Prom 29: Jonathan Scott – Organ Recital

Live at the BBC Proms: Jonathan Scott – Organ Recital. Music by Wagner, Bach, Chaminade, Jules Grison, Charles Ives and Tchaikovsky.

Presented by Sarah Walker, live from the Royal Albert Hall, London.

Richard Wagner (arr. Lemare): Tannhäuser Overture
Johann Sebastian Bach: Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, BWV 542

Cécile Chaminade (arr. J. Scott): Six Concert Études, Op. 35 – Autumn

Jules Grison: Toccata in F major

Charles Ives: Variations on 'America'

Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky (arr. J. Scott): Overture '1812'

Jonathan Scott (organ)

Jonathan Scott tames the mighty mechanical beast that is the Royal Albert Hall organ for this mid-morning recital that promises to show everything the 9,999-pipe instrument can do – bells and whistles included. This Prom journeys from supersized Bach and Edwin Lemare's spectacular arrangement of Wagner's Tannhäuser overture to the eccentricity of Charles Ives and the peaceful rapture of Scott's own arrangement of Cécilie Chaminade's 'Autumn'. Another of the organist's own arrangements, that of Tchaikovsky's '1812' Overture, will almost literally pull out all the stops, and quite possibly bring the house down.

SAT 12:30 New Generation Artists (m0021r10)
Piazzolla's Grand Tango from cellist Santiago Cañon-Valencia

Current Radio 3 New Generation Artists in music by Astor Piazzolla, Mozart and Dilys Elwyn-Edwards.

SAT 16:00 Sound of Cinema (m0021r16)
An interview with visionary filmmaker and director M. Night Shyamalan

This special episode of Sound of Cinema features an exclusive interview with the visionary filmmaker M. Night Shyamalan, known for his masterful blend of suspense, psychological drama, and supernatural elements in films like The Sixth Sense, Unbreakable, Signs, and Split.

His collaboration with composers like James Newton Howard has resulted in some of the most memorable film scores of recent decades, making his insights particularly valuable in the context of Sound of Cinema.

Hosted by Matthew Sweet, the programme dives into the unique role that music plays in Shyamalan's films, exploring how scores have been integral in shaping the eerie atmospheres and emotional depth for which his work is renowned.

Whether you're a devoted fan of Shyamalan's work or simply curious about the intersection of music and film, this episode promises to be a fascinating listen.

Mahler: Symphony No 1 in D major

The National Youth Orchestra
 Musicians from NYO Inspire
 Alexandre Bloch (conductor)
 *Tess Jackson (conductor)

Gustav Mahler poured his life into his symphonies, right from the very beginning. His Symphony No. 1 takes us through the wonder of nature and the pain of anguish. Simple tunes and folksy rhythms drive the work from despair to hope to blazing triumph. Performing the symphony is The National Youth Orchestra, comprising some of Britain's most talented young players. They also bring with them Missy Mazzoli's reflection on time, Orpheus Undone, Wagner's most storm-tossed overture and a new work by the orchestra's Resident Artist Dani Howard, written in celebration of the NYO Inspire scheme.

Isabel Wilkerson

The Pulitzer Prize-winning writer Isabel Wilkerson was born in Washington DC. Her parents moved there in the Great Migration - when six million African Americans left the rural south to escape poor economic conditions and discrimination. Isabel later wrote about this exodus in her bestselling and widely acclaimed book The Warmth of Other Suns, the product of 15 years of research and more than 1200 interviews.

She started out in newspapers as a reporter and feature writer, and in 1994 she became the first woman of African-American heritage to win the Pulitzer Prize for journalism, when she was Chicago bureau chief of the New York Times. More recently she published her second book Caste: the Origins of our Discontents, an examination of racial stratification. The New York Times described it as the "keynote nonfiction book of the American century thus far" and it also won praise from President Obama.

Isabel's choices include works by Camille Saint-Saëns, John Coltrane, Philip Glass and Georg Philipp Telemann.

