SAT 09:00 Saturday Morning (m002199v)
Music and conversation for Holy Saturday morning

Tom Service soundtracks Easter Saturday morning with the best classical music, in new and landmark recordings, with one or two surprise guests introducing their own releases.

This week, Tom also meets the French conductor Raphaël Pichon. With his ensemble Pygmalion, Pichon has produced a string of innovative and critically acclaimed recordings and concerts. His latest release, of Bach's St John Passion, has continued that run, and Tom finds out more about how Pygmalion manages to inject something fresh into such familiar works.

As the London Soundtrack Festival celebrates film composer Bernard Herrmann with a performance of his clarinet quintet 'Souvenirs de Voyage', Tom hears from the performers about their love for Herrmann's concert music, and also meets the composer's widow Norma to hear about the years Herrmann spent living and working in London.

And in The Creators this week, Tom talks to video game composer Lorien Testard about the eight hours of music he wrote for the hit game 'Clair Obscur: Expedition 33', an award-winning endeavour which topped the Billboard Classical Chart.

SAT 12:00 Earlier... with Jools Holland (m002177v)
Jools with music for Saturday lunchtime

Jools shares his lifelong passion for classical music and the beautiful connections with jazz and blues. With fascinating guests each week, who bring their own favourite music and occasionally perform live in Jools's studio.

Today, Jools's choices include music by Kapsberger, Beethoven and Jimmie Lunceford, with performances by Maria Joao Pires and the Scottish Chamber Orchestra. His guest is the poet and podcaster Pádraig Ó Tuama who introduces music he loves by The Bonny Men, Max Richter and Sibelius arranged for uilleann pipes.

SAT 13:00 Key Changes: Radio 3's Essential History of Classical Music (m002tdbt)
1026: As simple as do-re-mi

The year is 1026, Italy. A monk called Guido d'Arezzo causes a musical revolution when he designs a way to notate and share music. His invention of the staff - and the notion of do-re-mi-fa-soh - allows music to be written down and shared. It also ensures the survival of the transcendent music of abbess and polymath Hildegard of Bingen, one of the first composers whose name we know.

Gillian Moore is joined by a roster of distinguished historians for this major new BBC Radio 3 series, charting a course through 1000 years of classical music history. For the first eight programmes, historian Michael Wood is in the chair, as together they explore the bold new sound worlds of the Middle Ages and Renaissance.

Producer: David Fay
Academic Consultant: Professor Laura Tunbridge, University of Oxford
Story Consultant: Kate Leys
Series Editor for BBC Audio: Emma Harding

Key Changes theme tune composed by Joseph Howard and performed by the BBC National Orchestra of Wales, conducted by Kerem Hasan.

SAT 14:00 Record Review (m002t9b3)

Mascagni's Cavalleria Rusticana in Building a Library with Iain Burnside and Andrew McGregor

Andrew McGregor with the week's best new classical releases.

2.10pm

Andrew is joined by guest reviewer Flora Willson, who picks four new releases that have caught her ear.

3pm

Building a Library: Iain Burnside surveys some of the many recordings of Pietro Mascagni's Cavalleria rusticana, and makes a personal top recommendation. Widely considered to be one of the classic verismo operas, Cavalleria rusticana premiered in Rome in 1890 to rapturous applause. Taking place in a Sicilian village on Easter Sunday, the one-act opera is a passionate tale of love and betrayal.

with Sheridan Tongue and Kathryn Tickell

Edith Bowman presents a weekly curation of the finest film scores and cinematic music. This week, she is joined by composer Sheridan Tongue, who discusses his work on the true-crime series Amy Bradley Is Missing. Composer and musician Kathryn Tickell will also share her "Pick of the Flicks," featuring music by a member of one of Britain's most renowned rock bands.

We'll also have our usual blend of classic film scores and newly released soundtracks.

SAT 17:00 This Classical Life (m002t9b7)

Jess Gillam with... David Arnold

Jess Gillam swaps music choices with film composer David Arnold, the mind behind scores for films including Narnia, Hot Fuzz, Independence Day, and James Bond.

