Conductors Yannick Nézet-Séguin and Vasily Petrenko on the power of live performance

Tom Service with guests, stories and the perfect classical soundtrack for the weekend!

Yannick Nézet-Séguin talks to Tom about the power of Wagner's Tristan and Isolde as he conducts a new production at the Metropolitan Opera in New York. He explains what it means to him personally to be performing this work at the Met and how discovering this opera as a youngster made him realise that Wagner was the composer he wanted to conduct most in opera.

We continue our focus on Creators with the composer, vocalist and artistic director Laura Bowler, who talks to Tom about grief and music, including her recent piece "The White Book", which explores loss, memory and survival, written after the death of her mother and inspired by the poetry of Korean writer Han Kang.

Tom meets conductor Vasily Petrenko, who discusses why we need to embrace human music not AI, how the concert experience can change lives and why we all need some Mahler right now.

Jools and Tracey Emin talk music

Jools shares his lifelong passion for classical music and the beautiful connections with jazz and blues. With fascinating guests each week, who bring their own favourite music and occasionally perform live in Jools's studio.

Today, Jools's choices include music by Beethoven, Gounod and Ravel, with performances by Steven Isserlis and the Nash Ensemble. His guest is the artist Tracey Emin who talks about her relationship to classical music which began with a chance encounter with Bach's Brandenburg Concertos. She also chats to Jools about why classical music belongs to everyone and what it meant to put together her new Tate Modern exhibition "A Second Life", which looks at her life and work before and after her cancer diagnosis. She introduces music she loves by Gabriel Faure, Ennio Morricone and Brian Eno.

Mark Radcliffe's Choral Odyssey 1

In the first of two programmes, broadcaster Mark Radcliffe begins his choral odyssey.

As a child, he was taken by his father to see the Hallé Orchestra with full chorus performing Handel's Messiah, and he was struck by the majesty and power of the human voice. We hear Surely, He hath borne our griefs from Handel's work.

Over the years, Mark's interest grew and diversified, and this is reflected in his choices of works such as Duruflé's Requiem, James MacMillan's O Radiant Dawn and Tallis's soaring Spem in Alium, through to Enigma's 1990 song Sadness, which features plainsong.

With music from Harry Christophers' The Sixteen and Gorecki's heart-breaking Symphony No 3, Sorrowful songs, Mark takes us on the first part of his journey through the choral canon.

Vaughan Williams' 'A London Symphony' in Building a Library with Kate Kennedy and Andrew McGregor

Andrew McGregor with the week's best new classical releases.

2.10pm

Andrew is joined by guest reviewer Chris O'Reilly, who picks four new releases that have caught his ear.

3pm

Building a Library: Kate Kennedy surveys recordings of Vaughan Williams' Symphony No. 2, 'A London Symphony', and makes her personal top recommendation.

Written shortly before the First World War, Vaughan Williams dedicated 'A London Symphony' to fellow composer George Butterworth, who lost his life in the war. Between the chimes of Big Ben, a busker's harmonica, and vibrant nightlife, it is a portrait of London as he knew it, capturing the hustle and bustle of the capital while finding peace and quiet in which to reflect.

Top choice:

BBC Symphony Orchestra, Martyn Brabbins (conductor)
Hyperion CDA68190 (recorded London 2016)

Join Edith Bowman for the ultimate weekly round-up of top-tier film scores and movie soundtracks. This week, Edith will be speaking to composer Danny Elfman about one of his latest projects - Gus Van Sant's Dead Man's Wire - and also about his hugely prolific and eclectic career. We'll also be welcoming back Scottish composer Craig Armstrong, who'll be talking about his score to the 2006 film World Trade Center in this week's Harmonising Hollywood.

And British saxophonist and rapper Soweto Kinch chooses his Pick of the Flicks, featuring the music of Terence Blanchard.

Plus newly released music from films currently streaming and in UK cinemas, as well as a selection from some classic movie music.