INTERVAL (at approx. 1545): Michael Longley's Life of Poetry In conversation with presenter Olivia O'Leary, Belfast poet Michael Longley, who celebrated his 85th birthday on 27th July 2024, looks back on a life of poetry. He talks about his home town of Belfast, his love of jazz, the group of poets that emerged from Northern Ireland in the 1960s, writing about the Troubles, and a lifetime of poetry. And he reads four poems from his collection Ash Keys: New Selected Poems (Cape Poetry), published to mark his 85th birthday: Elegy for Fats Waller, The Ice-cream Man, Ceasefire and Age. He also reads Bookshops from his collection Angel Hill.

You can hear the whole, five-part series of this conversation in Radio 3's The Essay:

PROM: PART 2

Gabriel Fauré

La bonne chanson

Step into fin de siècle Paris, where the poet Verlaine, the painter Monet and the composers Fauré and Debussy would meet at regular soirées. From Verlaine, Fauré took nine poems to set as his exquisite cycle La bonne chanson – a serene depiction of the love Fauré was currently experiencing for Debussy's future wife. Debussy's own String Quartet was finished while Fauré's work was still in progress, and proved one of the composer's first ventures into his new, luxurious musical world of light, sensuality and fragile beauty. The concert opens with a work by Augusta Holmès, one of the many 19th-century French women composers now being rediscovered. Her intimate song cycle Les heures contemplates the 'hours' of the day.

SUN 18:00 The Early Music Show (m0021pr4)

Gold

In honour of the Paris Olympics, Hannah French explores medieval, Renaissance and Baroque music associated with gold, silver and bronze across three episodes of The Early Music Show.

As the Games draw to a close, Hannah reaches the top spot on the podium, focusing on gold and its allure over composers and musicians across the centuries. Golden apples, the golden fleece, golden tresses, the golden ratio: gold glitters in musical treasures from the Tudor court in England to the opera stages of Baroque Venice.

SUN 19:00 Between the Ears (m001bz61)

California Burning

"Out in the forest the ember waits in its cigarette to make its black mark on the world, not content to ravage a few rolled tobacco leaves. It wants to show it can murder more trees than the last bitter fire."

Kim Addonizio - Exit Opera

When wildfires turned the sky over San Francisco orange, poet Kim Addonizio began to fear for the future of the California she loves. In the footsteps of Jack Kerouac, who spent a season as a fire lookout, she heads for the National Sequoia Forest to spend a night in a fire lookout tower high above the tree-line.

"I came to a point when I needed solitude, and just stop the machine of thinking and living. They say in ancient scriptures wisdom can be only obtained from solitude."

Jack Kerouac - Desolation Angels

There used to be over 10,000 lookouts scattered across the USA, but in the 1960s and 70s they began to fall out of use. Today they are coming back into use as the fire service needs every tool in their toolbox - and despite its toughness, it is a job often done by women, straining their experienced eyes into a network of early warning systems.

Kim learns the skills of a fire lookout from Mich Michigian and Kathryn Allison, who have watched fires rage and lightning explode from the relative safety of a tiny lookout tower, perched on a gigantic granite outcrop called Buck Rock. Scanning the horizon every 15 minutes, the job is to report 'smokes' - and when the lightning gets too close, to run inside and sit on the 'lightning stool' until the storm passes.

Jack Kerouac was less interested in fire, and more into Buddhism. In search of enlightenment, he headed to the Cascade Mountains, and the look-out on Desolation Peak. Poet Neeli Cherkovski reveals how after his initial delight, and without the crutch of drugs and liquor, he found the isolation tormenting.

"Desolation adventure finds me finding at the bottom of myself abysmal nothingness - worse than that, no illusion even - my mind's in rags."

Inspired by these fire watchers, Kim Addonizio considers an inferno-like future of mega-fires, even giga-fires, whilst keeping an eye out for lightning strikes, fireworks, anything that could spark a fire, high in her lookout tower above the forest.