David's picks include the joyful Waltz from Tchaikovsky's Sleeping Beauty, Ennio Morricone's genre-defining score to The Good, The Bad And The Ugly, Queen's ambitious March of the Black Queen, and Mozart's Clarinet Quintet - reminding him of learning clarinet as a child. Jess brought along the iconic Also sprach Zarathustra by Richard Strauss, the timeless Stabat Mater by Poulenc, Luis Bacalov's score from Il Postino, and a track from jazz saxophonist and composer Emma Rawicz. David spoke about his approach to writing music for film, his upbringing, favourite collaborations and - of course - his work on 007.

SAT 18:00 Opera on 3 (m002t9b9)

Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande

"She was such a quiet creature, wrapped in mystery as we all are..." In an ancient castle by a darkening sea, the princess Mélisande falls in love – and unlocks passions as deadly as they are beautiful. Moving, mysterious and heartbreakingly gorgeous, Debussy's opera is woven from delicate emotions and violent rage; from sorrow entwined with wonder, and sounds so lovely that they can tear open your soul.

This concert performance with the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra will bring out every shimmer and sigh of Debussy's astonishing score. Sophie Bevan and Huw Montague Rendall play the tragic lovers, heading a cast of singers who know and love this music from the inside out.

Presented by Kate Molleson and recorded at Glasgow's City Halls on 26 March 2026.

SAT 22:30 New Music Show (m002t9bf)

Easter: A Seasonal Journey... The Passion of Mary Magdalene

Presented by Tom Service, including the world premiere performance of The Passion of Mary Magdalene by British composer Tansy Davies.

Tansy Davies's radical reimagining of the Easter story is told from the perspective of Mary Magdalene, disturbing traditional Gospel narratives around Mary as a figure and bringing her spiritual significance into the light.

Drawing on the non-canonical Gospel of Mary and poetry by Ruth Fainlight, and by blending period instruments with electric guitar, the Dunedin Consort, Anna Dennis as Mary Magdalene and Marcus Farnsworth as Jesus present this intense three-part epic that recasts Mary as a powerful female presence – in the composer's words, 'a wise woman in the desert, this kind of raw oracle'. Davies's dramatic Passion hints at unearthing buried truths and the hope of a world cleansed of its demons.

Three hours of Easter classical sparkle

Today, Sarah's choices include Gregorian chant for Easter Day, a Cantata by JS Bach that celebrates the Resurrection with a flurry of jubilant voices, and an interpretation of a spring morning by Lili Boulanger.

There's also a chance to hear the whole of Mozart's Mass in C major, and today's Choral Reflection is a balm of Renaissance harmony which gives the impression of being in surround sound...

Also, this week's Sunday Sequence heads around the globe to discover some Easter traditions - including the history of hunting for eggs...

A Tandem Production for BBC Radio 3.

SUN 12:00 Private Passions (m002t9mx)

Francis Spufford, writer

Francis Spufford is an award-winning writer who loves to inhabit different worlds and vividly bring them to life: Golden

Hill, which won the Costa First Novel Award, takes place in Manhattan in 1746. Light Perpetual begins in a Woolworths in South London in 1944 and Francis's latest novel 'Nonesuch' is a historical fantasy set during the Blitz.

But it wasn't until he was 52 that Francis felt confident enough to write works of fiction, before that his books covered a wide variety of topics from polar expeditions to the economic optimism of post-Stalin Russia to an exploration of the role religion has played in his life. He became an atheist in his teens but turned back to the church after a 20 year hiatus.

When not penning his own work, Francis encourages other budding authors as Professor of Creative Writing at Goldsmiths, University of London.

His music choices include works by Byrd, Satie, Mozart and Ravel.

Easter: A Seasonal Journey... Rimsky-Korsakov's Russian Easter Overture

Sara Mohr-Pietsch explores the musical paths leading to Rimsky-Korsakov's joyful Russian Easter Overture, including Shrovetide plainchant and his star student, Stravinsky. Along the way, Sara surveys pieces in the curiously lopsided count of five, which Tchaikovsky and Dave Brubeck made their own. And there's also a step back in time to the year 1888 in the company of Arthur Sullivan and Augusta Holmès.

SUN 15:00 Music Matters (m002t9n1)

Curtain Up: Classical Stories of Musical Theatre

From operetta to Oklahoma!

