenbach's life throws a light on the political turbulence and identity within 19th century Europe. He struggled to break into the musical establishment of Paris, but he didn't struggle with creating a dazzling array of work for the theatre. His 98 stage works established and defined what operetta was, paving the way for modern musical theatre.

Today, Donald Macleod looks at Offenbach's identity challenges throughout his life: not just the matter of his nationality, before and during the Franco-Prussian War, but also his identity as a composer.

Edinburgh in Winter (3/4)

Elizabeth Alker presents the Armida Quartet and friends, from the Queen's Hall in Edinburgh.

Only three string quartets survive by the self-critical Brahms and we hear the third today. The work delighted Brahms's close friend Clara Schumann and Brahms himself described the third movement as "the tenderest and most impassioned I have ever written". To open the recital, the Armida quartet is joined by violist Pauline Sachse and cellist Eckart Runge for the bright and romantic sextet that opens Strauss's opera Capriccio.

Stravinsky's Petrushka

Music of playful rigour and sonic experiment from City Halls in Glasgow. The BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra and Ilan Volkov perform a concert of music by Stravinsky alongside newer pieces by two of England's most searching and inventive composers. After Stravinsky's "Four Etudes for Orchestra" comes Michael Parson's exploratory work "LEVELS for orchestra", then Howard Skempton's "Piano Concerto". The orchestra is joined by soloist Joanna MacGregor to conjure the wide-ranging moods of Skempton's daringly melodic music. And the concert ends with Stravinsky's tour-de-force of orchestral colour and storytelling: the ballet score "Petrushka".

Holocaust history

Historians continue to unearth documents, interpret new records accounts and reinterpret old ones in their light. In doing so they expand our understanding of unfolding anti-Semitism and the Holocaust. Anne McElvoy speaks to Barbara Warnock the senior curator of the Wiener Holocaust Library, the world's oldest Holocaust research institution as it marks its 90th anniversary this year. Rachel Pistol explores the emerging stories of the Jewish men interned in Britain during the Second World War. We hear from Liza Weber about what we can learn from the Jewish art looted by the Nazis. And, Daniel Lee tells us about the lives of resisters Missak and Mélinée Manouchian whose courage will be honoured in Paris this month.

Dr Rachel Pistol is a digital historian and National Coordinator of European Holocaust Research Infrastructure. She is also the Historical Advisor for World Jewish Relief

Dr Barbara Warnock of the Wiener Holocaust Library has curated its 90th anniversary exhibition

Dr Liza Weber, University of Sussex Weidenfeld Institute of Jewish Studies

Dr Daniel Lee is a BBC AHRC New Generation Thinker and a Reader in Modern French History at Queen Mary, University of London.

4) Cardiff by Hanan Issa

For the 70th anniversary of the first radio broadcast of Dylan Thomas's Under Milk Wood (25th January 1954), five short dramatic portraits from different areas of Wales in 2024.

Dylan Thomas's Under Milk Wood was first broadcast on the BBC's Third Programme, the predecessor to Radio 3. To this day, it remains one of the most famous radio dramas of all time. To mark the anniversary, Radio 3 has commissioned a new series of five short dramatic portraits from different areas of Wales in 2024, inspired by Thomas' original idea of an omniscient narrator, who invites the audience to listen to the dreams and innermost thoughts of the inhabitants of a fictional small Welsh fishing town. In this new series of dramatic portraits, Ruth Jones (Gavin & Stacey, Stella) is the First Voice, linking all the "Under Milk Woods" together. An omnibus version will be broadcast on Sunday 28th January in Drama on 3.

States of Mind

Elizabeth Alker shares new ambient and experimental music of varying moods and atmospheres.

"Folksy, post-punk techno" is how Resident Advisor describes the most recent work of "sonic polyglot" Sockethead, the alter ego of Manchester's Richard Harris. There's an abrasiveness and darkness to the music, in which disturbed textures vye for our attention. In Birmingham, the classically-trained percussionist Emily Jones has leant her craft to the production of electronic music with her debut release as Echo Juliet, a layered dancefloor bubbler in which synths, samples and rolling thumb-piano ostinati invite us into a flow state. And Californian composer-musician Joshua Steinbrick offers introspective improvisatory piano-playing, sequences of chords and melody, delicate and sparse, that flit like thoughts across a clear mind.

