Tom with composer Steve Reich

Tom Service with guests, stories and the perfect classical soundtrack to start the weekend!

On today's show, Tom talks to Steve Reich, one of the greatest living composers about his life and music. Called "the most original musical thinker of our time" (The New Yorker), works like Different Trains, Music for 18 Musicians and It's Gonna Rain changed the classical musical landscape forever. As Steve reissues his life's work on a 27 disc box set he chats to Tom about his music, how he hears his work now and what's still to come in an iconic career spanning 6 decades.

Plus the continuation of BBC Radio 3's 25 for 25: Sounds of the Century. This week, New Jersey based Irish composer Donnacha Dennehy chats to Tom about the 'Miracle on the Hudson', when pilot Chesley 'Sully' Sullenberger safely landed US Airways Flight 1549 on the Hudson River, the event that inspired his piece Hard Landing.

Jools's musical selection for a Saturday lunchtime

In a new show for Saturday lunchtimes, Jools shares his lifelong passion for classical music, and the beautiful connections with jazz and blues. With fascinating guests each week, who bring their own favourite music and occasionally perform live in Jools's studio.

Today, Jools's choices include music by Holst, Shostakovich and Lully, with performances by Sister Ernestine Washington and soprano Bidu Sayao. His guest is the folk singer and fiddler Eliza Carthy who shares music she loves by Purcell, Handel and Rimsky-Korsakov, and talks about starting out on the fiddle and why dancing the hornpipe should be wild and rhythmic as opposed to dainty and delicate.

Jake Heggie's Moby-Dick

Live from the New York Met: Jake Heggie's operatic version of Herman Melville's epic novel, with Brandon Jovanovich as the implacable Captain Ahab. Karen Kamensek conducts.

The whaling ship Paquod has been sailing for a week, but none of the crew have seen the captain, Ahab, since they left shore. When he does emerge he tells them of Moby-Dick, the white whale that took off one of his legs. This is the real reason they're sailing - to hunt down this one whale and destroy it, and nothing will stand in his way.

Presented from the Met by Debra Lew Harder with commentator Ira Siff.

Boulez at 100: Re-imagined

Kate Molleson and Tom Service present a live, Boulez-themed edition of the show from the BBC's Maida Vale studios in London. Performing specially commissioned music tonight in front of a studio audience are Caoutchouc and Plus-Minus Ensemble. Caoutchouc is a duo comprising Jessie Marino and Serge Vuille, an uncatagorisable mix of percussion, fiddle, spoken word and electronics, and tonight they explore texts by and about Pierre Boulez. Plus-Minus Ensemble perform two pieces by Boulez, his Derive I for six instruments, and the lesser known, rarely performed Structures I for two pianos. Plus-Minus also bring two brand new pieces, both "re-imaginings" of older works: Alex Hills's response to Ruth Crawford Seeger's String Quartet, and Natacha Diels's take on Mexican composer Julián Carrillo's Preludio a Colón. Both works are co-commissioned by BBC Radio 3 and Plus-Minus Ensemble. Also tonight, Nothing Truly Ever Ends, a new work by British composer Charlotte Bray, commissioned and performed by Ensemble intercontemporain at the Paris Philharmonie in December; plus the first of this weekend's postcards from Paris: the 98 year old Betsy Jolas tells Kate about her first ever meeting with Boulez.

Sarah Walker with three hours of classical music celebrating the legacy of renowned French composer and conductor Pierre Boulez.

Today, Sarah looks at Pierre Boulez's remarkable impact as a conductor, featuring a symphony by Mahler, a Shakespeare-inspired dance by Berlioz, a sparkling highlight from Stravinsky's Firebird, and one of Ravel's most beloved works. Sarah also explores musicians who crossed paths with Boulez, showcasing performances from pianist Yvonne Loriod and her sister, ondes martenot player Jeanne Loriod, alongside a choral gem by Messiaen, and oboist Heinz Holliger performing a concerto by Marcello.

Plus, exclusive interviews with Kate Molleson, who travelled to Paris to uncover the story of Marigny Theatre, learn about the curious instrument that is the ondes martenot, and hear how pianist Jean-Efflam Bouvazet approaches Boulez's music...