Tenor Nicky Spence explores the deep and often-overlooked connections between classical music and the world of musical theatre.

In episode 1, he tells the story of how musical theatre was born out of operetta in the early 20th century; from composers such as Offenbach and Arthur Sullivan to Noël Coward, Cole Porter, George Gershwin, and Richard Rodgers.

Nicky speaks to the musicologist Dominic Broomfield-McHugh about the phenomenon of Gilbert and Sullivan, how Gershwin and Kurt Weill blurred genres on Broadway, and how Rodgers and Hammerstein created the template for the modern musical.

Nicky and his husband, the pianist Dylan Perez, also perform musical excerpts from Franz Lehár's The Merry Widow and Noël Coward's Bitter Sweet, drawing out hidden connections.

Produced by Rachel Gill for BBC Audio.

The February House

For a year during World War II, an unremarkable residence in Brooklyn Heights became the epicentre of Western music and literature. 7 Middagh Street was home to a list of luminaries: novelist Carson McCullers, burlesque dancer Gypsy Rose Lee, as well as three young Englishmen who'd emigrated to America as conflict blasted Europe - composer Benjamin Britten, tenor Peter Pears, and poet W.H. Auden.

85 years on, poet and cultural historian Gregory Woods rebuilds this ramshackle house share, and invite the walls to talk ...

With contributions from:

Katherine Bucknell, scholar, author, and a founder of The W.H. Auden Society

Paul Kildea, Australian composer and Britten expert

Paul Muldoon, Pulitzer Prize-winning Irish poet

Hugh Ryan, historian and author of 'When Brooklyn Was Queer'

SUN 19:45 Words and Music (m001pmzr)

Aspects of the Divine

Have you ever felt lost for words at the beauty of a sunset? Or watched the sunrise and been struck with a sense of awe and wonder? That's what happens to Ratty and Mole in a magical passage in the children's classic, Wind in the Willows. As with all literature and music that touches the heart, it's the sense of something beyond the words or the notes that captures our imagination – something that points to the very mystery of our being – something numinous – what some people think of as God. In this programme, Aspects of the Divine, the actors Natalie Simpson and Ray Fearon explore texts which point to this feeling of something transcendent from different angles: for Wordsworth it was found in nature; for the Old Testament prophet, Isaiah, it was the potential for the parched desert to suddenly blossom abundantly; for mystics like Hildegard of Bingen and Julian of Norwich it was glimpsed in a life of contemplation; in the contemporary novels by Marilynne Robinson and Caleb Azumah Nelson it is found in the rituals of organised religion. The ancient Greeks developed the idea of balance, order and harmony as a semi-mystical property that could shape our lives. And the first words we hear are a speech from Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida about that. Many great composers, from Beethoven to Bruckner, caught this far-off melody in their music. And we start with Vaughan Williams' glorious evocation of music as the divine resolution of discord in harmony.

SUN 21:00 Ultimate Calm (m002lb24)

Erland Cooper: Series 5

A sleepy soundtrack for sweet dreams ft. Ian Rankin

Scottish composer Erland Cooper sits at the helm for this new series of Ultimate Calm, steering us into calm waters with musical selections close to his heart, guided by the elemental, the natural world and his experiences growing up in Orkney. For this maiden voyage, he starts in the realm of sleep and dreams, with a selection of soporific sounds. There'll be music by Satoshi Park, Ganavya and Cerys Hafana, as well as an exclusive unreleased piece by Erland himself, written for his dog, Mirage Morricone.

In every episode of Ultimate Calm, we travel to the musical safe haven of a special guest. We begin this series with the writer Ian Rankin, who transports us to a wharf on a misty early morning evoked by one of his favourite jazz records.

Geometry of Sound

Join Elizabeth Alker with a selection of fresh music from genre-defying artists as we journey through landscapes of ambient and experimental sounds. This week, she shares the gorgeous new track Pearl Cloud Song from Norwegian artist Juni Habel; new work from Andrew Wasyluk featuring the unmistakable voice of Stuart Murdoch from Belle and Sebastian; and for dog lovers, a special treat - a track from Ann Eysermans built around the barks and whimpers of her own pet dog. Elsewhere, Elizabeth offers the most exciting new music from emerging independent producers whose work plays with orchestral textures and classical form as well as the latest sounds from a new generation of contemporary composers who look to embrace the spirit of rock, pop and electronica.

