SAT 09:00 Saturday Morning (m002rryh)

Pianist Vikingur Olafsson at the piano

Tom Service with guests, stories and the perfect classical soundtrack for the weekend!

An all-star line-up of guests joins us this morning as superstar pianist Vikingur Olafsson pops in to champion the music of the Hungarian composer György Kurtág who turns 100 this month. Vikingur joins Tom at the piano to play some of his music and talk about how getting to know him personally has changed how he hears other music forever.

Continuing our focus on Creators and the stories behind their creations: multi award-winning composer Anna Meredith talks to Tom about her track Nautilus that started life with her stomping along a beach in Scotland but became a powerhouse tune that's been arranged and re-arranged countless times for electronics, orchestra, marching band and even featured in a David Beckham documentary.

And Radio 3's Kate Molleson pays tribute to the French composer and electronic music pioneer Eliane Radigue who died this week age 94. Radigue's music of ecstatic sonic concentration is an invitation to change our perceptions of what music can do, and what can it make us feel.

SAT 12:00 Earlier... with Jools Holland (m002Injy)

Jools with some of his most-loved recordings

Jools shares his lifelong passion for classical music and the beautiful connections with jazz and blues. With fascinating guests each week, who bring their own favourite music and occasionally perform live in Jools's studio.

Today, Jools's choices include music by Copland, Dvorak and Victoria with performances by Tenebrae, Charlie Parker and Les Musiciens du Louvre. His guest is the singer, songwriter and pianist Jon Regen who performs on the studio piano and introduces recordings he loves by Martha Argerich, Henrietta Schumann and Dave Grusin.

Turning the Page

2. A new purpose

Violinist Tasmin Little talks to soprano Lesley Garrett and John Sherba from the Kronos Quartet about finding new meaning after a performance career.

Lesley speaks about the need for opera composers to write roles for older women and how her children have noticed she becomes withdrawn when she isn't working.

Violinist John Sherba tells Tasmin how being a musician has meant he is hard-wired as a giving person. He spent 45 years on the road giving performances with the Kronos Quartet, an ensemble celebrated for its cross-genre collaborations. Now, age 70 he has time to give care as a grandfather and discover new music and hobbies.

SAT 14:00 Record Review (m002rrym)

SAT 18:00 Opera on 3 (m002rryt)

Mussorgsky's Boris Godunov

Mussorgsky's Boris Godunov from the Royal Ballet and Opera.

Boris Godunov has been crowned Tsar of Russia in a glittering coronation, but his path to power wasn't straightforward. Years ago he ordered the murder of Dmitry, a young heir to the throne, and that decision has haunted him ever since. And his position isn't secure - a young man the same age as Dmitry sees an opportunity to oust Boris and become Tsar himself.

Mussorgsky's original version of the opera takes the form of seven tautly constructed scenes, including his fabulous Coronation Scene. Bryn Terfel returns to the role of the troubled Tsar, and Mark Wigglesworth conducts.

Recorded last month at the Royal Ballet and Opera, and presented by Martin Handley.

Three hours of classical sparkle

This week, Sarah Walker marks the arrival of March with music full of colour, imagination and changing seasons. The morning begins with a trip to Sweden in the company of Hugo Alfvén's musical picture of a Swedish folk festival, before moving into the nostalgic English countryside with Gerald Finzi's beautiful Severn Rhapsody.

For Sarah's Choral Reflection this week, the American choir Ensemble Altera provide a radiant take on William Harris's masterpiece Bring Us, O Lord God.

There's also elegance from Joseph Bologne, witty Beethoven, dazzling Debussy and to accompany a leisurely coffee, Sarah will be bringing the sweeping drama of Sibelius's Violin Concerto to the airwaves. Best make a big mug.

Plus, a musical flower clock from Jean Françaix. Spring is well and truly here.

Peter Hamlyn, neurosurgeon

Peter Hamlyn is the founder and president of the Brain and Spine Foundation, after working as a neurosurgeon for 40 years.