Boulez at 100: Gerard McBurney

As part of Radio 3's Boulez at 100 day celebrating the centenary of composer and conductor Pierre Boulez, Michael Berkeley's guest is someone who knew Boulez well - composer and musicologist Gerard McBurney. McBurney is most closely associated with the music of Russian composers - particularly Shostakovich - as a result of having lived and studied in Russia in the 1980s. Notable Shostakovich scores he has rescued from oblivion with completions and orchestrations include the music-hall show Hypothetically Murdered and the opera Orango. He talks to Michael about life in Russia in the years immediately before the collapse of the Soviet Union.

His many other musical projects have included working on the Chicago Symphony Orchestra's long-running dramatized discovery series Beyond the Score, on many of which he collaborated with Boulez - about whom McBurney has first-hand insightful stories to relate.

Boulez at 100: Total Immersion - The Second Piano Sonata

Live from London's Milton Court, musicians from Guildhall School of Music & Drama perform music by Pierre Boulez as Radio 3 pays tribute to the influential composer and conductor.

Boulez's shattering Second Piano Sonata, and two extraordinary works for solo clarinet, performed by the talented musicians of the Guildhall School and introduced by BBC Radio 3's Kate Molleson. Pierre Boulez made art without compromise. 'History as it is made by great composers is not a history of conservation, but of destruction - even while cherishing what is destroyed', he wrote, and in his explosive Second Piano Sonata of 1947-8 he set out to blast a path forward through the ruins of the western tradition. Few experiences in 20th century piano music are more visceral - or more bracing. And we'll hear Boulez explore the clarinet and the amazing things it can do in Domaines (1961) and Dialogue de l'ombre double for clarinet and tape (1985) - written 24 years later. Don't be misled: this is music that's small only in the physical sense; a thrilling reminder that as well as being a radical chief conductor of the BBC Symphony Orchestra, Boulez was a creator who split the musical atom - and revelled in the energy it released.

Tom Service celebrates some of the key works from the Boulez catalogue, in a wide-ranging sequence of music spanning several decades, including the orchestral Notations (1978/1984/1997) based on his earlier set of pieces for piano; an excerpt from Repons (1981-84) in which Boulez fused instrumental sounds with electronics developed at the composer's IRCAM research centre in Paris; we hear Le Soleil des eaux (1947-8/1958), an early example of his writing for voice and orchestra and interest in the poetry of René Char; Messagesquise (1976) for solo cello and six cellos in a live recording made by Ensemble intercontemporain at the Paris Philharmonie in December; an excerpt from his iconic and influential Le Marteau sans maître (1955/1957); and finally, a complete broadcast of ...explosante fixe... (1973/1993), a work which evolved and took on many different forms over the years, heard here in the final version for solo MIDI-flute with live electronics, two "shadow flutes" and ensemble.

Along the way we'll hear from two of Boulez's biographers: Caroline Potter whose book Organised Delirium looks at the influence of the surrealists on Boulez's early work, and Christian Merlin on Boulez's early interest in non-Western music, recorded in conversation with Kate Molleson at the Musée de l'Homme - one of her postcards from Paris featured throughout Radio 3's Boulez at 100.

Afterwords: Pierre Boulez at 100

The musician Pierre Boulez - one of the dominant composers of the 20th century and a deeply respected conductor - is perhaps most widely known for his iconoclastic utterances, suggesting we 'blow the opera houses up' and that 'all art of the past must be destroyed'.

In the week of what would have been his 100th birthday, figures who were close to him - the composer George Benjamin and the pianist Mitsuko Uchida - and others who have been touched by his thinking - Errollyn Wallen, Master of the King's Music, and Gillian Moore, former Director of Music at the Southbank Centre in London - engage with Boulez's creativity, his personality (an uncompromising, faultlessly charming manner) and his lasting legacy.

Boulez at 100: Total Immersion - Pli Selon Pli

Introduced by Kate Molleson. Live from the Barbican in London, the BBC Symphony Orchestra, BBC Singers, pianist Tamara Stefanovich and soprano Anna Dennis perform landmark works by Pierre Boulez.