 George Gershwin (1898-1937)

Melting Pot

Donald Macleod explores the early life of George Gershwin, the composer of the American 'melting pot'.

Gershwin started working as a musician and songwriter in his teenage years and became one of the defining voices of a new America in the swinging 20s and the glory days of Hollywood in the 1930s.

This was a period when American writers, artists, advertisers, architects and film-makers were inviting audiences to see, hear and think about the world in ways that they never had before – in ways that made sense of, or at least gave them a way of looking at, the modern world.

Gershwin was one of these trailblazing modernists in part because of his effort to make music commensurate with the idea of American as a 'melting pot' – and his bridging the outmoded gulf between high and low culture.

 Easter: A Seasonal Journey... Mysteries and Miracles from the Tallis Scholars

The world-renowned Tallis Scholars explore music ranging from the Renaissance to our own times inspired by miraculous events in the life of Jesus.

Amongst the works on the programme are a grand motet for double choir by the Venetian Giovanni Gabrieli and one of the greatest outpourings of the Spanish Renaissance, Tomás Luis de Victoria's Mass 'O magnum mysterium.' And, of course, Peter Phillips and his Tallis Scholars include a gem by Thomas Tallis himself.

Presented by Ian Skelly from London's Milton Court Concert Hall

Giovanni Gabrieli: O magnum mysterium
 Tomás Luis de Victoria: Missa O magnum mysterium - Kyrie & Gloria
 Giaches de Wert: Egressus Jesus
 Tomás Luis de Victoria: Missa O magnum mysterium - Credo
 Judith Weir: Ave Regina Caelorum
 Tomás Luis de Victoria: Missa O magnum mysterium - Sanctus & Agnus

Interval

Thomas Tallis: Videte miraculum
 Jacobus Gallus: Mirabile mysterium
 Francisco Guerrero: María Magdalena
 Arvo Pärt: Tribute to Caesar
 Arvo Pärt: Virgencita

The Tallis Scholars' programme begins with Gabrieli and Victoria's Missa O magnum mysterium, which depicts Christ's birth. Other pieces explore miracles, such as Egressus Jesus, recounting Christ exorcising a demon, and Weir's Ave Regina Caelorum, which reflects on the mystery of the Virgin birth.

The second half highlights Tallis's Videte miraculum and Gallus's Mirabile mysterium, both celebrating the Virgin birth. Guerrero's María Magdalena narrates the discovery of Christ's resurrection. The programme concludes with Arvo Pärt's Tribute to Caesar, inspired by Christ's wisdom, and Virgencita, honouring the Virgin of Guadalupe, written by Arvo Pärt as a present to the people of Mexico.

 Healing Musicians

1. Julian Lloyd Webber

Kate Kennedy meets musicians who, like her, had to stop playing after injury and reshape their lives. What does being forced to fall silent mean for a musician's relationship with their instrument?

"My name is Julian Lloyd Webber and I am an ex-cellist". The internationally renowned performer, Julian Lloyd Webber talks for the first time in detail to Kate about the moment he realised his 40-year career could be over mid-recital: "Suddenly I lost power in my right arm - I thought I was going to drop the bow. I had never experienced anything like it - I didn't know what was wrong or what to do. I was genuinely frightened". Julian shares the sense of bereavement he felt after his prestigious career of four decades ended due to a herniated disc in his neck.

Over the next few weeks, Julian tried to pretend everything was normal. His manager was calling him with engagements he had always wanted to undertake, such as a performance of Shostakovich's First Cello Concerto in Moscow. But the wear and tear of Julian's performing career on his body was too much - he learned that the herniated disc was pressing on a nerve which was causing a loss of power in his arm. Doctors told him that he could have an operation, but with little guarantee of success, and with high risks attached. He had a young family at the time, so chose to sacrifice the cello.

He has never played since. Julian and Jiaxin, his wife and fellow cellist, reflect on the last fateful concert they played together and how they've found positives in silence.

