SAT 06:30 Breakfast (m001xw7r)

Start your weekend the Radio 3 way, with Saturday Breakfast

Join Elizabeth Alker to wake up the day with a selection of the finest classical music.

SAT 09:00 Saturday Morning (m001xw7w)

Tom Service talks to superstar pianist Lang Lang

Superstar pianist Lang Lang is Tom Service's first guest, and he plays exclusively for Saturday Morning. Violinist Hilary Hahn and pianist Andreas Haefliger join Tom live in the studio to play music by Brahms. As well as a fantastic classical music playlist, there will be news reports and Tom answers the questions about music you've always wanted to ask: this week, why does music give us goosebumps?

SAT 12:00 Earlier... with Jools Holland (m001xw82)

The pianist and bandleader picks his favourite classical music

In a brand new show for Saturday lunchtimes, Jools shares his lifelong passion for classical music, and the beautiful connections with jazz and blues. With fascinating guests each week, who bring their own favourite music and occasionally perform live in Jools' studio.

Today, Jools' choices include music by JS Bach, Beethoven, Richard Strauss and Chiquinha Gonzaga, with performances from Janet Baker, Bessie Smith and Alfred Brendel. His guest is the Kent-based violinist and composer Anna Phoebe, who improvises with Jools at the piano, and introduces music she loves by Britten, Elgar and Meredith Monk.

SAT 13:03 Music Matters (m001xw8g)

The Land Without Music?

Music Fit for a King and a Nation

Music journalist Richard Morrison begins his six-part series exploring the state of classical music in the UK by starting with the Coronation of King Charles III in May 2023. Both in the lead-up to the coronation, and the ceremony itself, King Charles oversaw a sumptuous showcase of British music. Richard Morrison asks what the carefully-programmed coronation music tells us about both the identity and the state of British music now, and particularly in a post-pandemic climate, played out against the Cost of Living Crisis and cries for financial help from all corners of the music industry. With music from Purcell to Judith Weir and James MacMillan.

Throughout the series, Richard talks to some of the main players on the British music scene today, including Nicola Benedetti, Martyn Brabbins, Evelyn Glennie, Darren Henley, Gavin Higgins, Sam Lee, James MacMillan, Stephen Maddock, Kadiatu Kanneh-Mason, Gillian Moore, Chi-chi Nwanoku, David Pickard and Judith Weir.

SAT 14:00 Record Review (m001xw8r)

Vaughan Williams's Symphony No 1 'A Sea Symphony' with David Owen Norris and Andrew McGregor

Andrew McGregor with the best new recordings of classical music.

Building a Library

David Owen Norris chooses his favourite version of Vaughan Williams's "A Sea Symphony".

A Sea Symphony was written for soprano, baritone, chorus and large orchestra in the early 1900s. It was his first symphony and remained the longest. The texts, from Walt Whitman's Leaves of Grass attracted Vaughan Williams for their humanist perspective. Ursula Vaughan Williams, in her biography of her husband, wrote: "...he was aware of the common aspirations of generations of ordinary men and women with whom he felt a deep, contemplative sympathy. And so there is in his work a fundamental tension between traditional concepts of belief and morality and a modern spiritual anguish which is also visionary."

SAT 16:00 Sound of Gaming (m001xw90)

Walking through virtual worlds

Take time to explore new worlds, enjoy stunning scenery and unearth mysteries. Elle Osili-Wood is in Discovery Mode with titles like Dear Esther, The Vanishing of Ethan Carter, and Abzu as she brings us games that forego shooting and racing for a more peaceful and contemplative experience.

SAT 17:00 This Classical Life (m001xw96)

Jess Gillam with... MILOŠ

Jess's guest this week is guitarist MILOŠ. One of the world's most successful classical guitarists, MILOŠ's musical life encompasses not only championing great guitar works, but also reimagining other music he loves onto the guitar and collaborating with musicians from all over the musical spectrum... including a saxophonist called Jess Gillam!

MILOŠ and Jess settle in for a listening party of the music they love, including a transcendental choral piece by Edward Bairstow, the full force of Dvorak's New World Symphony, Philip Glass played on the harp and a Bob Dylan classic reimagined by Chris Thile and Brad Mehldau.

Plus Jess plays some of the best music to take you into Saturday evening.