SAT 17:00 Opera on 3 (m002sr1h)

Wagner's Tristan and Isolde

From the Metropolitan Opera in New York, Wagner's depiction of the intense, forbidden love between a Cornish knight and an Irish princess.

Tristan has been tasked with transporting Isolde to Cornwall to marry his uncle, King Marke. It's not a good start, as Isolde knows Tristan killed her fiance Morold. She orders her maid to prepare a poison for them both, but Brangäne has other ideas, and substitutes a love potion instead. Wagner's music all stems from the opening 'Tristan chord', using unprecedented chromaticism, tonal ambiguity and harmonic suspension.

Lise Davidsen takes on one of the ultimate roles for dramatic soprano, with Michael Spyres as the love-drunk Tristan. Yannick Nézet-Séguin conducts the work for the first time.

Presented from New York by Debra Lew Harder and Ira Siff.

Three Hours of Classical Sparkle

Sarah Walker brings you three hours of classical music to reflect, restore, and refresh.

On today's show, Sarah soundtracks your Sunday morning with a range of treats, including Beethoven's complete Moonlight Sonata by the legend Alfred Brendel; another chance to hear part of the Brentano String Quartet's performance last Monday from London's Wigmore Hall; and another Sunday Sequence - 3 pieces of music in a row all with a common link - this one inspired by composer and astronomer William Herschel.

Sarah's choral reflection this week features Mozart's much-loved setting of Ave Verum Corpus in a recording by the Handel & Haydn Society conducted by Harry Christophers, and we pay a visit to Anton Lyadov's fairytale Enchanted Lake.

Also, glorious Haydn recorded live at the Wigmore Hall...

Sir Ian Blatchford, Science Museum director

Sir Ian Blatchford has been the Director of the Science Museum in London for more than 15 years - the longest serving director in its history.

He also oversees the National Railway Museum in York, the National Science and Media Museum in Bradford, the Science and Industry Museum in Manchester, Locomotion in County Durham, and the Science and Innovation Park in Wiltshire - all enjoyed by more than four million visitors last year.

He was the first in his family to go to university and his early career was in banking, but his passion was for culture. He combined the two as Finance Director at the V+A, before crossing the road to lead the Science Museum. It's currently a very challenging time for anyone running a museum, with hard questions about funding, sponsorship and exhibition content.

His musical choices include Elgar, Monteverdi, Wagner and Sarah Vaughan.

An English countryside calendar

Few artists evoke the British landscape so unforgettably as John Constable, with paintings like The Haywain, The Cornfield and A Country Lane bringing to mind the timeless cycle of the seasons. And so we celebrate English rural life in honour of Constable's birth 250 years ago with the actor and farmer Martin Clunes and The Archers actor Louiza Patikas. Their readings will connect us with rural bliss in John Clare's Farm Breakfast, with the starker realities of life in the country in Stella Gibbons' Cold Comfort Farm and the unalloyed beauty of the land with John Keats, Gillian Clarke and Thomas Hardy. There is music tracking the seasons and celebrating sowing, growth and harvest, from Bach's Sheep May Safely Graze to Chaminade's Automne to Vaughan Williams' Pastoral Symphony.

Your readers are the actor and farmer Martin Clunes and Louiza Patikas, who plays Helen in The Archers on BBC Radio 4.

Elephant Voices

In Between the Ears: Elephant Voices, science journalist Laura Spinney explores a unique archive of elephant calls and behaviour with its creator, Joyce Poole, a world authority on elephant communication. They listen to moments of birth, joy, mating, danger and death from the perspective of the elephants – as well as hearing Joyce's field note recordings from her studies.

Elephant Ella is in labour and her family are trumpeting and rumbling in ceremony. Angelina watches in despair as one of her twin calves floats seemingly lifeless down a stream. Edwina goes missing whilst her family call for her. Toni grieves over her dead calf. And is Malaika really mimicking a truck?