He is perhaps best-known for saving the life of the boxer
Michael Watson, who suffered a severe brain injury during a title fight in 1991 and was in a coma for 40 days. Peter performed seven brain operations and became a pioneer in the field of sports medicine, campaigning for better care for athletes.

He is now fascinated by how Artificial Intelligence might transform the diagnosis and care of neurological patients.

Peter's music includes Hildegard of Bingen, Berlioz, Handel and Prokofiev.

The Blow Torch

Hannah French visits St Paul's Cathedral in London to explore the legacy of composer John Blow, who became master of the choristers at the newly consecrated cathedral in 1687. She meets the current Director of Music, Andrew Carwood, to talk about music that Blow may have written for the Cathedral's opening service, and the dual roles that the composer had at St Paul's and Westminster Abbey.

They're joined in the Cathedral by natural trumpet specialist Russell Gilmour, who traces a line between some of the most important trumpeters in Blow's time, and who gives a demonstration of how natural trumpets sound in the famously resonant acoustic of St Paul's Cathedral. The music includes works by Blow, together with some of his pupils and successors, including Croft, Clarke, and Purcell.

Producer: Ben Collingwood.

SUN 18:00 Words and Music (m002rt6z)

Music and the Mechanical Mind

The possibilities and dangers of Artificial Intelligence is one of the major issues of the day, but for centuries people have imagined machines that could think, able to create and possibly even enjoy art, so we feature early fictional examples of mechanical minds from Mary Shelley's Frankenstein and Thea Von Harbou's Metropolis, and automata like a moving sculpture of a silver swan and what was known as the 'talking Turk'

We consider the limits of art created by computers in poetry by Adrienne Rich and musings from Nick Cave.

And our playlist features pianola recordings from Rex Lawson, alongside a reading from HG Wells's Tono-Bungay in which the player piano assists romance, but we also make space for music very much outside of the world of the machine, such as Benjamin Britten's ode to country life and honest hard work, The Useful Plough

SUN 19:15 Sunday Feature (m002rt71)

Bartok and Us

The comedian, actor and keen amateur musician Nick Mohammed reports on the controversies sparked when the Hungarian Bela Bartok brought his music first to concert halls across the UK, and then into our homes, thanks to the arrival of music broadcasting by the BBC in the 1920s.

'Is Bartok Mad - Or Are We?' was the headline splashed across the front page of Radio Times in December 1927, above a cartoon in which three listeners recoil in horror from a wireless broadcasting 'CLATTER' and 'CRASH'. Bartok's dissonant scores also provoked strong reactions from critics: 'Bartok must have caused a series of aesthetic earthquakes all over the British Isles and brought home to many that the greatest boon about wireless is the ability to switch it off,' wrote one.

Nick charts how, as a virtuoso pianist, Bartok toured the UK, including a memorable visit to Aberystwyth, finds out why the nascent BBC backed Bartok despite strong resistance from audiences, and discovers how key performers such as the young Yehudi Menuhin became powerful advocates and won round listeners.

Nick Mohammed says: 'As a performer, I'm fascinated by how audiences respond to new ideas, and particularly with Bartok - how did he get British audiences to tune in to a new sound and convince them that he was one of the most significant musicians of the 20th century?'

The documentary includes new interviews with violinist Patricia Kopatchinskaja, pianist Robert Taub, former Radio 3 and Proms controller Nicholas Kenyon, music historian Rhian Davies and conductor Simon Rattle, as well as rarely heard archive recordings from violinists Yehudi Menuhin and Joseph Szigeti.

Series Producer: Clare Walker for BBC Audio

Louis Andriessen: Disrupting the mainstream

Kate Molleson and Gillian Moore present BBC Radio 3's series exploring the pivotal 'modern' musical works of the 20th century, the groundbreaking composers who created them, and the radical cultural and artistic movements which gave rise to them. In this episode, Gillian explores the music of the Dutch radical Louis Andriessen, leading to a full listen to his work De Staat or The Republic of 1976. To get there, Gillian traverses the thorny issue of Stravinsky vs Schoenberg, finds a noisy disruption at a Concertgebouw concert, and tries to get to the bottom of what "Unpolite Minimalism" might encompass...