Edinburgh in Winter (4/4)

Elizabeth Alker presents performances recorded at the Queen's Hall in Edinburgh. The Amatis Trio opens the programme with a work that Shostakovich wrote whilst recovering from tuberculosis aged only 16. Although an early piece, we hear the angular melodies and striking harmonies that later became some of Shostakovich's composing hallmarks. Then follows the original sextet setting of Schoenberg's Verklarte Nacht, performed by the Armida Quartet and friends. It was written before Schoenberg adopted 12-tone serialism and is richly romantic, depicting a man and woman from Richard Dehmel's poem who are transfigured by the beauty of the night.

BBC Philharmonic: Nielsen and Copland

The BBC Philharmonic is conducted by Chief Conductor John Storgards in a programme which has at its heart the UK premiere of James Lee III's Piano Concerto "Shades of unbroken Dream". Inspired by Martin Luther King's famous "I have a dream" speech in its 60th anniversary year the music is a powerful expression of the composer's passion for social justice, equality, and the right of all people to have a voice. Pianist Alexander Dariescu, for whom the piece has been written joins the BBC Philharmonic.

Nielsen's Fourth Symphony "Inextinguishable" closes the programme. "music is life and life is inextinguishable" Nielsen said, and this music shows this in spades with its explosive rhythmic drive and energy.

Conductor John Storgards swaps baton for his violin for the UK premiere of "Helena's Song" by Finish composer Sebastian Fagerlund. In music adapted from his 2017 opera "Autumn Sonata" it is in this music that Helena, the protagonist of the opera, who has up to then not been able to speak, finds her voice.

The programme opens with Aaron Copland's Fanfare for the Common Man - setting the scene for a programme which celebrates the importance of a voice for all people.

Recorded at Manchester's Bridgewater Hall in November 2023 and presented by Tom McKinney

Tessa Hadley

Ian McMillan presents a special extended interview with writer and novelist Tessa Hadley. Tessa Hadley's books are admired for the flowing, thoughtful intensity of her prose; and she is a master of capturing the humanity of domestic lives, and the quietly devastating drama of the everyday. Hadley is a writer with a keen eye for the telling detail and a gift for bringing everything she has, sees and knows about life to the characters she creates. Her first novel was published when she was 46 and since then she has written short stories as well as novels.

Producer: Cecile Wright

5) Rhondda by Rachel Trezise

For the 70th anniversary of the first radio broadcast of Dylan Thomas's Under Milk Wood (25th January 1954), five short dramatic portraits from different areas of Wales in 2024.

Dylan Thomas's Under Milk Wood was first broadcast on the BBC's Third Programme, the predecessor to Radio 3. To this day, it remains one of the most famous radio dramas of all time. To mark the anniversary, Radio 3 has commissioned a new series of five short dramatic portraits from different areas of Wales in 2024, inspired by Thomas' original idea of an omniscient narrator, who invites the audience to listen to the dreams and innermost thoughts of the inhabitants of a fictional small Welsh fishing town. In this new series of dramatic portraits, Ruth Jones (Gavin & Stacey, Stella) is the First Voice, linking all the "Under Milk Woods" together. An omnibus version will be broadcast on Sunday 28th January in Drama on 3.

Wet minds, bog sounds and sea slugs

Verity Sharp selects two hours of ear-queenching, adventurous sounds, from choppy cellos for wet minds to bog sounds from Northern France. We'll head to the pungent, claggy moorlands conjured by the field ethnologist and cartographer of invisible territories, Le Diable Dégoûtant, AKA French experimental sound artist Pauline Marx; and why not join us on a plunge into the "aquatic ruin-zone" soundscapes of Melbourne/Naarm based Tarquin Manek's underground ambient cyberpunk outfit, Static Cleaner Lost Reward? Plus, cascading orchestral dialogue from composer Yu-Hui Chang, a piece that allows the fraught uncertainties and ambiguities that come with the process of composition to enter into the work itself. It's music that is "fluid and free, ready to embrace all changes and possibilities."