SAT 18:00 Opera on 3 (m001xw9d)

Handel's Semele

Semele is supposed to be marrying Athamas, but is infatuated by her lover, king of the gods Jupiter. To halt the plans, Jupiter turns himself into a giant eagle to carry Semele off to a mountaintop palace, guarded by dragons who never sleep. But Jupiter's wife Juno is furious and begins plotting her revenge. Handel's opera, based on Ovid's Metamorphoses, didn't go down well at its premiere, but its fabulous characters and varied music have made it a staple of the repertory. Georgia Mann presents this performance from the 2023 Munich Opera Festival, and she's joined by Suzanne Aspden from Oxford University to discuss Handel's score.

Presented by Georgia Mann.

Handel: Semele, opera in 3 acts, HWV.58

SAT 21:30 Music Planet (m001xw9l)

Ganavya in session

Lopa Kothari presents the best roots-based music from across the world. Our guest this week is the New York-born, Tamil Nadu-raised vocalist, composer and multi-instrumentalist Ganavya performing her ethereal songs in the studio. We also play tribute to American banjo pioneer Earl Scruggs as this week's Classic Artist.

SAT 22:30 New Music Show (m001xw9s)

An acre ringing, still

Tom Service presents the best in new music performance, including a BBC commission from composer Lisa Illean performed by the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra, two pieces from a recent concert by the Ligeti Quartet and Birmingham ElectroAcoustic Sound Theatre, and more from Another Sky, a festival showcasing experimental music from Southwest Asia and North Africa, curated by Sam Salem and staged at London's Cafe Oto. Plus we hear the inspirations of bassist and composer Ruth Goller, whose new album Skyllumina was released last month.

Tom McKinney presents Radio 3's classical breakfast show with music that captures the mood of Sunday morning. Email 3breakfast@bbc.co.uk

SUN 09:00 Sunday Morning (m001xw6y)

A perfect classical Sunday mix

Sarah Walker chooses three hours of attractive and uplifting music to complement your morning.

This morning, Lisa Batiashvili delights in a Beethoven violin concerto that's full of joy, and there's a playful Prelude and Toccata from Fanny Mendelssohn.

Sarah also chooses a recording by Sir Simon Rattle and the Berlin Philharmonic, who discover the gentle side of Brahms, while the music of Argentine composer Gustavo Santaolalla is brought to life with a transfixing performance from the Aquarelle Guitar Quartet.

Plus, the English Chamber Orchestra scale Rossini's silken ladder...

David Mitchell

David Mitchell is the author of nine time-traversing, genre-bending novels. His first, Ghostwritten, was published 25 years ago, and his third, Cloud Atlas, made his name around the world, and later became a Hollywood film. It follows six interlocking lives in an ambitious narrative that circles the globe and travels through time from 19th-century New Zealand to a post-apocalyptic future in Hawaii – and back again.

Closer to home, he drew on his own childhood in Worcestershire in his coming-of-age tale Black Swan Green, about a teenager attempting to overcome a stammer and negotiate playground hierarchies, all against the backdrop of the Falklands War.

His most recent novel, Utopia Avenue, charts the rise of an imaginary rock band in the late 1960s.

David's musical choices include Debussy, Rimsky-Korsakov, Sibelius and Hildegard von Bingen.

SUN 13:30 Music Map (m001xw74)

A journey to Debussy's Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune

A mythical pipe-playing faun enchanted by nymphs and naiads in the hazy heat of a warm summer afternoon is at the heart of Claude Debussy's groundbreaking Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune, which Pierre Boulez called 'the birth of modern music'.

In this sonic journey Sara Mohr-Pietsch maps the famous piece in a wider musical landscape - exploring it through a playlist of connected sound worlds, following pastoral song-lines and states of bliss, desire and reverie in music from Guillaume de Machaut and Alma Mahler, to Toru Takemitsu and Philip Glass, on route to the shimmering orchestral colours of Debussy's sultry symphonic poem.

The New Generation Baroque Ensemble scheme is run in partnership with the National Centre for Early Music in York and the Royal College of Music in London.

SUN 18:00 Words and Music (m001xw7c)

Luck and Chance

Do you feel lucky? On this edition of Words and Music, card games, poker and a day at the races are the themes explored in a selection of poetry, prose and music.

Anne-Marie Duff and Paterson Joseph treat us to characters from Dostoevsky's gamblers, Ian Fleming's James Bond plays for high stakes in Casino Royale and Fred D'Aguiar's poem, Black Swan, reimagines the thoughts of a race horse before the big day. We hear about the dark side of gambling from Charles Baudelaire as well as a high stakes poker game from the American author Colson Whitehead. Life is a card game in a poem by Hayley Agnew and we explore the high stakes of playing bridge in Edith Wharton's House of Mirth. Ian McMillan, presenter of the Verb reads from his memoir My Sand Life, My Pebble Life describing a bingo hall he visited on seaside holidays.