Kate Molleson charts the influences upon the early symphonies of Sibelius, including the romantic symphonic music of Tchaikovsky, and themes of Nationalism. Although both the First and Second Symphonies demonstrate clear links to the political situation of the times in Finland, the Symphony No 2 was also very much inspired by a trip to Italy and the impact of the scenery there.

Benedetti plays Mendelssohn

The Scottish Chamber orchestra and its principal conductor, Maxim Emelyanychev, explore music by two of Germany's great composers, Brahms and Mendelssohn. In his Academic Festival Overture, we hear Brahms at his most celebratory, and in his masterful 4th Symphony, there is music of great beauty and uncompromising intellectual complexity – it's a piece that can't fail to inspire and move all who hear it.

Nicola Benedetti has performed Mendelssohn's exhilarating Violin Concerto for many years. Bringing together sublime lyrical beauty and fizzing violin fireworks, this concerto is the ideal showcase for the world-renowned Scottish violin virtuoso's consummate talents.

You, Me and the Wireless

Episode 1

Legendary broadcaster Gillian Reynolds looks back at her life and the role of radio in it.

An award-winning journalist in print and on air, Gillian Reynolds was a radio critic for over 50 years, and a lifelong listener. Her sharp observation, warm wit and unerring sense of what works in sound are celebrated in this series of essays, where she looks back at a life and career inextricably intertwined with the radio. Presenters, comedians, dramatists, politicians, station controllers, commissioners – Gillian knew them all, and shares fascinating memories over her distinguished career, and her deep love for the medium of radio.

You Me and the Wireless discusses how and why radio works so well in different genres, with highlights from a long and distinguished career in both commercial and public sector broadcasting.

"Radio is more popular with BBC audiences than TV, delivering 43 percent of the BBC's total audience..... radio is perceived as a medium of the future not a dusty relic..... There are ways of telling a story on radio... audio does better than any other medium, more intimately and with more immediate impact." Gillian Reynolds, The Daily Telegraph December 2015

After writing for The Guardian from 1967 to 1974, Gillian was the radio critic for The Daily Telegraph for more than 42 years, from 1975 to 2018. She then continued her career at The Sunday Times, where she wrote about radio until 2021. She was the first Programme Controller of Radio City in Liverpool in 1974, the first woman in the UK to hold such a post. Gillian Reynolds is a Fellow of The Radio Academy, a trustee of the National Museum in Liverpool, a Fellow of the Royal Television Society and an Honorary Fellow of her old Oxford college, St Anne's.

Essay 1

Gillian discusses why radio is so important to its audience, going back to where it all began – growing up on a Liverpool Council estate, with the radio an ever present companion. Memories include her indomitable mother supporting her to get a place at Oxford, plus her early career in commercial radio in Liverpool.

The Classical Master

Kate Molleson surveys the Third Symphony by Sibelius and the period it was composed - a work which led one critic to call Sibelius a Classical Master. The Second Symphony by Sibelius had proved to be very popular, so when it came to Sibelius composing his Third Symphony, there was a lot of pressure to get it right. He looked to develop his compositional language further, but in doing so, created a work which at first did not appeal to his Finnish audience.

What is the true voice of America? For Leonard Bernstein, West Side Story was a plea for tolerance in a violent world, expressed through electrifying dance rhythms. For Sergei Rachmaninov, the USA was a land of new possibilities and sorrowful exile - emotions that pulse and soar throughout his glorious, glittering Third Symphony.

But in the USA's 250th anniversary year, there are still questions to be asked - and in ANTHEM, Barbican artist in residence Davóne Tines collaborates with an array of living American composers (Michael Schachter, Caroline Shaw and Tyshawn Sorey), and poet Mahogany L. Browne, to ask what a nation is, and what it might yet be. Between Bernstein's and Rachmaninov's very personal testimonies, it's a compelling centrepiece to an evening of music that's never felt more timely.