This is elephant domesticity in audio form, except that there is nothing domesticated about these elephants. They belong to one of the 60-odd families who roam wild in Kenya's Amboseli National Park, and whom Joyce Poole has studied and recorded for nearly 50 years. The clip belongs to a remarkable online archive of elephant calls and behaviour, the Elephant Ethogram, that she and her husband Petter made public in

The Amboseli Elephant Research Project founded by Cynthia Moss in 1972 and still run by her is the longest running of its kind, and much of what we know about elephant communication comes from it. It's thanks to Ella, Angelina, Edwina, Toni, Malaika and their families that we know elephants can communicate over staggeringly long distances, using beautiful, body-shaking calls below the audible range, that elephants address each other by name - being of the very few species besides humans to do so.

New Generation Thinkers: At Home with Gertrude Stein and Alice Toklas

Sophie Oliver takes us inside the remarkable home of the American novelist, poet and playwright Gertrude Stein and her partner Alice Toklas in Paris to look at the material objects they cherished - from an embroidered waistcoat that Alice made for Gertrude to a fabric sculpture of their pet poodle, Basket, that Picasso made for Gertrude by way of an apology.

Using the objects, she takes listeners inside Stein's artistic and literary world; her queer life with Alice; and her object-obsessed poetry. She reflects on what these objects meant to Gertrude and Alice and how they built a life with them, and she considers if the home is always a place of refuge.

Thomas Adès

A Meteoric Rise

Donald Macleod talks to Thomas Adès about the music that first propelled him to stardom, while still in his twenties - the composer's first opera, Powder Her Face.

They also discuss Adès's early years and the influence of his parents on his creative path, and Thomas recalls the emotional impact of his very first encounter with opera in the music of Bizet's Carmen.

Wind down at the end of a busy day with half an hour of back to back classical music, including a lyrical prelude by Rachmaninov, an atmospheric seascape by Anna Clyne, and a haunting theme tune to a popular, long-running TV crime drama series by John Harle. As the Spring equinox nudges us into a new season, there are echoes of winter in music by Vivaldi and Lars-Erik Larsson, French melody from Claude Debussy and a film score by Georges Delerue. Also in the sequence is a profoundly moving choral work by the Scottish composer James MacMillan, written in memory of the victims of the Dunblane massacre 30 years ago this month.

Erland Cooper's Cities of the Imagination

Kitezh: The Invisible City Beneath the Waves

In his third series for The Essay, composer Erland Cooper turns his attention once again to the mythical world. This time, he embarks on five imaginary journeys to cities. Accompanying him are writers, academics and storytellers who know all about these legendary locations. Each episode is scored by Erland's own music.

In this episode, we journey into the dense forests of central Russia to uncover the legend of Kitezh. Known as the "invisible city," Kitezh is said to have vanished beneath the pearl-shaped waters of Lake Svetloyar to escape marauding medieval invaders. According to legend, God "disappeared" the city in response to the prayers of its righteous citizens, leaving the attackers to find nothing but an empty lakeshore.

Accompanying Erland is Dr. Jane Costlow, an expert in environmental studies and Russian literature who has herself travelled to Lake Svetloyar.

Jamie Cullum sits in

This week, broadcaster and jazz pianist and singer-songwriter Jamie Cullum is sitting in for Soweto.

From Monday to Thursday, Jamie is joined by leading UK pianist Neil Cowley. A celebrated jazz artist, and classically trained musician, Neil is well known for his 'Neil Cowley Trio', with their signature mix of jazz and rock, and engaging live performances. Neil is also a first-call pianist for other artists, including with seminal R&B, funk and soul bands the Brand New Heavies and Zero 7, and with Adele, Emeli Sandé, and Michael Kiwanuka. After a 7-year hiatus from the trio to pursue solo projects, Neil reunited with them in 2024. His most recent album is a celebration of one of his key and early influences, titled Built on Bach.