Musically we hear from Stravinsky's Jeu des Cartes and from Checkmate by Hans-Hubert Schönzeler. An apt addition is Prince Yeletsky's aria from Tchaikovsky's opera The Queen of Spades sung by Gevorg Hakobyan. Prokofiev's The Gambler also makes an appearance and we couldn't leave without a burst of Luck be a Lady from Guys and Dolls, the musical with music and lyrics by Frank Loesser and Joni Mitchell singing Lucky Girl. And on the theme of horses, you may recognise a famous piece of music, the William Tell Overture by Gioachino Rossini.

The Golden Age of the MGM Musical

Musician and broadcaster Neil Brand charts the rise and fall of the MGM movie musical. He celebrates the golden years of lavish movie musical production from the 1930s to the late 1950s, when MGM "all the stars in heaven" set the gold standard for music and dance excellence under the leadership of Louis B Mayer and the legendary Arthur Freed. Freed's music Unit employed the top musicians of the time - Conrad Salinger, Erich Wolfgang Korngold and Kurt Weill - many of whom had fled war-torn Europe and rising anti-Semitism.

From the early days of sound, MGM became synonymous with the spectacular, technicolour musical - the first studio to integrate music, plot and dance in film in an intelligent way. Over the years, with huge successes like Meet Me In St Louis, The Wizard of Oz and Singin' in the Rain, they became the 'Faberge Egg' of movie production. And these hits often coincided with moments of huge social and political turbulence, offering audiences fantasy and escape from the Great Depression, war and prejudice.

With archive and original interviews including Alicia Mayer - grand-niece of Louis B, film music historian Jon Burlingame and conductor John Wilson, Neil Brand explores this extraordinary period in film history.

"Beautiful pictures about beautiful people" was Louis B Mayer's mantra, "A nation's dreams set to music".

The Ballad of Johnny Longstaff

Award-winning north east folk band The Young'uns - Sean Cooney and David Eagle with Jack Rutter (for Michael Hughes) present their production of The Ballad of Johnny Longstaff, recorded in front of a live audience in their hometown of Stockton-on-Tees. It's the true story of one man's journey from unemployment, through the Hunger Marches of the 1930s, the mass trespass movement and the Battle of Cable Street, to fighting fascism in the Spanish Civil War. A touching and often hilarious musical adventure, its themes of war, hunger, poverty and displacement have a powerful resonance almost a hundred years on.

Johannes Brahms (1833-1897)

Flying the Nest

Kate Molleson looks at Brahms' love-hate relationship with his home city of Hamburg.

Johannes Brahms, the bearded and magisterial Romantic composer, could certainly do grandeur when required. But really, he was more interested in what music meant in ordinary life - how it can whisper, joke and console. He was a man who tried to find a place to belong all his life, wrote for the people closest to him, and that fondness is writ large in his music. All this week, Kate Molleson focuses on Brahms at home, revealing the subtle sides of this sometimes brawny composer - the tender heart behind the famous beard - through the music he wrote for himself and his friends to play.

Today, we begin in Brahms' birthplace, Hamburg, where he had a cramped and chaotic upbringing. Despite not being able to afford an instrument at home, he was sent out as a child to play piano in bars and brothels. But just beyond the confines of the city centre, headspace and opportunities await.

Celebrating Judith Weir

In her 70th birthday year, Judith Weir's colourful Missa del Cid is the crowning work of this BBC Singers' concert, a piece which brings to life the dramatic world of the legendary war lord Rodrigo Díaz de Vivar, re-named by Hollywood as El Cid. Díaz de Vivar's context is reflected in the jewel-like music of Pérotin, alongside choral works by Renaissance Spanish giants, Victoria and Guerrero. As part of the Kings Place 'Scotland Unwrapped' season, the programme contains gems by Weir's fellow Scots composers, Sir James Macmillan and Electra Perivolaris.

Recorded on 9th February 2024 at Kings Place, London, and presented by Ian Skelly.

MON 21:45 The Essay (m001xwvx)

Watching from the Wings

08/04/2024

Preparation for a performance on stage goes beyond just memorising lines, learning blocking and hoping it will be alright on the night. A diligent actor studies the history of the period of the play, learns about the intentions of the playwright, and absorbs from older colleagues knowledge of how the play has been done in the past.

In his less than stellar career as an actor, Michael Goldfarb went through this process many times. He recalls meeting John Gielgud at the theatre door and understudying in a play where a huge Styrofoam mountain was the star of the show.