A Psychological Symphony

Kate Molleson follows the creation of the Fourth Symphony by Sibelius amid much self-doubt - a work at least one biographer has termed as his Psychological Symphony. In the build-up to World War One, in his Fourth Symphony Sibelius continued to search for a new compositional language, whilst at the same time having increasing concerns about money, and also his health from excessive drinking and smoking.

Power through with classical music

30 minutes of back to back classical music to help wind down at the end of a busy day. The sap is rising during today's sequence, with a Bach Siciliano, and romances from Khachaturian and Rachmaninov, along with serenades from Mozart's Don Giovanni, and a pair of birds from Purcell's Fairy Queen. Some cinematic lushness perfumes the warming air with Michel Legrand's "Paris violon", whilst Mel Bonis entices us into the forest for an evening stroll. Looking up from earthly pleasures, Rebecca Dale reveals a glimpse of heaven with her ethereal setting of Salve Regina, whilst Percy Grainger's ravishing arrangement of "The Three Ravens" tells the grisly story of a heroic dead knight, who's body is rescued by a deer.

Holst's Planets Suite from Manchester

The Hallé Orchestra and Choirs, and its Principal Conductor Kahchun Wong perform a programme of celestial music by Gutsav Holst, Unsuk Chin and Colin Matthews.

Unsuk Chin's Le Chant des Enfants des Étoiles is an intensely atmospheric work which will take you on an exploration through the stars and the infinite reaches of space. Recently revised by the composer, this concert presents the exciting world première of this updated version.

The orchestra then takes us on a more familiar journey through the solar system, from Mercury to Neptune with a performance of Gustav Holst's "The Planets" Suite. And to conclude, Colin Matthews's "Pluto", the Renewer - a lightning-fast scherzo with its flurry of solar winds in the strings, provides an irresistible complementary movement to the Holst.

Presented by Mark Forrest at Bridgewater Hall, Manchester, and recorded on 19th February 2026.

You, Me and the Wireless

Episode 3

Legendary broadcaster Gillian Reynolds looks back at her life and the role of radio in it.

An award-winning journalist in print and on air, Gillian Reynolds was a radio critic for over 50 years, and a lifelong listener. Her sharp observation, warm wit and unerring sense of what works in sound are celebrated in this series of essays, where she looks back at a life and career inextricably intertwined with the radio. Presenters, comedians, dramatists, politicians, station controllers, commissioners – Gillian knew them all, and shares fascinating memories over her distinguished career, and her deep love for the medium of radio.

You Me and the Wireless discusses how and why radio works so well in different genres, with highlights from a long and distinguished career in both commercial and public sector broadcasting.

"Radio is more popular with BBC audiences than TV, delivering 43 percent of the BBC's total audience..... radio is perceived as a medium of the future not a dusty relic..... There are ways of telling a story on radio... audio does better than any other medium, more intimately and with more immediate impact." Gillian Reynolds, The Daily Telegraph December 2015

After writing for The Guardian from 1967 to 1974, Gillian was the radio critic for The Daily Telegraph for more than 42 years, from 1975 to 2018. She then continued her career at The Sunday Times, where she wrote about radio until 2021. She was the first Programme Controller of Radio City in Liverpool in 1974, the first woman in the UK to hold such a post. Gillian Reynolds is a Fellow of The Radio Academy, a trustee of the National Museum in Liverpool, a Fellow of the Royal Television Society and an Honorary Fellow of her old Oxford college, St Anne's.

A Depiction of Swans

Kate Molleson delves into the iconic Fifth Symphony by Jean Sibelius - and it's famed programmatic depiction of Swans. Despite the huge success of this work, the Fifth Symphony was composed during the turbulent times of World War One. Sibelius was unhappy with the score, and would return to this work a number of times to edit it further. The version known and loved today, is quite different to the one premiered in 1915.

FRI 16:00 Composer of the Week (m002rsm)

Jean Sibelius (1865-1957)

New Symphonic Territory

Kate Molleson follows Sibelius in the creation of his Sixth and Seventh Symphonies - and also the Eighth which the composer destroyed. These works were not only composed during a period of unrest for Finland, during and after World War One, but also a period of increasing uncertainty for Sibelius himself in terms of his health, and also his financial security. It was amid this backdrop of disharmony on many levels, that Sibelius continued to explore new compositional territory in his symphonic writing.