From Monday to Thursday, Neil is giving Flowers to some of the contemporary artists that he admires. To start his selections, Neil picks a drummer and vocalist whose musical approach he appreciates.

There is also music from DJ Harrison and Yazmin Lacey, Elliot Galvin, and Nina Simone.

Berg's Violin Concerto

Ian Skelly presents a concert from the Barbican Hall in London, recorded on 26th February 2026.

Alban Berg's violin concerto is one the composer's most beloved pieces, and it was an intensely personal work serving both as a memorial to the daughter of dear friends and ultimately as the composer's own requiem; he died less than four months after finishing the score.

The first performance of Rachmaninov's youthful First Symphony was such a disaster (thanks to a poorly prepared orchestra and allegedly drunk conductor) that he wrote almost nothing after it for three years, such was the depression he sank into. Now the piece is regarded as a great masterpiece of a talented young composer.

The London Symphony Orchestra with conductor Gianandrea Noseda perform two more great masterpieces, joined by one of the greatest violinists of our time, Patricia Kopatchinskaja.

The Hunt For Zerzura

In his third series for The Essay, composer Erland Cooper turns his attention once again to the mythical world. This time he embarks on five imaginary journeys to cities. Accompanying him are writers, academics and storytellers who know all about these legendary locations. Each episode is scored by Erland's own music.

In this episode, Erland journeys deep into the heart of the Sahara's Great Sand Sea - one of the most inhospitable landscapes on Earth - to uncover the mystery of Zerzura, a legendary desert oasis said to be filled with enchanted treasure. But as explorer and author Robert Twigger explains, the search for this "lost" city has always been about more than just literal gold.

Romeo and Juliet

Love and longing pervade music performed by the BBC Philharmonic under the baton of Ludovic Morlot in tonight's concert.

Music from one of the most ground-breaking operas opens the concert. "Lulu" is a controversial and uncompromising tale of female sexuality and bourgeois hypocrisy. Initially banned in the opera house, Berg tried to circumvent the authorities by creating a set of symphonic pieces from the drama, opening with this Rondo, full of lyrical and rich orchestral writing.

The BBC Philharmonic is joined by Lawrence Power for Cassandra Miller's Viola Concerto "I cannot love without trembling"; the fragility of existence and the nature of distance and separation are explored in her mesmerising work which shows the viola in its most expressive and personal guise. Lyricism and musical space combine in music that creates a unique and powerful atmosphere.

Conductor Ludovic Morlot's selection from Prokofiev's ballet 'Romeo and Juliet' takes us on the emotional journey of Shakespeare's "star-cross'd lovers", drawing on some of Prokofiev's best known and loved music, including that for the feuding houses of Montagues and Capulets.

Recorded at Manchester's Bridgewater Hall on 21 February and presented by Mark Forrest.

The Legend of Kêr-Is

In his third series for The Essay, composer Erland Cooper turns his attention once again to the mythical world. This time, he embarks on five imaginary journeys to cities. Accompanying him are writers, academics and storytellers who know all about these legendary locations. Each episode is scored by Erland's own music.

In this episode of Cities of the Imagination, we travel to the rugged coast of Brittany in search of Ker Ys, a mythical city of extravagant wealth swallowed by the Atlantic.

Local historian Wendy Mewes joins us to recount the dramatic fall of the city. We explore the legend of King Gradlon and his daughter Dahut, whose indulgence and "licentious behaviour" reportedly drew the wrath of God and led to the disappearance of the city beneath the ocean. We uncover how later revisions of the Breton myth transformed Dahut from a symbol of female freedom into a cautionary figure for the Christian church.