Prom 31: Anne-Sophie Mutter plays Brahms

Live at the BBC Proms: Daniel Barenboim conducts the West-Eastern Divan Orchestra in Schubert's Symphony No. 9 and Anne-Sophie Mutter plays Brahms's Violin Concerto.

Presented by Ian Skelly, live from the Royal Albert Hall, London.

Brahms: Violin Concerto in D major

c. 8.20 pm

INTERVAL: Mariam Said joins presenter Ian Skelly to describe her late husband's role in co-founding the West-Eastern Divan Orchestra, and discuss how the momentum of the initiative led to the inauguration of the Barenboim-Said Akademie in Berlin. We hear, too, Daniel Barenboim's recollections about the original impetus behind the Orchestra's launch, plus current members of the ensemble share how the ideals enshrined in the orchestra's DNA remain more relevant than ever.

c.8.50pm

Schubert: Symphony No. 9 in C major, 'Great'

Anne-Sophie Mutter (violin)
 West-Eastern Divan Orchestra
 Daniel Barenboim (conductor)

In 1999, young Arab and Israeli musicians came together for the groundbreaking creative and social experiment that was the West-Eastern Divan Orchestra. A quarter of a century later, the ideals of listening, respect and mutual understanding enshrined in this ensemble are underlined like never before. For this timely Prom, the orchestra and its co-founder Daniel Barenboim bring with them Brahms's consolatory Violin Concerto featuring soloist Anne-Sophie Mutter and the monolithic, momentum-fuelled symphony by Schubert that deservedly acquired the nickname 'Great'.

Chamber music from Edinburgh and the Proms

Elizabeth Alker introduces chamber music recorded exclusively for the programme at this year's Edinburgh International Festival and from the BBC Proms. The young French pianist Alexandre Kantorow has been described as 'Liszt reincarnated' and this summer he makes his Edinburgh International Festival debut. After becoming the first French pianist to win Gold at the Tchaikovsky Competition aged 22, Kantorow has gone on to record eight albums of music by Liszt, Saint Saens, Brahms and Rachmaninov. He brings that love of Romantic repertoire to his recital at the Queen's Hall.

Also in today's programme, the BBC Philharmonic Orchestra at this year's Proms, in a programme that includes Sarah Gibson's 'warp & weft', inspired by the work of Canadian artist Miriam Schapiro.

Fryderyk Chopin (1810-1849)

An Introduction from Liszt

Donald Macleod examines Liszt's role in Chopin's first meetings with the novelist George Sand, and explores how their relationship almost led to the composer being killed.

Early in 1837, Franz Liszt introduced Chopin to a woman who would have a profound influence on his life. Her name was George Sand and Chopin's relationship with the novelist would go on to stretch for almost a decade and prove to be the longest romantic bond of the composer's life, and a defining creative relationship for both of them. Over the course of this week, Donald Macleod explores the intertwined lives of these two key figures in French romantic-era life.

In Monday's episode, Donald examines Liszt's role in Chopin's first meetings with George Sand. Initially, Chopin was repulsed by the notorious cigar-smoking, trouser-wearing novelist, but the pair eventually formed a romantic relationship which would last for nine years. Donald also explores how the beginning of their relationship sparked an incident which almost led to the composer being killed.

Jess Gillam (saxophone)
BBC National Orchestra of Wales
Nil Venditti (conductor)

With his Symphony No. 7 Beethoven permanently realigned Western music's fundamental relationship with rhythm. In the process he created some of the most compelling music of his age. Young Italian-Turkish conductor Nil Venditti places this momentous symphonic dance alongside music by a composer from the generation after Beethoven, one who picked up the master's baton and ran with it: Louise Farrenc. The first half spotlights two Welsh composers born less than 40 years apart. Grace Williams's jaunty Concert Overture, written in her mid-twenties, came 'highly recommended' after its entry in a Daily Telegraph competition in 1932-3. And Sir Karl Jenkins, one of the most popular composers of our time, wrote his Stravaganza especially for tonight's soloist, Jess Gillam.