The cover of Time Magazine for the 20th of July 1925 consists of a photograph of George Gershwin. It's a head and shoulders shot of the suave young composer, a few weeks short of his 27th birthday. It's a testament to Gershwin's status and popularity: the first American-born musician ever to be accorded that honour. The caption beneath Gershwin's photo on the cover of Time is: "He Rhapsodises Blues". Today, Donald takes us through the years after his huge success with Rhapsody in Blue.

Brahms: A German Requiem, Op 45

Elizabeth Watts (soprano)

BBC National Orchestra and Chorus of Wales
Thomas Zehetmair (conductor)

Brahms was moved to write a requiem following the death of his mother, but rather than following the route of the Latin mass, he instead chose a much more humanist path. He selected verses from the German Bible and placed the focus of the work on the living that mourn, rather than the eternal rest of those that have died; while he called it a German requiem, it was meant for the whole of humankind. This towering work is paired in the first half of the concert with Mozart's penultimate symphony, his 40th. The Symphony was hugely influential on the development of the coming Romantic movement and remains one of his most popular to this day. Making his conducting debut with the BBC National Orchestra and Chorus of Wales for this concert is Thomas Zehetmair, who is fittingly an alumnus of the Salzburg Mozarteum.

Healing Musicians

2. Stephen Marquiss

Kate Kennedy meets musicians who, like her, had to stop playing after injury and rethink their lives. What does this mean for a musician's relationship with their instrument?

Aged 11, Stephen Marquiss was labelled an exemplary piano scholar. Gaining a music specialist place in 1990 Stephen promptly attained the highest ABRSM exam mark in the country and reached the televised semi-final of BBC Young Musicians. But then injury forced him to pull out. At 18, his career was all but over, having struggled with recurring RSI, musculo-skeletal issues, which destroyed his confidence and mental health. Ironically, this crisis forced him to address fundamental aspects of how piano is taught and played - and now at 45, Stephen has his own school of playing called Piano Portals, which seeks to rewrite how practice is approached. Kate takes him back to his practice rooms, to help us understand the intensity and the fear of failure that drove him to injury and we learn how his new approach to playing unfolded.

 George Gershwin (1898-1937)

An American in Paris

Donald Macleod explores George Gershwin's orchestral work An American in Paris, inspired by the time he spent in the French capital on a visit in the spring of 1928.

After an earlier visit to Paris, in 1926, Gershwin sent a thank-you note embellished with two musical quotations: one was a short section from Rhapsody in Blue; the other was labelled 'An American Paris'. A couple of years later, when he began to work on what was to be an "orchestral ballet" with that title, he returned to that little fragment and the challenge of evoking the experience of an American visitor in the French capital.

 Kirill Karabits (conductor)

Broadcast live from the Royal Festival Hall in London, and presented by Martin Handley.

Anna Thorvaldsdóttir's CATAMORPHOSIS, a reflection on our fragile relationship with our planet, is a dramatic work that is also full of hope. It revolves around a distinct sense of urgency, driven by the shift and pull between various polar forces - power and fragility, hope and despair, preservation and destruction.

Max Bruch wrote his Violin Concerto in 1866 and dedicated it to the great violinist, Joseph Joachim. It has since become one of the most popular works in the concerto repertoire.

Tonight's programme ends with Beethoven's 6th Symphony, the 'Pastoral', which was composed in the rural outskirts of modern-day Vienna and reflects Beethoven's deep affection for the countryside. Beethoven paints bucolic pictures of rustic calm, birdsong, flowing brooks and a thunder storm, before the finale, a Shepherd's Song of thanksgiving.

 Healing Musicians

3. Robin Graham

Kate Kennedy meets musicians who, like her, had to stop playing after injury and rethink their lives. What does being forced to fall silent mean for a musician's relationship with their instrument?

Robin Graham reached her dream as the first woman to earn a principal French horn position in a major American orchestra by audition. She shares her story of how painful injury caused her to leave in 2003 and the grief at being unable to play in the centre of a big orchestral sound.

George Gershwin (1898-1937)

Gershwin in Hollywood

Donald Macleod tells the story of George Gershwin's first experience of working in Hollywood.

In the spring of 1930, it was announced that Fox Studios had signed George Gershwin for a large sum of money for to provide the music for a film called Delicious.