The BBC Symphony Orchestra's Total Immersion day-long deep-dive into the life and work of Pierre Boulez reaches a truly monumental climax. Across an evening that spans his whole creative career, pianist Tamara Stefanovich plays the brilliant Notations and Incises, and the BBC Singers join the BBC SO to perform the extraordinary, playful Cummings ist der Dichter.

And then soprano Anna Dennis joins an expanded BBC Symphony Orchestra for a rare complete performance of Boulez's single largest work, his five-movement epic masterpiece, Pli selon Pli. Part Mallarmé song cycle, part self-portrait and part era-defining manifesto for the possibilities of musical modernism, every performance is a major occasion. Boulez himself recorded it with the BBC Symphony Orchestra, making it the perfect way for the orchestra to salute the 100th birthday of its most revolutionary chief conductor.

Start the day with classical music

Petroc Trelawny presents Radio 3's award-winning classical breakfast show with music that captures the mood of the morning, including BBC Radio 3's 25 for 25: Sounds of the Century – a series of brand new commissions celebrating and commemorating some of the biggest events of the 21st century so far. This week, New Jersey based Irish composer Donnacha Dennehy remembers the 'Miracle on the Hudson', when pilot Chesley 'Sully' Sullenberger safely landed US Airways Flight 1549 on the Hudson River. Hard Landing is recorded by the BBC National Orchestra of Wales.

Romantic song live from London's Wigmore Hall

Elizabeth Alker showcases the best performances by BBC orchestras, choirs, ensembles and other great performing groups from Europe and around the globe.

We begin the programme with a live concert from London's Wigmore Hall. Swedish soprano Johanna Wallroth joins pianist Michael Pandya, BBC Radio 3 New Generation Artists, to explore the song writing brilliance of Clara Schumann, Pauline Viardot and Gunnar de Frumerie, alongside favourite songs by Schubert and Berlioz.

Elsewhere, Elizabeth begins a week-long celebration of music of Spain. The RTVE Symphony Orchestra feature Manuel de Falla at the ballet and also Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky's powerful first piano concerto. Plus, music by Spanish Renaissance composer and organist, Antonio de Cabezón.

Elizabeth also has a spotlight on solo violin performers and violin sonatas throughout the week. Today, Elena Urioste stands alongside pianist Tom Poster to perform one of Mozart's final great masterpieces for the genre and violinist Naoka Aoki begins a survey of Eugène Ysaÿe's lyrical and virtuosic sonatas for violin alone.

Mel Bonis (1858-1937)

The turning point

Donald Macleod surveys the life of nineteenth century French composer Mel Bonis, with a focus today on two dates, both of which would mark significant events, 1881 and 1883.

Mel Bonis's name may not be a familiar one these days, but she produced somewhere in the region of three hundred compositions. There's no doubt that she was sensitive to gender discrimination. It's why she chose to publish her music under the name of Mel rather than her birth name Mélanie.

She was born in 1858 to parents of modest means. Her father worked for the watch company Breguet, still in business today, and her mother worked in the haberdashery trade. Neither of them held any particular interest in music, so it was down to young Mélanie to teach herself the play the family's piano. Her talent was recognised by a visiting friend who facilitated a meeting with one of the leading lights of the day, César Franck, an esteemed professor of organ at Paris's prestigious Conservatoire. Mélanie enrolled and showed great promise as a student, winning several end of year prizes. Her studies came to an abrupt end when her parents refused to give their consent to her marriage to a fellow student there, a poet, critic and singer, Amédée Hettich. Her life took a sharp turn two years later when, at the instigation of her parents, she married a twice widowed man of comfortable means. Thereafter her life as a composer had to take a back seat to the demands of raising five step-children and three of her own children with her husband, Albert Domange. Even so, she managed to continue to compose, producing music for her own instrument, the piano, and in almost every other genre as well.

Today Donald Macleod considers the means Mel Bonis had at her disposal to further her musical ambitions.