Chamber music from Edinburgh and great heights reached at the Proms

Elizabeth Alker introduces exclusive recordings made at some of this year's summer music festivals. Award-winning French guitarist Raphael Feuillatre makes his Edinburgh International Festival debut with an exploration of Baroque music. It's a particular interest of his. Today he plays his own arrangement of music by JS Bach, alongside works by Scarlatti, Francois Couperin and Jacques Duphy. Plus the Leonore Piano Trio play a work admired and performed by Johannes Brahms, Clara Schumann's Piano Trio.

From this year's BBC Proms the BBC Symphony Orchestra and Sakari Oramo present a programme which includes Richard Strauss's epic musical depiction of a journey into the Alps - An Alpine Symphony - inspired by a climbing trip the composer made as a young teen.

From the Edinburgh International Festival, introduced by Stephen Broad:

Hallucinations and Rainstorms

Donald Macleod explores Chopin and Sand's trip to Majorca on holiday, which didn't turn out to be as idyllic as they had both hoped.

Early in 1837, Franz Liszt introduced Chopin to a woman who would have a profound influence on his life. Her name was George Sand and Chopin's relationship with the novelist would go on to stretch for almost a decade and prove to be the longest romantic bond of the composer's life, and a defining creative relationship for both of them. Over the course of this week, Donald Macleod explores the intertwined lives of these two key figures in French romantic-era life.

At the end of 1838, Chopin and Sand spent three months in Majorca, as a kind of honeymoon, to celebrate the start of their relationship. In Tuesday's programme, Donald explores this trip, which bore musical dividends, but eventually proved to be a disaster, and not the idyllic paradise that they had both hoped for.

Prom 33: Titans of British Music

Live at the BBC Proms: the BBC Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Martyn Brabbins, performs Elgar, Vaughan Williams's London Symphony, and Stanford Songs with Christopher Maltman.

Presented by Penny Gore, live from the Royal Albert Hall, London

Edward Elgar: Overture 'Cockaigne (In London Town)'
 Gustav Holst: Hammersmith
 Charles Villiers Stanford: Songs of Faith Op.97
 - 'To the Soul'
 - 'Tears'
 - 'Joy, shipmate, joy!'
 Stanford: 'The Fairy Lough'

c. 8.15pm

INTERVAL: Penny Gore's guest is the historian and journalist Simon Heffer whose books include The Age of Decadence: Britain 1880 to 1914 and Sing As We Go: Britain Between the Wars. For Radio 3 he has presented series and documentaries about British classical music.

c. 8.35pm

Ralph Vaughan Williams: A London Symphony (Symphony No.2)

Christopher Maltman (baritone)
 BBC Symphony Orchestra
 Martyn Brabbins (conductor)

From Westminster Bridge and the bells of Big Ben to Bloomsbury Square, in his A London Symphony Vaughan Williams depicts the English capital, where horses still trotted through the streets and the countryside could be glimpsed from Marble Arch. Elgar's 'stout and steaky' picture-postcard scenes of London life join anniversary composer Holst's Hammersmith, commissioned for the BBC Military Band, in saluting the city. Vaughan Williams's teacher Stanford (who died 100 years ago) completes the programme, with a selection of reflective songs performed by leading British baritone Christopher Maltman.

Chamber music from Edinburgh and Welsh music at the Proms

Elizabeth Alker presents an afternoon of great music-making including chamber music from this year's Edinburgh

International Festival and an appearance by the BBC National Orchestra of Wales at the BBC Proms with a programme with a strong Welsh flavour.

Chamber music from Edinburgh features horn player Stefan
Dohr who has been described as the 'king of his instrument'.
When he's not performing as Principal Horn for the Berlin Philharmonic he's a keen chamber musician and for his Edinburgh International Festival recital at the Queen's Hall he joins friends, violinist Caroline Widmann and pianist Dénes Várjon. Together they play Romantic music by Brahms and Beethoven, showcasing the breath of the horn's virtuoso capabilities.