Sound in films was still relatively new and Gershwin was sceptical. At first he enjoyed the Californian sunshine, but he quickly tired of the endless "picture talk" and all the distraction while trying to work in his bungalow at Fox's Movietone City. He gave it up and worked from his home in Beverly Hills, relaxing by swimming, hiking and playing tennis and golf.

It was a lucrative exercise for Gershwin, but not a good time to experience Hollywood. But he did use his time fruitfully. As he told a friend: "nearly everybody comes back from California with a western tan and a pocketful of motion picture money. I decided to come back with both these things and a serious composition."

Rachmaninov's Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini

Take a time-trip with the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra and conductor Kazuki Yamada as three composers transplant music from the past into new, radical environments.

In Hindemith's Metamorphosis, the nineteenth century sounds of Weber are hurled, kicking and sometimes howling, into the modern era. Rachmaninov riffs on a beautiful melody from the 1800s, examining it from 24 angles, with renowned Argentine pianist Nelson Goerner as the soloist. Bartók's exhilarating Concerto for Orchestra honours the folk music of his native Hungary while giving the spotlight to almost every instrument of the modern orchestra.

George Gershwin (1898-1937)

The First Great American Opera

Donald Macleod explores the origins and difficult evolution of George Gershwin's long-awaited opera Porgy and Bess.

In 1926 friends gave George Gershwin a copy of a novel called Porgy by DuBose Heyward. It was set among the labourers and stevedores of Charleston, South Carolina. Gershwin sat up all night reading Porgy and in the morning wrote to Heyward to suggest they develop it into an opera together.

It would be almost ten years before that work came to the stage. But when it did, in the shape of Porgy and Bess – the story of the inhabitants of Catfish Row and the love affair between the beggar, Porgy, and a young prostitute, Bess – it became Gershwin's final great work, lauded by many as the First Great American Opera.

Healing Musicians

5. Rebecca Toal and Hattie Butterworth

Kate Kennedy meets musicians who, like her, had to stop playing after injury and reconsider their relationship with their instruments.

We all know that listening to music can have a positive impact on wellbeing and mental health. But what about the performer? The truth is, for anyone wanting to turn professional, this is a highly competitive and pressurised environment often driven in part by fear and anxiety. It's a problem that can have a disproportionate effect on young people - which is why trumpeter Rebecca Toal and cellist Hattie Butterworth started their podcast, Things Musicians Don't Talk About, to try to break the taboo of not acknowledging the difficulties with mental illness that many musicians face. They talk to Kate about their personal experience of 'the system' for training musicians that can so easily break down, often resulting in crippling anxiety and burn-out. Obsessive behaviour and eating disorders are not uncommon as people try to gain some control over the endless cycle of practice and performance. By creating the podcast, Rebecca and Hattie have found a creative way to use their experiences to forge a new and less damaging path for themselves, but also to help others by sharing musicians' experiences honestly.

Fleeting epiphanies, reflective appliances

Verity Sharp presents our latest spin around the world of experimental music, providing a plethora of sounds to bend the ears. We bear witness to the deft and monumental organ playing of Jérôme Bouve & Delphine Dorá in a new piece aptly titled 'Le Vast'; and Owen Duff's 'The Meaning of Alexa' is a duet performed with a virtual assistant in which the human in the room probes the technology's code for answers to a variety of heartfelt and existential quandaries. Plus: Lucy Liyou returns with 'MR COBRA', a new project in which she poses the question, "Why not make death wait its turn?" Fusing theater, Korean folk-opera, free-jazz and musique-concrète, the results are a wild, scattered and heady brew.

Courtney Pine in conversation

Tonight, Soweto welcomes legendary British saxophonist and multi-instrumentalist, and core founder of the pioneering UK ensemble Jazz Warriors, Courtney Pine. Since emerging in the mid 1980s, Courtney has remained at the forefront of the UK jazz scene, and inspired generations of musicians to come.

In this conversation, Courtney and Soweto discuss everything from the 40th anniversary of his seminal debut album "Journey to the Urge Within", late night jams and reggae gigs, to the importance of mentorship and continuing the tradition, and much more.