Rachmaninov's world was turned completely upside down by the Great War. Severed from his roots, he fled Russia and began a career as a globetrotting pianist. His devilish set of variations, performed here by Bruce Liu – winner of the 2021 International Chopin Competition – embodies this nomadic life: written in Switzerland, premiered in America, based on a tune by Italian violinist Niccolò Paganini and infused with Rachmaninov's own Russian style. Composers Erich Korngold and Béla Bartók were also forced by politics to leave their homes: both fled from fascism to the New World, and Korngold's swashbuckling film score is practically a hymn to freedom. Bartók's spectacular Concerto for Orchestra, meanwhile, is more than just a multi-coloured showcase, it's a struggle between darkness and light, crowned by a mighty shout of joy.

Land Cinema

If cinema is often associated with Hollywood or the European New Wave, since the 1970s activist-filmmakers around the world have been involving local people in telling their own stories. Co-creating films about land rights, food security, and pollution, these filmmakers pioneered what Becca Voelcker calls Land Cinema. In her essay, she shares examples made by Zhang Mengqi, Tsuchimoto Noriaki, Ogawa Productions and Enzo Camacho and Ami Lien

Dr Becca Voelcker is a New Generation Thinker on the scheme run by the Arts and Humanities Research Council and the BBC to put academic research on radio.

At Goldsmiths, University of London she lectures on art, film and visual culture, particularly in relation to politics and ecology; and has written for publications including Screen, Frieze and Sight & Sound.

The Chief Conductor of the BBC Philharmonic, John Storgårds, opens tonight's programme with music dedicated to him by Per Nørgård. A mind-bending kaleidoscope of sound; glitter and jazz with a backward glance to Sibelius.

Paul Lewis joins the orchestra for Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto, the 'Emperor'; a chance to hear one of the best-loved concertos of all in the hands of one of the world's greatest performers of the music.

Unstoppable energy launches Sibelius's Third Symphony and an optimistic choral-like finale brings the work to a conclusion. Poised between them, the central movement embraces us in haunting melody and hypnotic lilting rhythm - music that gently tugs at the heart-strings, once heard never forgotten.

A Spanish celebration featuring Rodrigo's Concierto de Aranjuez

Elizabeth Alker showcases the best performances by BBC orchestras, choirs, ensembles and other great performing groups from Europe and around the globe.

This week on Classical Live, there will be a celebration of Spanish music. Rodrigo's popular Concierto de Aranjuez performed by guitarist Pablo Sáinz-Villegas sits at the heart of today's programme alongside music by another great Spanish figure, Roberto Gerhard, performed by the BBC Philharmonic Orchestra. Also in the programme, 17th century Spanish music by José Castel.

Elizabeth also has a spotlight on violin sonatas throughout the week. Today, violinist Christian Tetzlaff and pianist Kiveli Dorken open the programme with Cesar Franck's Sonata in A Major for Violin and Piano, one of the most outstanding sonatas in the violin repertory and violinist Naoka Aoki continues her survey of Eugène Ysaÿe's monumental sonatas for solo violin.

Mel Bonis (1858-1937)

An Affair of the Heart

Donald Macleod recounts how and why Mel Bonis came to find her musical training at an abrupt end. It was a circumstance that irrevocably changed the course of her life.

Mel Bonis's name may not be a familiar one these days, but she produced somewhere in the region of three hundred compositions. There's no doubt that she was sensitive to gender discrimination. It's why she chose to publish her music under the name of Mel rather than her birth name Mélanie.

She was born in 1858 to parents of modest means. Her father worked for the watch company Breguet, still in business today, and her mother worked in the haberdashery trade. Neither of them held any particular interest in music, so it was down to young Mélanie to teach herself to play the family's piano. Her talent was recognised by a visiting friend who facilitated a meeting with one of the leading lights of the day, César Franck, an esteemed professor of organ at Paris's prestigious Conservatoire. Mélanie enrolled and showed great promise as a student, winning several end of year prizes. Her studies came to an abrupt end when her parents refused to give their consent to her marriage to a fellow student there, a poet, critic and singer, Amédée Hettich. Her life took a sharp turn two years later when, at the instigation of her parents, she married a twice widowed man of comfortable means. Thereafter her life as a composer had to take a back seat to the demands of raising five step-children and three of her own children with her husband, Albert Domange. Even so, she managed to continue to compose, producing music for her own instrument, the piano, and in almost every other genre as well.