Ilan Volkov and friends celebrate milestones from the past 100 years of American jazz, starting with a sequence honouring the 'Duke'. Mary Lou Williams's Zodiac Suite from 1945 romps between boogie-woogie and dissonance in its response to astrological signs. The evening culminates in the work of a boundary-crossing visionary. From the south side of Chicago, multi-instrumentalist and self-styled 'trans-idiomatic composer' Anthony Braxton has established himself as a composer whose imagination recognises no bounds.

Exclusive recordings from summer music festivals

Elizabeth Alker introduces an afternoon of great music making, including British Music from the BBC Symphony Orchestra and Martyn Brabbins at the Proms and chamber music from Scotland from this year's Edinburgh International Festival.

Guitarist Raphael Feuillatre evokes the sound of Spain with music by Albeniz and Tarrega, and pianist Alexandre Kantorow plays Liszt's musical impression of Switzerland. But to begin today's selection from the Queen's Hall in Edinburgh, violinist Carolin Widmann and pianist Dénes Várjon perform the second of Beethoven's opus 30 violin sonatas, a tempestuous work written in his early thirties.

From the Edinburgh Festival, introduced by Stephen Broad:

Ludwig van Beethoven
Violin Sonata No 7 Op. 30 No. 2 in C minor
Carolin Widmann (violin)
Dénes Várjon (piano)

Isaac Albeniz

FRI 16:00 Composer of the Week (m001ff1k)

Fryderyk Chopin (1810-1849)

The End of the Affair

In Friday's programme, Donald explores how Chopin's relationship with George Sand came to a fractious end.

Early in 1837, Franz Liszt introduced Chopin to a woman who would have a profound influence on his life. Her name was George Sand and Chopin's relationship with the novelist would go on to stretch for almost a decade and prove to be the longest romantic bond of the composer's life, and a defining creative relationship for both of them. Over the course of this week, Donald Macleod explores the intertwined lives of these two key figures in French romantic-era life.

Donald Macleod explores how Chopin's romantic relationship with George Sand, and one of the most productive creative relationships in the romantic world, broke down and came to a fractious end, with Sand making the details of their problems public in a thinly veiled novel.

Felix Mendelssohn: A Midsummer Night's Dream - incidental music

Anthony McGill (clarinet)

Moyo Akandé (actor)

Ewan Black (actor)

NYCOS Chamber Choir

BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra

Gemma New (conductor)

In the summer of 1826 Felix Mendelssohn stumbled upon a German translation of A Midsummer Night's Dream made by August Wilhelm Schlegel. Spellbound, the 17-year-old composer wrote an orchestral overture for the play and, another 17 years later, augmented it with yet more scene-setting music - the most enchanting and characterful he would write. Gemma New joins the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra for Mendelssohn's musical retelling of Shakespeare's story performed with extracts from the play for dramatic context - after equally colourful musical storytelling from forgotten French late-Romantic composer Mel Bonis and the heavenly sounds of Mozart's Clarinet Concerto.

FRI 22:00 Late Junction (m0021q1s)

Shortwave radio, gas station music and shakuhachi weirdness

Verity Sharp presents a mind-expanding selection of adventurous music, including bleeps and pips from undecoded shortwave radio messages captured by Shropshire Number Stations, aka Rob Dunsford and Eric Loveland Heath, and new beats inspired by the wind from Photay's forthcoming album.

Elsewhere in the show, a dystopian piece from --- -- ____, a recent project from Seth Graham, More Eaze, and Recovery Girl, inspired by American gas stations, racetracks and county fairs; plus geometric improvisations from Berlin's Thuluth, the trio of Magda Mayas, Ute Wassermann and Raed Yassin who find new sounds through playing with objects, instruments and the human voice.

There's time, too, for a warped hymn to curiosity taken from a live session by Betamax Vs. Bell & Wong, who offer liberatory weirdness on shakuhachi, drums and tape machines.