In this essay: theatrical superstition says you shouldn't mention the play Macbeth, by name. But how else to speak of the play on which Michael finally got his equity card?

More than Friends

Kate Molleson tells the story of Brahms's all-consuming friendship with the Schumanns.

Johannes Brahms, the bearded and magisterial Romantic composer, could certainly do grandeur when required. Today, we follow Brahms on an autumnal pilgrimage that sets his life spinning. Aimless and restless, he finds anchoring and inspiration in his new best friends, the Schumanns. Little does he know that his next few years will be overturned by tragedy, dramas and a heart-wrenching dilemma...

Time Machine: Sean Shibe and Sinfonia Cymru

Sinfonia Cymru team up with innovative soloist Sean Shibe in an energy-packed programme celebrating the versatility and future of the guitar, with music by living composers from the UK and USA.

Technology and momentum are a common thread throughout this evening's pieces, from the iconic minimalism of Steve Reich to Julia Wolfe's Reeling - an infectious work for ensemble and tape. A surreal jigsaw of found sound interacts with string quartet in Pamela Z's Ethel Dreams of Temporal Disturbances. A futuristic New York is conjured up in Change by Judd Greenstein and Laura Snowden's Into the Light explores the freedom and danger of bird migrations. Sinfonia Cymru perform selections from two evocative film scores by Philip Glass and Jonny Greenwood. And the concert culminates with the broadcast premiere of Chorus in Alto, a new concerto written especially for Sean Shibe by Welsh composer David John Roche - an expressive and technical showcase spanning styles from metal to classical, which he describes as his love letter to the guitar.

Recorded on 25th February 2024 at the Royal Welsh College of Music and Drama in Cardiff.

Presented by Linton Stephens.

Johannes Brahms (1833-1897)

Bachelor Pad

Kate Molleson follows Brahms as he puts down roots in Vienna.

Johannes Brahms, the bearded and magisterial Romantic composer, could certainly do grandeur when required. But really, he was more interested in what music meant in ordinary life – how it can whisper, joke and console. He was a man who tried to find a place to belong all his life, wrote for the people closest to him, and that fondness is writ large in his music. All this week, Kate Molleson focuses on Brahms at home, revealing the subtle sides of this sometimes brawny composer – the tender heart behind the famous beard – through the music he wrote for himself and his friends to play.

Today, we join Brahms in Vienna, the city that he would call home for most of his adult life. Arriving with a suitcase full of impostor syndrome, he has to make a name for himself in the musical soirees of Viennese culture vultures. Brahms quickly finds a place to hang his hat and sets about creating one of his most heartfelt and ambitious works to date .

The Elias String Quartet play music by Felix and Fanny Mendelssohn

The acclaimed Elias Quartet play quartets by the Mendelssohn siblings, recorded live at Wigmore Hall on Sunday.

As a composer, until near the end of the 20th century, Fanny was condescendingly regarded as a dilettante dabbler, an inconsequential footnote in the biography of her famous brother. But confined by circumstances and society's expectations to write almost always in small intimate forms – piano miniatures and songs – for domestic performance, Fanny nonetheless produced some larger scale works, including her String Quartet in E flat. Her brother disapproved of what he regarded as its undisciplined approach to form but Fanny never changed it, and it's remarkable and memorable music.

Dark, full of emotional tension and aguish, Felix's final String Quartet was written in the aftermath of his beloved sister's death in May, 1847. Later that same year, Felix, too, was dead.

Felix's Four Pieces for String Quartet, Op. 81 is an attractive but disparate collection of four posthumously published pieces cobbled together by his publisher. The earliest, an ingeniously wrought fugue, dates from his teenage years and the Capriccio from 1843 seems to prefigure the Violin Concerto of the following year. The remaining two pieces, from the final year of Felix's life, might have been planned for an uncompleted string quartet: a charming theme and variations and a prime example of a scurrying, effervescent Mendelssohnian Scherzo.

Presented by Ian Skelly.

Watching from the Wings

10/04/2024

Preparation for a performance on stage goes beyond just memorising lines, learning blocking and hoping it will be alright on the night. A diligent actor studies the history of the period of the play, learns about the intentions of the playwright, and absorbs from older colleagues knowledge of how the play has been done in the past.

In his less than stellar career as an actor, Michael Goldfarb went through this process many times.