One of the most important relationships of Mel Bonis's life was with Amédée Hettich. Originally a fellow student, the pair of them collaborated on song writing projects.

Vladimir Jurowski (conductor)

Vladimir Jurowski conducts a programme of uncompromising emotional power. 'Peace Shall Defeat War' wrote Borys Liatoshynsky on the score of his Third Symphony, and the message of this great 20th-century Ukrainian composer has never felt more urgent or compelling. LPO Conductor Emeritus Vladimir Jurowski believes passionately that it needs to be heard, and you'll be gripped by its epic sweep and uncompromising emotional power. Jurowski has paired it with music from Prokofiev's operatic tale of Ukrainian struggle, and Mussorgsky's pitch-black, darkly comic songs – perfect for a singer as dramatic and as characterful as the British bass Matthew Rose.

Mel Bonis (1858-1937)

Heartache in war-time

Donald Macleod considers why the Great War was especially difficult for Mel Bonis and how she expressed her emotional state through her music.

Mel Bonis's name may not be a familiar one these days, but she produced somewhere in the region of three hundred compositions. There's no doubt that she was sensitive to gender discrimination. It's why she chose to publish her music under the name of Mel rather than her birth name Mélanie.

Her talent was recognised by a visiting friend who facilitated a meeting with one of the leading lights of the day, César Franck, an esteemed professor of organ at Paris's prestigious Conservatoire. Mélanie enrolled and showed great promise as a student, winning several end of year prizes. Her studies came to an abrupt end when her parents refused to give their consent to her marriage to a fellow student there, a poet, critic and singer, Amédée Hettich. Her life took a sharp turn two years later when, at the instigation of her parents, she married a twice widowed man of comfortable means. Even so, she managed to continue to compose, producing music for her own instrument, the piano, and in almost every other genre as well.

During the war Mel Bonis was profoundly affected by news from the frontline. Two of her sons were in the army, and then the bombing of Paris cast a light on the circumstances surrounding Mel Bonis's illegitimate daughter.

Nil Venditti joins the BBC Philharmonic, bringing with her a feast of Italian music. The programme opens with the sparkling overture to Rossini's opera 'The Thieving Magpie' and the luxurious silken warmth of Mascagni's Intermezzo from 'Cavalleria rusticana' follows. Shakespeare provides the inspiration for music from Verdi's 'Otello'; soprano Mariangela Sicilia joining the orchestra for the heart-breaking Willow Song and Ave Maria.

Puccini's lush early Preludio sinfonico changes the mood after the interval, and to end, tenor Alessandro Fisher and baritone James Atkinson join the orchestra and Mariangela Sicilia for Stravinsky's ingenious witty ballet 'Pulcinella'. Inspired by Italian baroque music, the beautifully assembled dances are painted in Stravinsky's unmistakable colours.

FRI 06:30 Breakfast (m00298ff)
Boost your morning with classical

Petroc Trelawny presents Radio 3's award-winning classical breakfast show with music that captures the mood of the morning, including BBC Radio 3's 25 for 25: Sounds of the Century – a series of brand new commissions celebrating and commemorating some of the biggest events of the 21st century so far. This week, New Jersey based Irish composer Donnacha Dennehy remembers the 'Miracle on the Hudson', when pilot Chesley 'Sully' Sullenberger safely landed US Airways Flight 1549 on the Hudson River. Hard Landing is recorded by the BBC National Orchestra of Wales.

A Spanish celebration featuring a musical telling of Don Quixote

Elizabeth Alker showcases the best performances by BBC orchestras, choirs, ensembles and other great performing groups from Europe and around the globe.

This week on Classical Live, there is a celebration of Spanish music. Violinist Esther Yoo joins Spain's RTVE Symphony Orchestra and conductor Andrey Boreyko to perform Bruch's famous first violin concerto. Music by Spanish composers such as Juan María Guelbenzu and Arturo Márquez will also be performed plus there will be highlights from Bizet's Carmen performed by the BBC National Orchestra of Wales. The centrepiece of today's programme is Roberto Gerhard's rarely heard musical telling of Miguel Cervantes's story of Don Quixote performed by the BBC Philharmonic with conductor, Juanjo Mena.