BBC National Orchestra of Wales
Tomas Djupsjöbacka (conductor)

For his debut with the BBC National Orchestra of Wales, conductor Tomas Djupsjöbacka brings a programme that celebrates two very different anniversary years. The first half pays tribute to the 250th anniversary of America's signing of the Declaration of Independence, initially with Britten's so-called American Overture, which he wrote for the Cleveland Orchestra while living in the United States during the Second World War. Following this, the BBC National Orchestra of Wales will be joined by Stephen Banks for the UK Premiere of a saxophone concerto by American Composer Joan Tower, a piece which was co-commissioned by BBC Radio 3. Titled Love Returns, the concerto is set as a theme and variations based on her solo piano piece, Love Letters, which she wrote as a tribute following the death of her husband in 2022.

The second half turns to the music of Carl Maria von Weber, who was born just 10 years after the American Declaration of Independence. To mark his 240th year, the Orchestra play his final symphony, the Second, and Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Carl Maria von Weber. Hindemith took themes from Weber's incidental music to Turandot and four of his piano duets, and while Hindemith kept the themes intact, he expanded on them so greatly as to create a work which is inimitably Hindemith.

Erland Cooper's Cities of the Imagination

Themiscyra: home of the Amazons (and Wonder Woman)

In his third series for The Essay, composer Erland Cooper turns his attention once again to the mythical world. This time, he embarks on five imaginary journeys to cities. Accompanying him are writers, academics and storytellers who know all about these legendary locations. Each episode is scored by Erland's own music.

In this episode, he explores Themiscyra (or Themyscira), the legendary home of the Amazons. While modern audiences know it as the sun-drenched, marble-clad hidden island home of Wonder Woman, we look back to antiquity to discover the grit and reality behind the myth of these warrior women who were just as fierce and talented in battle as any Greek male warrior.

Historian Adrienne Mayor from Stanford University joins us to locate the "real" Themyscira in the territory of Pontus, on the southeastern coast of the Black Sea in modern-day Turkey. And we examine why the spirit of Themyscira continues to haunt our creative minds today.

FRI 19:00 Classical Mixtape (m002sqpr)

Expand your horizons with classical music

Take time out with a 30-minute soundscape of classical music.

We begin tonight's Classical Mixtape with a pair of late Romantic English composers often inspired by folk melodies, Rebecca Clarke and Edward Elgar. We then cross the channel to hear from two prominent French composers, Gabriel Fauré and Claude Debussy. Next, we have a pair of 'Nocturnes', from Edvard Grieg and Fryderyk Chopin. Finally we have two film scores, Philip Glass' String Quartet 'Mishima' and - to close tonight's sequence - the End Title from 'The Shawshank Redemption', by Thomas Newman.

FRI 21:45 The Essay (m002sqpt)Erland Cooper's Cities of the Imagination

Kalapa

In his third series for The Essay, composer Erland Cooper turns his attention once again to the mythical world. This time, he embarks on five imaginary journeys to cities. Accompanying him are writers, academics and storytellers who know all about these legendary locations. Each episode is scored by Erland's own music.

In this final episode, we travel north of the Himalayas, to the "earthly paradise" of Shambhala to explore its luminous heart: the capital city of Kalapa. It's a city of geometric perfection, a tantric mandala brought to life, set within a land shaped like a giant eight-petalled lotus. Whether viewed as a literal or spiritual refuge for Buddhist wisdom or the blueprint for James Hilton's Shangri-La, Kalapa remains a powerful symbol.

Ego Ella May's mixtape

This week, broadcaster, jazz pianist and singer-songwriter Jamie Cullum is sitting in for Soweto Kinch.

Jamie welcomes award-winning South London vocalist and songwriter Ego Ella May as his Friday night mixtape guest. Widely celebrated for her melodic and distinctive voice, Ego's compositions are deeply reflective and intimate drawing from influences in music and literature. Having grown up in London's jazz community, Ego has worked with artists including Oscar Jerome, Joe Armon-Jones, and Wu-Lu. Her latest album is 'Good Intentions', which blends a range of genres, with jazz as the uniting source.

Tonight, Ego presents a 30-minute selection of some of the music from across the jazz spectrum that she appreciates and is inspired by.