In this episode, it's the story of The Count of Monte Cristo, as performed by James O'Neill, father of playwright Eugene O'Neill. It was the play that made him rich and his family miserable, as depicted in Long Day's Journey Into Night. Nearly fifty years ago, it was revived by the Jean Cocteau Repertory Theatre, located on the Bowery in New York. The Cocteau was the only rotating rep theatre in New York and Michael Goldfarb was part of the company.

Homes from Home

Kate Molleson joins Brahms at some of his most beloved and inspiring holidays spots.

Johannes Brahms, the bearded and magisterial Romantic composer, could certainly do grandeur when required. But really, he was more interested in what music meant in ordinary life - how it can whisper, joke and console. Today, we join Brahms on holiday. Though he loved Vienna, he also loved getting away from the city, ideally where he could see woods and climb mountains. At Ischl in Austria, and Thun in Switzerland, we hear about his vacation routines, and how he injected this fresh air into his music, composing much of his best chamber music there.

Enigma Variations

The BBC National Orchestra of Wales are joined once more by much-loved conductor Jac van Steen for a stunning British programme that begins in Wales before culminating in Edward Elgar's celebrated Enigma Variations. The programme opens with a work that is a firm favourite of the Orchestra, Sea Sketches by Grace Williams; an evocation of the sea in all its incarnations, by a composer who was living in London but yearning for the Glamorgan coast she was soon to move back to. The orchestra will then be joined by super-star harpist, Catrin Finch, to play the Harp Concerto of Williams Mathias. Written for Osian Ellis, the concerto is masterfully scored to enable the harp to be heard, and is inspired by the Welsh Landscape of poet R S Thomas. Finally, after the interval, comes one of the most enduring pieces of English music — Elgar's tribute to his friends, alongside his very particular enigma, in his Variations on an Original Theme.

FRI 16:00 Composer of the Week (m001xvzv)
Johannes Brahms (1833-1897)

Creature Comforts

Kate Molleson explores Brahms's final decade, when he most valued his friends.

Johannes Brahms, the bearded and magisterial Romantic composer, could certainly do grandeur when required. But really, he was more interested in what music meant in ordinary life - how it can whisper, joke and console. He was a man who tried to find a place to belong all his life, wrote for the people closest to him, and that fondness is writ large in his music. All this week, Kate Molleson focuses on Brahms at home, revealing the subtle sides of this sometimes brawny composer - the tender heart behind the famous beard - through the music he wrote for himself and his friends to play.

Today, in the final years of Brahms life, he values his creature comforts more than ever. He also recognises the value of those closest to him, from his housekeeper Frau Truxa, to Clara Schumann and the Fellingings. He begins to repair old relationships with musical olive branches, and writes some of his most interior music for and about his friends. It's they who rally round him in the coda of his life.

FRI 21:45 The Essay (m001xw07)
Watching from the Wings

12/04/2024

During his less than stellar acting career Michael Goldfarb spent a lot of time watching from the wings waiting to go on for his single scene. In this series, he talks about the plays he appeared in, their histories, and the lives of the actors who performed them.

In this essay, he's understudying in K2: a play about two climbers trapped on an ice ledge, having fallen on their way down from the summit of the mountain. It wasn't a very good play but had an amazing set with the capacity for near cinematic feats of climbing and falling.

The play made it to Broadway for a brief Tony-winning run and Michael talks about performing in a show where a huge Styrofoam mountain was the star and the jostling for supremacy among actors, directors and set designers.

FRI 22:00 Late Junction (m001xw10)

Susie Ibarra and Adrian Zalten in session

Verity Sharp presents the fruits of our latest session between Filipino percussionist Susie Ibarra and Polish organist Adrian Zalten. Driven by their shared interest in the power of resonance across various locations, the two musicians came together to record their first ever session inside the Neo-Baroque church of St. Jakobus in Mannheim, Germany.

Ibarra's lines of musical enquiry concern themselves with cultural and environmental preservation. Her recent book Rhythm in Nature: An Ecology of Rhythm revolves around acoustic ecology focused on climate and eco-friendly and sustainable global music practices. She is also a champion of the indigenous and traditional music cultures of the North and South Philippine islands. Zalten started playing the electric organ as a child, following his family's migration from Poland to Germany. A move to the USA allowed him to deepen his musical training in gospel and jazz, which are now embedded in his practice as a pianist and organist.

Elsewhere in the show: Rbia Harsha Cinta's dark hymns for endangered seaweed species; Norwegian spiritual free jazz that speaks out against war courtesy of Amalie Dahl's Dafnie band; and a soulful ballad about a tree by New Orleans-based singer-songwriter Leyla McCalla.