Elizabeth also has a spotlight on violin sonatas throughout the week. Today, American violinist Esther Yoo and pianist Robert Koenig perform Grieg and Naoka Aoki comes to the end of her presentations of Eugène Ysaÿe's fiendish sonatas for solo violin with a performance of his third sonata - the 'Ballade'.

Mel Bonis (1858-1937)

Reflections on a life

Donald Macloed explores Mel Bonis's preoccupations, musical and otherwise, in later life. After the Great War Bonis turned to writing music for her own pleasure, for her friends and family and for God.

Mel Bonis's name may not be a familiar one these days, but she produced somewhere in the region of three hundred compositions. There's no doubt that she was sensitive to gender discrimination. It's why she chose to publish her music under the name of Mel rather than her birth name Mélanie.

She was born in 1858 to parents of modest means. Her father worked for the watch company Breguet, still in business today, and her mother worked in the haberdashery trade. Neither of them held any particular interest in music, so it was down to young Mélanie to teach herself to play the family's piano. Her talent was recognised by a visiting friend who facilitated a meeting with one of the leading lights of the day, César Franck, an esteemed professor of organ at Paris's prestigious Conservatoire. Mélanie enrolled and showed great promise as a student, winning several end of year prizes. Her studies came to an abrupt end when her parents refused to give their consent to her marriage to a fellow student there, a poet, critic and singer, Amédée Hettich. Her life took a sharp turn two years later when, at the instigation of her parents, she married a twice widowed man of comfortable means. Thereafter her life as a composer had to take a back seat to the demands of raising five step-children and three of her own children with her husband, Albert Domange. Even so, she managed to continue to compose, producing music for her own instrument, the piano, and in almost every other genre as well.

The arrival of her illegitimate daughter Madeleine had already brought much anxiety and guilt to the religiously minded Bonis. She kept the child a secret from her family. Then one of her sons expressed his wish to marry Madeleine, completely unaware that they were related.

New Generation Thinkers 2024

Digging for Words

In 1773, Phillis Wheatley became the first African American to publish a collection of poems. Jade Cuttle looks at the way her poems were described and asks what do we categorise as nature writing? Her essay considers the idea of "coining" and the work of a new generation of poets including Elizabeth-Jane Burnett, Khairani Barokka, Kei Miller and a collection called Nature Matters edited by Mona Arshi and Karen McCarthy Woolf.

Jade Cuttle is a New Generation Thinker on the scheme run by the Arts and Humanities Research Council and the BBC to put academic research on radio. She is studying for her PhD at the University of Cambridge, writing journalism and her first book called Silthood, which explores ancient connections between soil and self. She has also released an album of poem-songs called Algal Bloom.

You can find examples of Essays written for Radio 3 by Kei Miller and Elizabeth Jane Burnett on the programme website.

Encrypted pianos and half-forgotten archives

Jennifer Lucy Allan is our guide through the outer thickets of adventurous listening, uncovering a half-forgotten archive of music from Japan's cult label DD. Records and Singaporean sound artist Bani Haykal's abandoned pianos, which have since been retrofitted to send encrypted messages. Plus, Mongolian singer Enji reflects on the in-betweenness of migration, while Lebanese artist Nour Sokhon and Montreal-based media-maker Stefan Christoff collaborate on a sonic exploration of identity and displacement.

Moses Yoofee Trio in concert

'Round Midnight is presented by award-winning saxophonist Soweto Kinch. This weekday late-night show celebrates the thriving UK jazz scene and spotlights the best new music alongside incredible acts from past decades.

Fridays on 'Round Midnight are a little bit different from the rest of the week. And tonight, Soweto presents highlights from Berlin's Moses Yoofee Trio, performing live at Elbjazz Festival 2024 Hamburg last year.

The group is led by keyboardist and producer Moses Yoofee, alongside drummer Noah Fürbringer and bassist Roman Kloben-Barangä. They are well known in Germany, and increasingly internationally, for their kinetic stage presence, drawing influence from jazz, soul, R&B, hip-hop and more.

Plus, music from Amy Gadiaga, Enemy, and Anna Chandler-King.