FRI 19:00 Classical Mixtape (m002rskr)

Classical music for your journey

Unwind from a busy day with a 30-minute soundscape of classical music.

This evening's Classical Mixtape starts with Saint-Saens's beautiful 'Le Cygne' followed by a gorgeous choral setting of Nimrod from the Enigma Variations performed by VOCE8. Mozart, Mendelssohn and Debussy provide blissful piano nestled between the immersive soundtracks from the 1999 film 'American Beauty' and Howard Shore's 'The Lord of the Rings' along with another Swan connection in the shape of Elena Kats-Chernin's 'Wild Swans, Eliza's Aria' arranged for Violin & Piano. Puccini's Humming Chorus brings our journey to a close.

You, Me and the Wireless

Episode 5

Legendary broadcaster Gillian Reynolds looks back at her life and the role of radio in it.

An award-winning journalist in print and on air, Gillian Reynolds was a radio critic for over 50 years, and a lifelong listener. Her sharp observation, warm wit and unerring sense of what works in sound are celebrated in this series of essays, where she looks back at a life and career inextricably intertwined with the radio. Presenters, comedians, dramatists, politicians, station controllers, commissioners – Gillian knew them all, and shares fascinating memories over her distinguished career, and her deep love for the medium of radio.

You Me and the Wireless discusses how and why radio works so well in different genres, with highlights from a long and distinguished career in both commercial and public sector broadcasting.

"Radio is more popular with BBC audiences than TV, delivering 43 percent of the BBC's total audience.....radio is perceived as a medium of the future not a dusty relic.....There are ways of telling a story on radio... audio does better than any other medium, more intimately and with more immediate impact."
 Gillian Reynolds, The Daily Telegraph December 2015

After writing for The Guardian from 1967 to 1974, Gillian was the radio critic for The Daily Telegraph for more than 42 years, from 1975 to 2018. She then continued her career at The Sunday Times, where she wrote about radio until 2021. She was the first Programme Controller of Radio City in Liverpool in 1974, the first woman in the UK to hold such a post. Gillian Reynolds is a Fellow of The Radio Academy, a trustee of the National Museum in Liverpool, a Fellow of the Royal Television Society and an Honorary Fellow of her old Oxford college, St Anne's.

Essay 5

Radio drama has a long and illustrious history - Gillian picks out a few highlights from the theatre of the air.

FRI 22:00 Late Junction (m002rssy)

Stretch and squeeze

Jennifer Lucy Allan presents a typically 'Late Junction' look at the accordion, with tracks old and new showcasing the instrument's distinctive tones and fragile folds. From the deep listening and extended techniques of Pauline Oliveros to the digital manipulation and contemporary experimentation of Brussels-based Suzan Peeters, we trace the instrument from its humble folk roots to the edge of its eccentric possibilities, and back again.

Elsewhere in the show, a raft of new releases including Enno Velthuy's dreamy and melancholic Music From the Other Side of the Fence as well as a maximalist tour de force in sonic bludgeoning from legendary Rhode Island duo Lightning Bolt - a triumphant return to form! Plus: Christian Aebi's lo-fi salad of toy instruments and Força Maior's wonderfully-warped saxophone portals to another dimension.

Produced by Alex Yates.

A Reduced Listening production for BBC Radio 3.

FRI 23:30 'Round Midnight (m002l0jt)

Alice Zawadzki in concert

'Round Midnight is presented by award-winning saxophonist Soweto Kinch. This weekday late-night show celebrates the thriving UK jazz scene and spotlights the best new music alongside incredible acts from past decades.

Soweto presents concert highlights from vocalist, violinist, and friend of the show Alice Zawadzki, who is widely celebrated for her originality and genre-blending musical approach. Tonight, we hear music from her recent performance in Glasgow, as part of Celtic Connections 2026.

To listen on most smart speakers just say "Ask BBC Sounds to play Round Midnight".
